PROCEEDINGS AND DEBATES OF THE SIXTY-FOURTH CONGRESS, FIRST SESSION.

SENATE.

MONDAY, December 6, 1915.

The first Monday of December being the day prescribed by the Constitution of the United States for the annual meeting of Congress, the first session of the Sixty-fourth Congress commenced this day.

The Senate assembled in its Chamber at the Capitol.

The Vice President (THOMAS R. MARSHALL, of Indiana) being absent, the Secretary of the Senate (James M. Baker) called the Senate to order at 12 o'clock noon.

The Chaplain, Rev. Forrest J. Prettyman, D. D., offered the following prayer:

Almighty God, by Thy grace and favor we are permitted to meet again to open this session of our National Congress. We pause at the threshold of a great responsibility to make mention of Thy name and to seek once more Thy guidance and Thy grace. Thy name has made us great and Thy truth alone can establish us in greatness. Thy spirit can lead us in the use of all the powers that Thou hast put at our command and Thy favor alone can prosper us in all our enterprises. We seek that wisdom that cometh from on high. We seek the spirit of refinement in every heart. We ask Thy guidance and Thy blessing that every representative of every State of this great Union may have enthroned in his heart the ideals of a great Republic. We bless Thee for Thy continued favor and seek Thy guidance for the future days.

Let peace abound. May the message and ministry of this great land be that of brotherhood among mankind, and may the righteousness that Thou hast revealed to us in Thy word be established and justice made permanent in our country.

Hear us in this our prayer, and guide the affairs of this great Nation to the ultimate establishment of Thine own kingdom, for Thou art the Lord of Lords and the King of Kings. We make our prayer in Jesus' name. Amen.

ADMINISTRATION OF OATH TO SENATORS ELECT.

The SECRETARY. The Secretary informs the Senate that the Vice President is absent, and that the term of office as a Senator of the President pro tempore expired on March 3, last. What is the will of Senate?

Mr. KERN. Mr. Secretary, the Vice President being absent, and the office of President pro tempore of the Senate being vacant by reason of the expiration of the senatorial term of Senator JAMES P. CLARKE since being chosen to that office, I ask unanimous consent that Senator THOMAS S. MARTIN, the oldest in service of the majority Senators, be designated to temporarily preside over the Senate and to administer the oath of office to the Senators elect, immediately after which the Senate shall proceed to the election of a President pro tempore.

Mr. LODGE. Mr. Secretary, the rule, by the authority of which you have just called the Senate to order, provides that you shall perform the duties of the Chair, the first duty of the Chair being to swear in Senators elect. The unanimous consent which has been requested by the Senator from Indiana of course suspends that rule, as can be done by unanimous consent. With the limitation stated in the request for unanimous consent it seems to me there is no possible objection to it, and I hope it may be agreed to.

The SECRETARY. Is there objection to granting the unanimous consent requested by the junior Senator from Indiana? The Secretary hears none, and it is so ordered. The senior Senator from Virginia will please come forward and take the chair.

Mr. MARTIN of Virginia thereupon took the chair as Presiding Officer, and said:

The Secretary of the Senate has prepared a roll in alphabetical order of the Senators elect whose credentials have been received and placed on file and who are to be sworn in this morning. I will ask him to call the first four names upon that roll and request Senators elect, as their names are called, to present themselves at the desk to take the oath of office prescribed by law.

The Secretary called the names of Mr. BECKHAM, Mr. BRADY, Mr. BRANDEGEE, and Mr. BROUSSARD.

Mr. BORAH. Mr. President, I regret to announce the absence of my colleague [Mr. BRADY] on account of illness.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Secretary will call the next name on the roll.

The Secretary called the name of Mr. CHAMBERLAIN.

Mr. BECKHAM, Mr. BRANDEGEE, Mr. BROUSSARD, and Mr. CHAMBERLAIN were escorted to the Vice President's desk by Mr. JAMES, Mr. MCLEAN, Mr. RANSDELL, and Mr. LANE, respectively, and the oath was administered to them.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Secretary will call the next four names on the roll.

The Secretary called the names of Mr. CLARKE of Arkansas, Mr. CUMMINS, Mr. CURTIS, and Mr. DILLINGHAM.

As their names were called these Senators elect, escorted by Mr. ROBINSON, Mr. KENYON, Mr. THOMPSON, and Mr. PAGE, respectively, advanced to the Vice President's desk and the oath was administered to them.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Secretary will call the

The Secretary called the names of Mr. FLETCHER, Mr. GALLINGER, Mr. GORE, and Mr. GRONNA.

As their names were called these Senators elect, escorted by Mr. BRYAN, Mr. HOLLIS, Mr. OWEN, and Mr. MCCUMBER, respectively, advanced to the Vice President's desk and the oath was administered to them.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Secretary will call the names of the next four Senators on the roll.

The Secretary called the names of Mr. HARDING, Mr. HUSTING, Mr. JOHNSON of South Dakota, and Mr. JONES.

As their names were called these Senators elect, escorted by Mr. POMERENE, Mr. LA FOLLETTE, Mr. STERLING, and Mr. POINDEXTER, respectively, advanced to the Vice President's desk and the oath was administered to them.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Secretary will call the next four names on the roll.

The Secretary called the names of Mr. NEWLANDS, Mr. OVERMAN, Mr. PENROSE, and Mr. PHELAN.

As their names were called these Senators elect, escorted by Mr. PITTMAN, Mr. SIMMONS, Mr. OLIVER, and Mr. WORKS, respectively, advanced to the Vice President's desk and the oath was administered to them.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Secretary will call the next four names.

The Secretary called the names of Mr. SHERMAN, Mr. SHIVELY, Mr. SMITH of Arizona, and Mr. SMITH of Georgia.

As their names were called these Senators elect, escorted by Mr. LEWIS, Mr. KERN, Mr. ASHURST, and Mr. HARDWICK, respectively, advanced to the Vice President's desk and the oath was administered to them.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Secretary will call the next four names on the roll.

The Secretary called the names of Mr. SMITH of Maryland, Mr. SMITH of South Carolina, Mr. SMOOT, and Mr. STONE.

As their names were called these Senators elect, with the exception of Mr. SMITH of South Carolina, who was absent, escorted by Mr. LEE of Maryland, Mr. SUTHERLAND, and Mr. REED, respectively, advanced to the Vice President's desk and the oath was administered to them.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Secretary will call the remaining names on the roll.

The Secretary called the names of Mr. THOMAS, Mr. UNDERWOOD, and Mr. WADSWORTH.

As their names were called these Senators elect, escorted by Mr. SHAFROTH, Mr. BANKHEAD, and Mr. O'GORMAN, respectively, advanced to the Vice President's desk, and the oath was administered to them.

SENATORS PRESENT.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Secretary will now call the roll of the Senate.

The Secretary called the roll, and the following Senators answered to their names:

Ashurst	Gronna	Myers	Simmons
Bankhead	Harding	Nelson	Smith, Ariz.

ELECTION OF PRESIDENT PRO TEMPORE.

Mr. KERN. Mr. President, I offer the resolution which I send to the desk.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The resolution will be stated.

The resolution (S. Res. 1) was read and considered by unanimous consent, as follows:

Resolved, That Hon. JAMES P. CLARKE, a Senator from the State of Arkansas, be, and he hereby is, elected President of the Senate pro tempore, to hold office during the pleasure of the Senate and in accordance with the resolution of the Senate adopted on the 12th day of March, 1890, on the subject.

Mr. LODGE. Mr. President, I move to amend the resolution by substituting for the name of "Hon JAMES P. CLARKE, a Senator from the State of Arkansas," the name of "Hon. JACOB H. GALLINGER, a Senator from the State of New Hampshire."

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Senators, you have heard the resolution naming the Senator from Arkansas [Mr. CLARKE] for the position of President pro tempore, and you have heard the amendment offered by the Senator from Massachusetts substituting the name of the Senator from New Hampshire [Mr. GALLINGER] in place of the name of the Senator from Arkansas. The vote will first be taken on the amendment. The question is on the amendment offered by the Senator from Massachusetts to the resolution submitted by the Senator from Indiana.

The amendment was rejected.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question recurs on the resolution submitted by the Senator from Indiana.

The resolution was agreed to.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair appoints the Senator from Indiana [Mr. KERN] and the Senator from New Hampshire [Mr. GALLINGER] to escort the newly chosen President pro tempore to the chair.

Mr. CLARKE of Arkansas was escorted to the Vice President's desk by Mr. KERN and Mr. GALLINGER, and the oath of office having been administered to him by the Presiding Officer he took the chair as President pro tempore.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Senators, the office to which I have just been elected by favor of the Senate is one of great labor and responsibility, and in the discharge of the duties of which the incumbent is almost constantly surrounded by great embarrassments. It will be my aim to exert to the full measure of my available capacity the fixed purpose that has guided me in all the relations of life, and that is to be fair and impartial toward everyone with whom I must deal in an official way. I shall not regard the place as one where there are friends to reward or enemies to punish, because in the manner in which I discharge my duty here is wrapt up the fair fame and good name which it is my wish to leave behind me. I shall not succeed in discharging the duties of this office to my own acceptance unless I have the constant cooperation and help of every Senator, as I am all too sensibly aware that I shall also need the frequent exercise of a liberal forbearance on the part of all my associates here.

With my purpose candidly and firmly defined, there remains another obligation I must not do myself the injustice to omit, and that is to thank from the bottom of my heart those friends through whose efforts and partiality this honor has fallen to me under circumstances that render it an exceptionally appreciated expression of confidence. I can do no more in the future than I have done in the past, and that is attempt to do my duty as I see it, to the acceptance of the Senate and with the approval of my own conscience.

Mr. KERN. Mr. President, I send to the desk a resolution and ask for its adoption.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from Indiana submits a resolution, which the Secretary will read.

The resolution (S. Res. 2) was read, considered by unanimous consent, and agreed to, as follows:

Resolved, That the Secretary inform the President of the United States and the House of Representatives that the Senate has chosen Hon. JAMES P. CLARKE, a Senator from the State of Arkansas, President of the Senate pro tempore.

NOTIFICATION TO THE HOUSE.

Mr. KERN submitted the following resolution (S. Res. 3), which was read, considered by unanimous consent, and agreed to:

Resolved, That the Secretary inform the House of Representatives that a quorum of the Senate is assembled and that the Senate is ready to proceed to business.

NOTIFICATION TO THE PRESIDENT.

Mr. KERN submitted the following resolution (S. Res. 4), which was read and considered by unanimous consent:

Resolved, That a committee consisting of two Senators be appointed to join such committee as may be appointed by the House of Representatives to wait upon the President of the United States and inform him that a quorum of each House is assembled and that Congress is ready to receive any communication he may be pleased to make.

Mr. WALSH. Mr. President, I rise simply to state in this connection that there are some of us who take the position that the rules of the Senate in force at the time of the last adjournment are not in vigor and effect now. There seems, however, no reason why the Senate should not progress along the lines indicated by those rules, at least for the present. I content myself, however, with reserving the right at any time to insist that those rules are not effective until they shall have been formally adopted by the Senate.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The question is on agreeing to the resolution submitted by the Senator from Indiana.

The resolution was agreed to.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore appointed as the committee Mr. KERN and Mr. GALLINGER.

HOUR OF DAILY MEETING.

Mr. KERN submitted the following resolution (S. Res. 5), which was read and considered by unanimous consent:

Resolved, That the hour of daily meeting of the Senate be 12 o'clock meridian until otherwise ordered.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The question is on agreeing to the resolution.

Mr. WILLIAMS. Mr. President, I should like to add an amendment, that until otherwise ordered the hour of adjournment shall be 5 o'clock p. m.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Secretary will state the amendment to the Senate.

The SECRETARY. It is proposed to add, at the end of the resolution, the following words:

And that, until otherwise ordered, the hour of adjournment shall be 5 o'clock p. m.

Mr. GALLINGER. Mr. President, I will ask the Senator from Mississippi if it is his purpose to keep the Senate in session until 5 o'clock?

Mr. WILLIAMS. Oh, no; not necessarily.

Mr. GALLINGER. Would it not be better, then, to say "not later than 5 o'clock"?

Mr. WILLIAMS. The Senator is right about that. I think that would be a happier wording of the amendment. I ask that it be changed to read in that way.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Without objection, the Secretary will make the modification indicated. The question is on agreeing to the amendment submitted by the Senator from Mississippi as modified.

The amendment as modified was agreed to.

The resolution as amended was agreed to.

RECESS.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Unless there is some special order at this time the Chair will take up the regular order of business.

Mr. KERN. Mr. President, it has been suggested that the Senate take a recess until 2.30 o'clock, and I make that motion.

The motion was agreed to; and (at 12 o'clock and 40 minutes p. m.) the Senate took a recess until 2.30 o'clock p. m.

At the expiration of the recess the Senate reassembled.

MESSAGE FROM THE HOUSE.

Mr. South, the Chief Clerk of the House of Representatives, appeared and delivered the following message:

Mr. President, I am directed by the House of Representatives to inform the Senate that a quorum of the House of Representatives has assembled; that CHAMP CLARK, a Representative from the State of Missouri, has been elected Speaker; that South Trimble, a citizen of the State of Kentucky, has been elected Clerk; and that the House is ready for business.

Also, that a committee of three were appointed by the Speaker on the part of the House of Representatives to join with the committee on the part of the Senate to wait on the President of the United States and to notify him that a quorum of the two Houses has assembled and that Congress is ready to receive any communication that he may be pleased to make, and that Mr. KITCHIN, Mr. FITZGERALD, and Mr. MANN were appointed as a committee on the part of the House.

RECESS.

Mr. JAMES. Mr. President, the House of Representatives has organized and has appointed a committee to act in conjunction with the Senate committee to notify the President of the assembling of the two Houses of Congress. That committee will not be able to report for a while, and I therefore move that the Senate take a further recess until 4 o'clock.

The motion was agreed to, and (at 2 o'clock and 32 minutes p. m.) the Senate took a recess until 4 o'clock p. m., and at the expiration of the recess the Senate reassembled.

NOTIFICATION TO THE PRESIDENT.

Mr. KERN and Mr. GALLINGER, the committee on the part of the Senate appointed to wait on the President of the United States, appeared; and

Mr. KERN said: Mr. President, the committee appointed to act with a like committee on the part of the House of Representatives to wait upon the President of the United States to inform him of the organization of the two Houses of Congress and to receive information from him as to any communication he may desire to make have performed that duty and beg leave to report that the President has expressed his purpose, by the consent of both Houses, to communicate to them in joint session in the Hall of the House of Representatives on to-morrow at 12.30 o'clock post meridian.

MESSAGE FROM THE HOUSE.

A message from the House of Representatives, by J. C. South, its Chief Clerk, announced that the House had agreed to a concurrent resolution providing that the two Houses of Congress assemble in the Hall of the House of Representatives on Tuesday, the 7th day of December, 1915, at 12 o'clock and 30 minutes in the afternoon, for the purpose of receiving such communications as the President of the United States shall be pleased to make to them, in which it requested the concurrence of the Senate.

JOINT MEETING OF THE TWO HOUSES.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore laid before the Senate the following concurrent resolution (No. 1) of the House of Representatives, which was read:

Resolved by the House of Representatives (the Senate concurring), That the two Houses of Congress assemble in the Hall of the House of Representatives on Tuesday, the 7th day of December, 1915, at 12 o'clock and 30 minutes in the afternoon, for the purpose of receiving such communications as the President of the United States shall be pleased to make to them.

Mr. KERN. Mr. President, I ask for the adoption of the concurrent resolution.

The concurrent resolution was considered by unanimous consent and agreed to.

Mr. KERN. I move that the Senate adjourn.

The motion was agreed to, and (at 4 o'clock and 3 minutes p. m.) the Senate adjourned until to-morrow (Tuesday, December 7, 1915) at 12 o'clock meridian.

HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES.

MONDAY, December 6, 1915.

This day, in compliance with the provisions of the Constitution, the Members elect of the House of Representatives of the Sixty-fourth Congress assembled in their Hall, and at 12 o'clock noon were called to order by Mr. South Trimble, Clerk of the last House.

The CLERK. The House will be in order. The Chaplain of the last House will offer prayer.

Rev. Henry N. Couden, D. D., Chaplain of the House of Representatives of the Sixty-third Congress, offered the following prayer:

We stand before Thee, O God our heavenly Father, with bowed heads and open hearts, at this the first session of a new Congress, for we realize that without that inner light superinduced by Infinite wisdom, power, and purity its work will fail of the best. Hence we most earnestly invoke Thy favor upon all its Members, that the highest conceptions of statesmanship may follow in the wake of all the great problems, national and international, which shall present themselves for solution. Be wisdom and strength to the Speaker of this House, that with consummate skill, justice, and equity he may preside over its deliberations with characteristic zeal and lead on to the desired results. Be with all who are called to serve in State or Nation, that with unselfish devotion to duty they may fulfill the obligations resting upon them with fidelity and efficiency, that law and order may prevail throughout our borders. Strengthen the arm of our President, that he may guide the ship of state safely through the storms raging round us to a calm and peaceful harbor; and grant, O most merciful Father, that the war in which our sister nations are now engaged, with its destructive and devastating effects, may cease, that the higher and nobler instincts of humanity may obtain and all their differences be adjusted by the rational and peaceful methods of arbitration, that the world may enjoy the fruits of a peace which shall be forever and aye. And to Thee, O God our Father, we will ascribe all praise, in the name of Him who taught us to pray: Our Father which art in heaven, hallowed be Thy name. Thy kingdom come. Thy will be done on earth as it is in heaven. Give us this day our daily bread, and forgive us our debts as we forgive our debtors, and lead us not into temptation but deliver us from evil, for Thine is the kingdom and the power and the glory forever. Amen.

The CLERK. The first thing in order will be a call of the roll by States of Members elect of the Sixty-fourth Congress to ascertain if there be a quorum present. As the names of Members are called they will please answer "present."

The roll was called, showing the presence of the following Members and Delegates:

[1] Died. [2] Resigned.

ELECTION OF SPEAKER.

The CLERK. The next business in order is the election of a Speaker for the Sixty-fourth Congress. Nominations are now in order.

Mr. LLOYD. Mr. Clerk, I place in nomination Hon. CHAMP CLARK, of Missouri. [Applause.]

The CLERK. The name of CHAMP CLARK, of Missouri, has been placed before the House. Are there any further nominations?

Mr. GREENE of Massachusetts. Mr. Clerk, I am directed in behalf of the Republican Members to nominate for the office of Speaker the Hon. JAMES R. MANN, of Illinois. [Applause.]

The CLERK. The name of JAMES R. MANN, of Illinois, is placed before the House. Are there any further nominations? If not, the Clerk designates as tellers to record the vote Mr. HELGESEN of North Dakota, Mr. GREENE of Vermont, Mr. EAGLE of Texas, and Mr. DILL of Washington. The gentlemen named will please come to the Clerk's desk and take their positions as tellers.

The tellers took their places at the Clerk's desk.

The Clerk called the roll.

The following is the vote in detail:

ANSWERED "PRESENT"—5.

Elston	London	Martin	Nolan
Schall

The CLERK. The result of the ballot for Speaker as agreed to by the tellers is as follows: Whole number of ballots, 422. Mr. CHAMP CLARK, of Missouri, has received 222 votes and Mr. JAMES R. MANN, of Illinois, 195 votes. Answering "present," 5. CHAMP CLARK, having received a majority of all the votes cast, is duly elected Speaker of the House of Representatives of the Sixty-fourth Congress. [Loud applause.] I appoint as a committee to conduct the Speaker elect to the chair Mr. MANN, of Illinois, Mr. CONRY, of New York, and Mr. WHALEY, of South Carolina.

Mr. CLARK of Missouri, on appearing with the Members designated, was greeted with loud general applause, which was renewed when he took the chair.

Mr. MANN. Gentlemen of the House of Representatives, I have the honor, in behalf of this committee, to present to you your chosen Speaker, able and impartial, respected, admired, and beloved by all of us. [Applause.]

The SPEAKER. Gentlemen of the House of Representatives, I am profoundly grateful for this new evidence of your affection and esteem. I thank the Democrats for their votes, and I thank the members of the minority for the personal good will that has been extended to me on their part during all my days here. [Applause.]

I am particularly grateful to my brother MANN, the able, incisive, aggressive, vigilant leader of the minority, for the gracious and flattering manner in which he presented me. [Applause.] It is a great thing to be elected Speaker of this House once, and the honor increases in geometrical progression as the number of terms increase. [Applause.]

The time is almost in sight when, on account of the amazing growth of this country and the astounding multiplication of business in Congress, the Congress will practically sit in perpetual session. I hope that this Congress will go into history as a working Congress rather than a talking Congress [applause], and, practicing what I preach, without any more words, I am ready to take the oath of office. [Applause.] I ask the gentleman from Maryland, Mr. TALBOTT, to administer the oath.

The oath of office was administered to the Speaker by Mr. TALBOTT.

SWEARING IN OF MEMBERS.

The Speaker administered the oath of office to the Members and Delegates, the Members and Delegates presenting themselves as their names were called by States and Territories in the area in front of the Speaker's desk and taking the oath prescribed by law.

Mr. BUTLER and Mr. GRIEST qualified by affirmation.

ELECTION OF CLERK AND OTHER OFFICERS.

Mr. SAUNDERS. Mr. Speaker, I offer the following resolution, which I send to the Clerk's desk and ask to have read.

The Clerk read as follows:

House resolution 1.

Resolved, That Hon. South Trimble, of the State of Kentucky, be, and he is hereby, chosen Clerk of the House of Representatives;

That Robert B. Gordon, of the State of Ohio, be, and he is hereby, chosen Sergeant at Arms of the House of Representatives;

That Joseph J. Sinnott, of the State of Virginia, be, and he is hereby, chosen Doorkeeper of the House of Representatives;

That William M. Dunbar, of the State of Georgia, be, and he is hereby, chosen Postmaster of the House of Representatives; and

That Rev. Henry N. Couden, of the State of Michigan, be, and he is hereby, chosen Chaplain of the House of Representatives.

Mr. GREENE of Massachusetts. Mr. Speaker, by the direction of the Republican Members of the House, I offer the following resolution in the way of a substitute for the resolution just read, and send it to the Clerk's desk and ask to have it read.

The Clerk read as follows:

Resolved, That Clarence N. Price, of the State of Kansas, be, and he is hereby, chosen Clerk of the House of Representatives;

That C. W. Sheldon, of the State of Pennsylvania, be, and he is hereby, chosen Sergeant at Arms of the House of Representatives;

That Akin S. Tallman, of the State of New York, be, and he is hereby, chosen Doorkeeper of the House of Representatives;

That George W. Denny, of the State of Tennessee, be, and he is hereby, chosen Postmaster of the House of Representatives;

That Rev. Henry N. Couden, of the State of Michigan, be, and he is hereby, chosen Chaplain of the House of Representatives.

The SPEAKER. The question is on agreeing to the substitute offered by the gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. GREENE].

The question was taken, and the substitute was rejected.

The SPEAKER. The question now is on the original resolution.

Mr. MANN. Mr. Speaker, I ask for a division of the resolution offered by the gentleman from Virginia [Mr. SAUNDERS], so that the last paragraph may be voted on separately.

The SPEAKER. That is in respect to the portion of the resolution referring to the Chaplain?

Mr. MANN. Yes.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Illinois asks for a division of the question, so that that portion of the resolution referring to the election of the Chaplain may be voted on separately. The question is on agreeing to that paragraph of the resolution, that the Rev. Dr. Couden be chosen Chaplain.

The question was taken, and the paragraph was agreed to.

The SPEAKER. The question now recurs on agreeing to the other portion of the resolution.

The question was taken, and the resolution was agreed to.

The officers elected, mentioned in the resolution, appeared at the bar of the House and took the oath of office.

MINORITY EMPLOYEES.

Mr. MANN. Mr. Speaker, I offer the following resolution, which I send to the Clerk's desk and ask to have read.

The Clerk read as follows:

House resolution 17.

Resolved, That, until otherwise ordered, Joseph G. Rodgers be authorized to act as special employee of the House of Representatives and receive compensation at the rate of $1,800 per annum; that John H. Hollingsworth be authorized to act as special chief page and pair clerk and receive compensation at the rate of $1,800 per annum; that William Tyler Page be authorized to act as special messenger and assistant pair clerk and receive compensation at the rate of $1,800 per annum; that Bert W. Kennedy and Frank W. Collier be authorized to act as special messengers and receive compensation at the rate of $1,500 per annum; and that A. E. Chaffee be authorized to act as minority telephone messenger and receive compensation at the rate of $1,200 per annum; such employees to be at all times under the control of the Speaker of the House and subject to change at any time by the House as provided by law.

Mr. LLOYD rose.

The SPEAKER. For what purpose does the gentleman from Missouri rise?

Mr. MANN. Mr. Speaker, I will say to the gentleman from Missouri [Mr. LLOYD] that this is the identical resolution, word for word, which was agreed to two years ago.

Mr. LLOYD. Mr. Speaker, the purpose I had in rising was to ascertain that information.

The SPEAKER. The question is on agreeing to the resolution.

The resolution was agreed to.

NOTIFICATION OF THE PRESIDENT.

Mr. FITZGERALD. Mr. Speaker, I offer the following resolution, which I send to the desk and ask to have read.

The Clerk read as follows:

House resolution 2.

Resolved, That the Clerk be instructed to inform the President of the United States that the House of Representatives has elected CHAMP CLARK, a Representative from the State of Missouri, as Speaker, and South Trimble, a citizen of the State of Kentucky, as Clerk, of the House of Representatives of the Sixty-fourth Congress.

The SPEAKER. The question is on agreeing to the resolution.

The resolution was agreed to.

MESSAGE TO THE SENATE.

Mr. FLOOD. Mr. Speaker, I offer the following resolution, which I send to the desk and ask to have read.

The Clerk read as follows:

House resolution 3.

Resolved, That a message be sent to the Senate to inform that body that a quorum of the House of Representatives is assembled; that CHAMP CLARK, a Representative from the State of Missouri, has been elected Speaker; that South Trimble, a citizen of the State of Kentucky, has been elected Clerk; and that the House is ready for business.

MESSAGE FROM THE SENATE.

A message from the Senate, by Mr. Tulley, one of its clerks, announced that the Senate had passed the following resolutions:

Resolved, That the Secretary inform the President of the United States and the House of Representatives that the Senate has chosen Hon. JAMES P. CLARKE, a Senator from the State of Arkansas, President of the Senate pro tempore.

Also:

Resolved, That the Secretary inform the House of Representatives that a quorum of the Senate is assembled, and that the Senate is ready to proceed to business.

Also:

Resolved, That a committee consisting of two Senators be appointed, to join such committee as may be appointed by the House of Representatives, to wait upon the President of the United States and inform him that a quorum of each House is assembled, and that Congress is ready to receive any communication he may be pleased to make, and that in compliance with the foregoing the President pro tempore had appointed as said committee Mr. KERN and Mr. GALLINGER.

COMMITTEE TO WAIT UPON THE PRESIDENT.

Mr. KITCHIN. Mr. Speaker, I offer the following resolution, which I send to the Clerk's desk and ask to have read.

The Clerk read as follows:

House resolution 4.

Resolved, That a committee of three be appointed by the Speaker, on the part of the House of Representatives, to join with the committee on the part of the Senate, to wait on the President of the United States and notify him that a quorum of the two Houses is assembled and that Congress is ready to receive any communication that he may be pleased to make.

The SPEAKER. The question is on agreeing to the resolution.

The resolution was agreed to.

The SPEAKER announced the appointment of the following committee on the part of the House: Mr. KITCHIN, Mr. FITZGERALD, and Mr. MANN.

THE RULES.

Mr. HENRY. Mr. Speaker, I offer the following privileged resolution.

The SPEAKER. The Clerk will report it.

The Clerk read as follows:

House resolution 16.

Resolved, That the rules of the House of Representatives of the Sixty-third Congress be adopted as the rules of the House of Representatives of the Sixty-fourth Congress.

Mr. MANN. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. HENRY. I will yield for a question.

Mr. MANN. I desire at the proper time to offer a motion to commit the resolution. I suppose it might be advisable to have the proposition pending before the House and come to some understanding as to the time for discussion.

Mr. HENRY. Mr. Speaker, I do not object to having the resolution read, reserving all points of order against it.

Mr. MANN. Well, it has been decided by this Speaker that the motion is in order after the previous question is ordered, under the parliamentary practice as laid down in the practice of the House.

Mr. HENRY. Let the resolution be read, then.

Mr. MANN. I will ask to have the resolution read at this time for information.

The SPEAKER. The Clerk will read the resolution:

The Clerk read as follows:

Mr. MANN moves to recommit the resolution to a select committee to be appointed by the Speaker, to be composed of seven Members, with instructions to report back to the House forthwith a resolution in substance as follows:

"Resolved, That the rules of the House of Representatives of the Sixty-third Congress shall be the rules of the House of Representatives of the Sixty-fourth Congress until January 17, 1916; that said select committee be further instructed to consider said resolution committed to it and make a report to the House prior to January 17, 1916, with its recommendations for the adoption of permanent rules for the Sixty-fourth Congress."

Mr. HENRY. Mr. Speaker, do gentlemen on the other side wish to debate the resolution?

Mr. MANN. I think so; yes.

Mr. HENRY. Perhaps we might come to an agreement on that as to time. I want to move the previous question a little later on. How much time will be necessary, does the gentleman think?

Mr. MANN. Oh, I should think we should want three-quarters of an hour on this side.

Mr. HENRY. Make it half an hour on a side and I think we can agree without any difficulty; say half an hour to each side.

Mr. MANN. Of course the gentleman would have me at his mercy if he were disposed to be unfair, but I think he is disposed to be fair, and I think we would be satisfied with half an hour on a side.

Mr. HENRY. We think half an hour would be enough.

Mr. LINDBERGH. May I ask the gentleman a question?

Mr. HENRY. Yes; a question.

Mr. LINDBERGH. I want to offer an amendment to the resolution that was offered by the gentleman from Texas [Mr. HENRY], and I want to inquire whether there is objection to my offering that amendment now?

Mr. HENRY. Yes; I could not yield for that purpose, Mr. Speaker, I am sorry to say. I yield for a question.

Mr. LINDBERGH. Mr. Speaker, a parliamentary inquiry.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman will state it.

Mr. LINDBERGH. We are in the House, as I understand, without any rules, are we not?

The SPEAKER. Yes.

Mr. LINDBERGH. And no Congress prior to this could fix the rules for us, could it?

The SPEAKER. No.

Mr. LINDBERGH. And neither any legislation of Congress itself?

The SPEAKER. Each House fixes its own rules. The general parliamentary law is practically the rules of the House of Representatives.

Mr. LINDBERGH. The rules now would be liberally construed, would they not, for the purpose——

Mr. MANN. They would not be construed at all, because they are not in force.

The SPEAKER. The rules are liberally construed; they always are. [Laughter and applause.]

Mr. LINDBERGH. Very well. If our proceedings are liberally construed to-day, why would not an amendment be proper to offer at this time?

The SPEAKER. Because the gentleman from Texas [Mr. HENRY] has the floor.

Mr. LINDBERGH. And under a liberal construction it would not be permissible to do that?

The SPEAKER. Exactly.

Mr. MURRAY. May I suggest to the gentleman that general parliamentary law is made for the majority.

Mr. LINDBERGH. That appears to be the case, Mr. Speaker, and I will not offer it at this time.

Mr. HENRY. Mr. Speaker, I understand this is not to be taken out of my time.

The SPEAKER. Oh, no.

Mr. HENRY. Is it the agreement that there be 30 minutes on each side in which to discuss the resolution, and at the end of that time the previous question shall be considered as ordered?

The SPEAKER. That at the end of that time the previous question shall be considered as ordered; the gentleman from Texas [Mr. HENRY] will control one half of the time and the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. MANN] the other half.

Mr. LLOYD. Mr. Speaker——

The SPEAKER. For what purpose does the gentleman from Missouri arise?

Mr. LLOYD. Is it understood that the proposed amendment shall be considered?

The SPEAKER. What amendment?

Mr. MANN. That is a motion to commit.

The SPEAKER. It is simply pending for the purpose of debate. The Chair held two years ago, and will hold again, that a motion to commit can be put in this instance after the previous question is ordered. That is the only way to get a vote on it.

Mr. HENRY. I will make that request.

The SPEAKER. The Chair will give heed to it. The gentleman from Texas [Mr. HENRY] is recognized for 30 minutes.

Is there objection to the proposition that this be debated for an hour, 30 minutes to be controlled by the gentleman from Texas

[Mr. HENRY] and 30 minutes by the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. MANN], and that at the end of that time the previous question shall be considered as ordered?. [After a pause.] The Chair hears no objection. The gentleman from Texas is recognized for 30 minutes.

Mr. MANN. Mr. Speaker, I yield my 30 minutes to the gentleman from Wisconsin [Mr. LENROOT.]

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Wisconsin [Mr. LENROOT] will be recognized for 30 minutes.

Mr. HENRY. Mr. Speaker, my remarks will necessarily be brief. This resolution is plain and in the usual form in which it has been adopted at previous sessions. It simply means that the rules of the former Congress shall control this Congress until any amendments may be brought into the House and voted on. I will state to the House that if there are any amendments to the rules necessary, formal resolutions amending the rules may be introduced and may be referred to the Committee on Rules in the usual way, where they will be considered and whatever action is deemed necessary will be taken thereon. At the present time it seems that no amendments are necessary for this occasion. Therefore it is appropriate to adopt the rules of the former Congress, and that is the sole meaning of the resolution which has been offered.

Now, Mr. Speaker, I desire to reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. LENROOT. Mr. Speaker——

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Wisconsin [Mr. LENROOT] is recognized for 30 minutes.

Mr. LENROOT. Mr. Speaker, will the Chair kindly inform me when I have occupied 10 minutes?

If this motion to commit shall prevail, Mr. Speaker, it will result in simply this: That the rules of the Sixty-third Congress will be temporarily adopted until the 17th day of January; that in the meantime a special committee will consider proposed amendments to the rules, with instructions to report to the House its recommendations prior to that time. I am very sorry, indeed, that the gentleman from Texas [Mr. HENRY] has not seen fit to accept this proposition. The speech that he has just made to the House is exactly the same speech that he made two years ago, when he admitted the necessity of some material amendments to the rules, and when he solemnly assured the House that the Committee on Rules would consider those amendments and give the House an opportunity to vote upon them. The entire Sixty-third Congress went by, and a number of resolutions were proposed and referred to the committee. I myself had some of them. I was a member of the committee and tried repeatedly to get that committee to consider those resolutions, but they never did.

Now, I am only going to refer, Mr. Speaker, to one or two of the amendments to the rules of the Sixty-third Congress that ought to be considered, amendments that every Member of this House who was a Member of the Sixty-third Congress will admit ought to be considered by the House. One of them particularly is in reference to Calendar Wednesday. The gentleman from Texas knows, as every old Member of this House knows, that Calendar Wednesday has become a farce, and that one-sixth of the time of the House of Representatives is wasted because of the rule that exists with reference to Calendar Wednesday. The gentleman from Texas two years ago, at the opening of the Sixty-third Congress, admitted that, and he assured the House that the Committee on Rules would propose an amendment making Calendar Wednesday what its authors intended it should be, but, unhappily, framed the language so that it was not open to the construction that we all believed would be given it. I will quote the gentleman's language:

> For instance, it is our intention to undertake to revise the rule providing for Calendar Wednesday, to make it more practical, and see if we can not evolve a more workable plan under that rule.

I will say to the House that the Committee on Rules never gave a moment of consideration to that matter, and unless this motion to commit be adopted we have no reason to think that there will be any change in Calendar Wednesday from that condition which has existed during the past four years.

And I will remind you upon the other side that this is not a partisan question. This Sixty-fourth Congress, and especially this session of it, will have questions of greater importance than have been considered for many years. It will be very difficult, indeed, to secure consideration of bills of minor public importance unless the rule with reference to Calendar Wednesday be amended and revised. And, therefore, I say to every one of you that the day will come when you will regret that you did not use the opportunity which is before us now of temporarily adopting these rules and seeing to it that the House will have an opportunity to amend them.

Further, referring to the opening of the Sixty-third Congress, in the debate similar to that which we are now having, on the 7th day of April, 1913, being the beginning of the special session of that Congress, I asked the gentleman from Texas [Mr. HENRY] a question in the following language. I said:

> I desire to ask the gentleman if he does not think the House at a later time should have some opportunity of considering all of the rules if it desires to do so; and may I ask the gentleman whether he will assure the House that if this resolution is adopted the Committee on Rules will, at a later time, give the House the opportunity of considering amendments to each and all of the rules?

To which the gentleman from Texas [Mr. HENRY] replied:

> Mr. Speaker, the gentleman from Texas will say this, that if Members desire to introduce amendents to every rule of this House, and those amendments are referred to the Committee on Rules, they will there be carefully and deliberately considered, with an abundance of time for each Member to present his views if he wishes to appear, and then the Committee on Rules will present a report to this House for its action, to adopt it if it wishes to do so, or to vote it down if it desires to do so.

Could assurance, Mr. Speaker, be stronger than that assurance given by the chairman of the Committee on Rules of the Sixty-third Congress? And yet, as I have said, that committee never considered the amendment of a single rule during the entire two years, and the House never had an opportunity to vote upon them. Calendar Wednesday remained to be frittered away during the Sixty-third Congress as it had in the previous session, and unless this motion to commit now prevails, there is no reason to believe that Calendar Wednesday will not be again frittered away during this Congress as it has been in the past.

Now, Mr. Speaker, why should not this motion to commit prevail? It adopts the rules of the House just exactly as the gentleman from Texas [Mr. HENRY] wants them adopted until January 17, making them temporary only instead of permanent. In the meantime a special committee will be appointed by the Speaker himself, presumably with the gentleman from Texas at the head, with instructions—and those instructions, if given in this form, surely will be obeyed—with instructions to report to this House prior to January 17 such amendments to the rules as in their judgment the rules ought to have. That is all that there is in the proposition, and it ought to receive the unanimous vote of every Member of this House, regardless of party.

I reserve the balance of my time. [Applause.]

The SPEAKER. The gentleman has used seven minutes.

Mr. HENRY. Mr. Speaker, I do not care to use any of my time now. I will ask the gentleman from Wisconsin to use more of his time. The gentleman from New York [Mr FITZGERALD] requested time, but I do not see him here now.

Mr. LENROOT. Mr. Speaker, I yield five minutes to the gentleman from Minnesota [Mr. LINDBERGH].

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Minnesota [Mr. LINDBERGH] is recognized for five minutes.

Mr. LINDBERGH. Mr. Speaker, I have heard two great Speakers of the House say that the House is master of its own rules. It is also held that previous Congresses can not make the rules of a succeeding Congress; that the rules of a previous Congress can not control a subsequent Congress.

Now, then, we see the fallacy to-day of the statement that the House controls its own rules, because we are governed by such technical rules, parliamentary rules, the "general parliamentary law," so to speak, that we can not get before the House the consideration of new and better rules in any way that is intelligible to the membership. We have here a motion to adopt the old rules in toto, and then we have recognized, by an unwritten law, a person who is a leader of the minority—and I am not complaining of that fact—to offer a substitute or to commit a motion to a select committee to recommend amendment to the rules, and no one else is permitted to offer anything in the shape of amendments. That is what I object to, for it places the general membership at a disadvantage. We have nothing to vote on except to accept what has been offered by one Member or a substitute by another. Everyone else, as suggested by the Speaker, is out of order.

Now, under the ordinary rules of procedure a motion may be amended and the amendment may be amended, and to-day we ought to be here under liberal rules for the purpose of determining what the rules shall be for the governing of this Congress; and yet, by precedents, we are prevented from doing that very thing. You accomplish by indirection what you say can not be accomplished by direct legislation of a previous Congress nor by the rules of a previous House. No greater absurdity could present itself than the spectacle here to-day. It is the old gag again.

Mr. GARRETT. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield for a question?

The SPEAKER. Does the gentleman yield?

Mr. LINDBERGH. I can not yield because of the lack of time. I have an amendment which I now offer, and I would like to have it read in my time.

The SPEAKER. The Clerk will read it.

The Clerk read as follows:

Mr. LINDBERGH moves to amend by adding to the other amendments proposed the following:

"All bills or resolutions to amend the rules of the House in any manner relating to the general government of the House or of any of its committees, or for a consideration of any resolution or bill introduced in the House or that has passed the Senate, and the purpose of such resolutions and bills is to secure the action of the House upon any matters or subjects of general public interest—that is, when the object is to secure general legislation—the same shall automatically be referred to the Committee on Rules and be reported back to the House by the said committee within 14 calendar days, and if not so reported within the time named shall automatically revert back to the House and be immediately entered upon the calendar of the House. That after the same has been on the calendar 3 days the author of the bill or resolution, or in case he fails to, or if it is a bill or resolution that has passed the Senate, then any Member may move the consideration of the same, which motion shall fix the time for its consideration. Such motion shall not be debatable and shall be privileged and take precedence over all other motions."

Mr. LINDBERGH. This amendment would give the House power, or, in other words, would make it master of itself.

Three other amendments I should offer, but they would be ruled out, as suggested, by the Speaker. This day we begin the proceedings of the new Congress gagged from the very start.

Mr. Speaker, I yield back the balance of my time.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman yields back one minute.

Mr. LENROOT. Will the gentleman from Texas use some of his time?

Mr. HENRY. The gentleman from New York [Mr. FITZGERALD] has not come in, and if he does not care for the time, there will be only one other speech on this side, unless somebody opposed to the rules desires time on this side. I ask the gentleman from Wisconsin to use his time.

Mr. LENROOT. Mr. Speaker, I yield to the gentleman from Wisconsin [Mr. STAFFORD] five minutes.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Wisconsin [Mr. STAFFORD] is recognized for five minutes.

Mr. STAFFORD. Mr. Speaker, if the resolution offered by my colleague [Mr. LENROOT] is voted down and the rules of the last Congress are adopted by this body, it goes without saying that it is a certainty that these rules will be in existence when the Sixty-fourth Congress adjourns without any further amendment than what was effected in the last Congress.

Every person who has served in a prior Congress, in the last Congress in particular, knows that the rules of the Sixty-third Congress are not the last word in order to have proper consideration of legislation brought before this body. The Speaker has said that he would like to have this prove to be a working Congress, and in order to have this a working Congress you are called upon to amend the rules, if you are mindful at all of the grave abuse of Calendar Wednesday, so as to bring before the House the legislation that is reported from the respective committees for a vote. You are obliged to amend that rule.

This is a very reasonable resolution. The Speaker appoints a select committee. They are virtually called upon to go over these rules. I know that in private conversation with members of the committee they acknowledge that these rules are not the last word and that there should be some changes in them. If you intend to stand by the Speaker in his presaging utterance that this should be a working Congress rather than a talking Congress, you will adopt this reasonable provision, which will allow the Speaker to appoint a select committee of seven, who will bring into this House a revision of some of these rules which are so much in need of revision.

If you do not adopt it, then by your vote—because this is your only chance and opportunity to vote on a revision of the rules—you indorse every procedure of the last Congress. You indorse the action of the Committee on Printing in bringing in a large codification bill that will take up months and months of Calendar Wednesdays. You indorse the action of the Committee on Revision of the Laws in bringing in another codification bill to act as a buffer against the consideration of other legislation; and you will go home to your districts with an apology that you were not able to consider all of this important legislation that the committees have recommended, because the rules did not permit you to bring it up for consideration.

Under our method of legislation we naturally send the bills and resolutions to the committees for their consideration, to report back to the House what they believe is worthy of the consideration of the House; but when they do bring back those bills there should be some machinery other than unanimous consent and other than suspension of the rules whereby those bills may be considered, and the only avenue for the consideration of those bills is that of Calendar Wednesday.

Calendar Wednesday is acknowledged by all to have been abused. A few words, a little change, may correct it. Are you in favor of the old, obsolete methods that were in force in the last Congress? By your votes to-day you will determine whether you believe in frittering away Calendar Wednesday or whether you believe in having an up-to-date revision of the rules, whereby this House can legislate on the bills reported from the committees.

Mr. HENRY. Is this the last speech on that side?

Mr. LENROOT. I yield to the gentleman from Wisconsin, my colleague [Mr. COOPER].

Mr. COOPER of Wisconsin. Mr. Speaker, here is what is included in the proposition which the gentleman from Texas [Mr. HENRY] makes: The scores of new Members of this House who never have had any legislative experience under the rules of the last House are nevertheless asked to vote to adopt those rules for the entire term of the present Congress, and thus to accept something about which, as a matter of personal experience, they are totally uninformed. Now, the proposition of the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. MANN] and of my colleague from Wisconsin [Mr. LENROOT] is to adopt the old rules temporarily. The House can do business under them until the 17th of January, at which time it will be within the power of the Democratic majority, in its discretion, to override any or all of the amendments which may be proposed by the select committee to be appointed by our Democratic Speaker. Your Democratic majority can then, if it so desire, defeat all proposed amendments and adopt the rules of the last House in toto. But meanwhile the new Members will have had an opportunity to become acquainted by actual experience with the workings of those rules. This would be perfectly fair to both sides of the aisle. In my judgment not a rational argument can be offered against that proposition. No Representative should be put under the gag as soon as he comes here, have the party whip applied to him, and be compelled to vote upon a question concerning which he must of necessity be absolutely ignorant. Many have never read the rules; scores on both sides have never had a minute's experience under them; and yet they are asked to vote to adopt them all until the 4th of March, 1917. I repeat that the proposition of the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. MANN] and of my colleague [Mr. LENROOT] is to adopt the rules temporarily until the 17th of January, to let all Members have experience under them, and then to vote on the question of adopting them with or without amendment.

Mr. LENROOT. I yield five minutes to the gentleman from Kansas [Mr. CAMPBELL].

Mr. CAMPBELL. Mr. Speaker, this House is entering upon the consideration of more grave questions than any House of recent years. No Congress in a quarter of a century has considered more questions than this Congress will be called upon to take into consideration. The Speaker has well said that this should be a working Congress. We ought to get through with our business by the middle of summer. If the motion of the gentleman from Texas [Mr. HENRY] prevails, we begin by binding ourselves to waste one-sixth of our time. Calendar Wednesday is a waste of time. The Members of this House on both sides, who have been interested in the procedure and who have watched what has been going on, know that within the past four years but little, if anything, has been done on Calendar Wednesday. One day therefore of each week is entirely wasted.

It was intended that Calendar Wednesday should be one of the most important legislative days of the Congress. That was the hope of those who proposed that calendar day. It was the result of one of the greatest reforms that the rules of the House have had within recent years. Yet everybody now concedes that it has only resulted in frittering away one day of the time of the House every week.

Then, in addition to that, a great campaign was on against the committees of the House, against the domination of the Speaker in the appointment of committees, in fixing up committees that would smother bills. A scheme was devised to thwart that purpose of any Speaker or of any committee, and a rule was provided that there should be a calendar upon which bills and resolutions could be placed, and that upon occasions that were opportune, occurring regularly, Members should have an opportunity to move to discharge any committee from further consideration of a bill and to consider it in the House. There was not one bill or resolution considered on that calendar in the Sixty-third Congress for the reason that the rule is not workable.

These two rules especially should be considered by a committee of this House, with a view to expediting its business, without any partisanship, without any view of inaugurating new reforms, but with a view of expediting the business of the House; and I appeal to the Members on both sides, and especially to the new Members of the House on the Democratic side, and many Members on that side who were brought into this House on a wave of protest against the inefficiency of other rules, under which the business of the House, it was claimed, was not expedited as they and the country thought it should be. To-day we are in a worse condition, so far as the work of the House is concerned, than we have ever been since I have been a Member.

Mr. HENRY. Mr. Speaker, it is now evident that this House is to be regaled——

Mr. LENROOT. Will the gentleman yield? We have not yet used all of our time.

Mr. HENRY. I shall be glad to have the gentleman use all of his time.

The SPEAKER. The Chair will inquire of the gentleman from Wisconsin [Mr. LENROOT] if he wants to use the remaining seven minutes.

Mr. LENROOT. I prefer, Mr. Speaker, that the gentleman from Texas should use some of his time now.

Mr. HENRY. Mr. Speaker, I am going to close the discussion.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Texas is to have but one speech?

Mr. HENRY. That is all.

Mr. LENROOT. Then, Mr. Speaker, I will use some time. Mr. Speaker, I regret exceedingly that neither the gentleman from Texas nor any of his colleagues have seen fit to debate this question. I am not greatly surprised that the gentleman from Texas reserves what he has to say for a speech when he can not be replied to, but I do submit that in all fairness on a question of this importance the House is entitled to know the views of the gentleman from Texas and others and the position that they take upon this question where there can be some little debate with reference to it. I am inclined to think, Mr. Speaker, that the reason the gentleman from Texas reserves what he has to say for a concluding speech, when he can not be replied to, is because he is not willing to meet this question in fair and open debate. The gentleman from Texas knows that the promise that he made to this House a few moments ago is the same promise that the same gentleman made to this House in the opening of the Sixty-third Congress, a promise never fulfilled by the gentleman from Texas or the Committee on Rules.

I would have been glad, Mr. Speaker, of an opportunity to reply to anything which the gentleman might say as a reason why this motion should not be adopted temporarily, adopting the old rules, so that the business of the House will not be impeded or obstructed in the slightest degree. What objection can the gentleman have to the appointment of a special committee, with himself at the head of it, without any instructions to that committee other than that they shall take up this question and consider the rules of the Sixty-third Congress and make recommendations as to what, if any, amendment ought to be made to them, and bring a report to this House at such a time when the new Members of this House especially will have had some opportunity to familiarize themselves with the rules and the necessity for amendment of them.

I submit that it would have been fairer for him and gentlemen on that side who take the position, to have some real debate rather than to reserve all that they have to say to one speech to which there can be no reply.

I wish to say that this is not a partisan matter and ought not to be considered as such. Democrats on that side ought to vote just as freely for it as the Republicans on this side. It is merely a question of whether we shall without any partisanship do what we can to make the Sixty-fourth Congress an effectual and working Congress, as the Speaker said, rather than a talking one—one that will produce results in the fairest and best manner possible.

I still indulge the hope that the Members upon that side of the aisle will not think that this is a question of partisanship, that they must blindly follow the gentleman from Texas [Mr. HENRY]; but will consider this proposition on its merits, which is simply to adopt the rules temporarily and have them considered by a committee controlled by you on the other side. If you will do that instead of blindly following the lead of the gentleman from Texas, then the motion made upon this side of the House will be adopted by an overwhelming majority, and I should regret exceedingly to see the first business of this Congress made a matter of partisanship, a matter of blindly following the leader of that side of the House without regard to the merits of the question. A question as important as this question is ought to be debated without any spirit of partisanship, and if it is not, I am afraid that the work of this Congress will not be very greatly in the public interest. Begin now and use your own judgment, vote your own convictions, and if we do that on both sides of this aisle, in the days to come we will make a record that every man on either side of the aisle will be proud of.

Mr. BORLAND. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. LENROOT. Yes.

Mr. BORLAND. The gentleman has spoken earnestly about this being a working Congress. Is not the gentleman prepared to admit that the Sixty-third Congress was a working Congress, and that it passed more constructive legislation, sometimes with the help of the gentleman from Wisconsin, than any other Congress in the last quarter of a century?

Mr. LENROOT. I am glad to answer the question of the gentleman. The Sixty-third Congress did consider and enact certain bills of great national importance. Whether those bills as enacted were wise or not, it is not the time or the place now to discuss. The gentleman knows as well as I know and as every old Member of the House knows that there were a large number of bills reported of great public importance, but failed of consideration simply because of the failure to amend the rules in the Sixty-third Congress, as the gentleman from Texas himself promised would be done and which promise was not fulfilled. [Applause.]

Mr. HENRY. Mr. Speaker, it is now evident that this House is to be regaled with a good deal of talk of the sort we have just heard. An innocent bystander might think there was something mysterious in what the gentlemen have been saying. Take the gentleman from Wisconsin, Mr. COOPER. He has been a Member of the House for more than 20 years, and on several occasions I have felt that I should make a few friendly suggestions to him, but I have refrained from doing so heretofore. However, to-day I shall take advantage of this occasion to make a few friendly remarks on his behalf. The gentleman says that the new Members are ignorant and know nothing of the rules of this House, and do not know what is going on here to-day. Mr. Speaker, they have been drawing their salaries since the 4th of last March, and I want to advise the gentleman from Wisconsin that he is entirely mistaken and that the new Members are able and that they are informed about the rules and other legislative matters.

Mr. COOPER of Wisconsin. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. HENRY. Yes.

Mr. COOPER of Wisconsin. Does the gentleman know that his peculiar accent can not be put into the RECORD? I did not say—and nobody knows it better than the solemn-looking gentleman from Texas [Mr. HENRY]—that the new Members are ignorant, and know nothing of the rules. I did not say that, and the gentleman knows it. I said that they are ignorant concerning the actual workings of the rules.

Mr. HENRY. Oh, Mr. Speaker, I yielded to the gentleman for a question——

Mr. COOPER of Wisconsin. Mr. Speaker, punctuation means a lot in the speeches of the gentleman from Texas—much more than the substance does. [Laughter.]

Mr. HENRY. Mr. Speaker, I want to say this in all friendliness to the gentleman from Wisconsin, that I would never be willing to have my accent go into the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD if it could not be accompanied with a photograph of the gentleman from Wisconsin. [Laughter.] Mr. Speaker, I know that what will amaze the new Members is the fact that an old Member who has served for more than 20 years will waste as much energy as the gentleman from Wisconsin has to-day without making a single suggestion about an amendment of the rules. If I may say it politely, he has ranted considerably, but he has not offered a single suggestion about an amendment of the rules, and he has been here for 24 years, I believe.

Mr. COOPER of Wisconsin. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman permit an interruption?

The SPEAKER. Does the gentleman yield?

Mr. HENRY. Just one moment. If the gentleman can serve for 24 years and can not think of a single amendment which ought to be made to the rules, he has no right to cast any aspersion upon the new Members who have come here to-day. I now yield to the gentleman from Wisconsin.

Mr. COOPER of Wisconsin. Mr. Speaker, the rules do not permit one Member sometimes to say exactly what he thinks about another, and, therefore, I shall refrain from discussing the gentleman from Texas. [Laughter.] When he says I ranted here I think he forgets that I had only two minutes, and that I simply said that the gentleman was asking the new Members upon each side of the aisle to vote upon a proposition concerning which they had no practical experience—namely, the workings of the rules; and that the proposition of my friend from Wisconsin [Mr. LENROOT] was merely to adopt these rules until the middle of January, by which time the new Members would have a knowledge of their practical workings; that a committee was to be appointed——

Mr. HENRY. Oh, what is the question?

Mr. COOPER of Wisconsin. A committee was to be appointed by the Speaker, and that when that committee should submit its report it would then be within the power of the gentleman from Texas——

Mr. HENRY. Mr. Speaker, I yielded for a question. What is the question?

Mr. COOPER of Wisconsin. And the other gentlemen on that side of the aisle to adopt or reject it——

Mr. HENRY. Ask the question——

Mr. COOPER of Wisconsin. Is the gentleman aware of the fact that he misstated what I said? [Laughter.]

Mr. HENRY. Mr. Speaker, I am not aware of the fact that I misstated what the gentleman said. When I said that the gentleman from Wisconsin ranted, I meant only that if there is any Member on either side of this House who can always start the fireworks in less than two minutes, it is the gentleman from Wisconsin. [Laughter.] He said what he always says in his speeches, and he said it about as well as he usually does. I deplore the fact—and I hope the gentleman's constituents will not consider this seriously—that after serving here——

Mr. COOPER of Wisconsin. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman permit an interruption?

Mr. HENRY. Not until I finish this sentence. No; I can not yield. I am trying to give light to the gentleman.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Texas declines to yield.

Mr. COOPER of Wisconsin. Mr. Speaker, a parliamentary inquiry.

Mr. HENRY. Oh, Mr. Speaker, I am trying to enlighten the gentleman——

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Wisconsin can not take the gentleman from Texas off his feet by a parliamentary inquiry.

Mr. HENRY. I am trying to come to the gentleman's rescue and save him from being mobbed by the new Members. [Laughter.]

Mr. Speaker, the gentleman should have offered some suggestions about amendments to the rules. This is talk with which all Members are familiar. Take the other gentleman from Wisconsin [Mr. LENROOT]—and this seems to be a Wisconsin house party that we have here to-day on the rules question—the other gentleman from Wisconsin [Mr. LENROOT] said that I had promised that the Rules Committee would bring in certain amendments to the rules. Let us see about that. I want to say to this House and to the country to-day that the gentleman from Wisconsin [Mr. LENROOT] and the gentleman from Kansas [Mr. CAMPBELL], who are to become members of the next Committee on Rules, I believe, have used more words and energy on this floor than they have ever used in the Committee on Rules during the last Congress in order to bring about an amendment of the rules.

Mr. LENROOT. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield for a question?

Mr. HENRY. Yes.

Mr. LENROOT. I want to ask the gentleman if it is not true that both myself and my colleague the gentleman from Kansas [Mr. CAMPBELL] repeatedly asked the gentlemen who were in the majority on the Committee on Rules to consider this very question, and have they not repeatedly refused to do so, so that we could not have wasted any time?

Mr. HENRY. I do not remember anything of that sort. [Laughter.] Here are the facts about the case. If the gentleman had proposed an amendment that was reasonable, the Committee on Rules would have taken it up and considered it.

Mr. LENROOT. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. HENRY. Yes; for a question.

Mr. LENROOT. Does not the gentleman know that I had pending for the entire two years a proposed amendment with reference to this very Calendar Wednesday rule, and asked for its consideration, and did not get it?

Mr. HENRY. If the gentleman had been as noisy in the Rules Committee as he is to-day before the eyes of the country, he would have been able to present his resolution.

Now, Mr. Speaker, what are the facts? The gentleman speaks about amending the rules, about amending the rule pertaining to Calendar Wednesday. We want to make it stricter. We do not want to liberalize that rule. It has been a splendid rule for the membership of this House. Numerous bills have been passed through Congress under the provisions of that rule, and the gentleman knows it has been a useful rule. These gentlemen will have the right, as they have had heretofore, to press their amendments if they wish to do so. Why, the gentleman suavely says that the new Members on this side of the House freely ought to vote for the proposition of the gentleman from Wisconsin and of the gentleman from Illinois; ought to freely vote for a proposition coming from that side of the House! Yes; the Democrats are just about as free to vote for your propositions when you offer them on that side of the House as you vote for our propositions when we offer them on this side. Why, Mr. Speaker, if it is necessary to amend these rules in any respect, the way is plain and easy. Let the gentlemen drop their resolutions in the basket and let them be referred to the Committee on Rules; and if there is any necessity, if there is any reason for amending the rules, the Rules Committee will bring in an amendment, as it has done on many occasions. Why, this is all political talk here to-day. Why did not the gentleman from Kansas, who served on the Committee on Rules for years and has been a Member of this House for a number of years, propose some amendment while he was railing against this procedure? He spoke for five minutes or more, and yet not a single defect in the rules did he deign to point out to this House. He was dealing in glittering generalities, but made no complaint of the rules of the House of Representatives——

Mr. CAMPBELL. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. HENRY. And the gentleman is not pressing it in any logical manner——

The SPEAKER. Does the gentleman yield?

Mr. HENRY. For a question.

Mr. CAMPBELL. I referred specifically to the fact that Calendar Wednesday was now a day wasted and that the Calendar for the Discharge of Committees was inoperative, and that both of those rules should be corrected. Those are important rules and should be corrected.

Mr. HENRY. Of course in a general way the gentleman says that, but what the gentleman from Kansas wants to do—and those who think as he does—is to go back to the old days of Cannonism in the House of Representatives. [Laughter and applause on the Democratic side.]

Mr. ROBERTS of Nevada. Mr. Speaker——

Mr. HENRY. That is what they wish, and we do not intend to do that. We are going to give you these liberal Democratic rules.

Mr. KITCHIN. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. HENRY. They have worked well, and under this Democratic administration the country has been given the greatest constructive laws that it has known in 40 years, and the gentleman knows it.

REPORT OF COMMITTEE TO WAIT UPON THE PRESIDENT.

Mr. KITCHIN. Will the gentleman yield?

Mr. HENRY. I yield to the gentleman from North Carolina.

Mr. KITCHIN. Mr. Speaker, your committee appointed to wait on the President and notify him of the organization of the House of Representatives and ask if he had any message to deliver, have, in conjunction with a like committee on the part of the Senate, performed that duty. The President asked us to report that he will be pleased to deliver in person his message to-morrow at 12.30 to a joint session of the two Houses. I offer the following resolution and ask for its immediate adoption.

The SPEAKER. The Clerk will report the resolution.

The Clerk read as follows:

House concurrent resolution 1.

Resolved by the House of Representatives (the Senate concurring), That the two Houses of Congress assemble in the Hall of the House of Representatives on Tuesday the 7th day of December, 1915, at 12 o'clock and 30 minutes in the afternoon, for the purpose of receiving such communications as the President of the United States shall be pleased to make to them.

The question was taken, and the resolution was agreed to.

THE RULES.

Mr. ROBERTS of Nevada. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. HENRY. I will yield to the gentleman for a question.

Mr. ROBERTS of Nevada. I know the gentleman from Texas is perfectly fair and is always willing to listen to anyone who has anything to say with reference to these rules or as to what he may have said on the floor of this House when they were first adopted. Will the gentleman stand by rule 21 as adopted by the Sixty-second Congress and for what he said concerning it at that time?

Mr. HENRY. What was that?

Mr. ROBERTS of Nevada. I will read what was stated.

Mr. HENRY. Of course I am always glad to hear read what I have said.

Mr. ROBERTS of Nevada. You said:

To Rule XXI we have added what is known as the retrenchment amendment. Some call it the Holman amendment. Mr. Speaker, let me say in passing that if there is any one subject needing attention in this country it is the one appropriating the people's money. Extravagance with the money of the people in the Treasury of the United States is eating into the very vitals of this Republic. Hence we have so amended this rule as to make it possible to cut down appropriations and save millions of public money every year.

Now, if the gentleman will permit, I will ask him a question.

Mr. HENRY. All right; ask your question.

Mr. ROBERTS of Nevada. Having made that assertion and having adopted that rule, and the result of the rule having been that we have during the last session squandered more money of the people than ever before, does it not stand to reason that that rule should be amended? [Laughter.]

Mr. HENRY. Now, Mr. Speaker, I want to say to the House that that was a good rule and that was a good speech [laughter], but the trouble with it is that the gentleman from Nevada does not know the difference between a rule and an appropriation bill. Now, I do not mean to reflect on the gentleman——

Mr. COOPER of Wisconsin. Oh, not at all; not at all. [Laughter.]

Mr. HENRY. And nobody would consider that I was reflecting on the gentleman. [Laughter.]

Now, Mr. Speaker, these gentlemen know that they can present their rules, and they can be referred in the proper way. Let them present them, and they will be considered. Now, sometimes they do not consider them the way we want them considered, but all these questions have been considered in the proper and in the usual way.

Mr. LENROOT. Will the gentleman yield for a question?

Mr. HENRY. I will yield.

Mr. LENROOT. I am sure the gentleman wants to be accurate. Does the gentleman mean to state that any proposed amendments to the rules of the Sixty-third Congress were ever considered by the Committee on Rules of that Congress?

Mr. HENRY. Oh, yes; I think there were.

Mr. LENROOT. I deny that.

Mr. HENRY. I do not say that they were considered in any formal session. [Laughter.]

Now, Mr. Speaker, if there had been an amendment proposed that merited consideration in the full committee it would have been duly considered, but my distinct recollection is that there was not a single one offered that was entitled to serious consideration at the hands of the Rules Committee. [Applause on the Democratic side.]

Mr. LENROOT. Will the gentleman yield further?

Mr. HENRY. For one more question.

Mr. LENROOT. Did not the gentleman state on the floor of the House most two years ago that the rule with reference to Calendar Wednesday should be considered and amended, and is it not true that the committee never even considered an amendment to that rule?

Mr. HENRY. But, if a sensible amendment had been offered, and if you had mustered the votes to control the Rules Committee, of course, it would have done so.

Now, Mr. Speaker, that is all there is to this question. These are the very best rules this House has ever operated under. Of course, these gentlemen do not wish to abide by them. They wish to get back to the old system. That is what hurts them. But they are not going back to the old system under the Democratic régime.

Now, I ask for the previous question.

The SPEAKER. It is agreed that the previous question shall be considered as ordered.

Mr. MANN. Then, all there is to do is to commit the resolution under the motion which I send to the Clerk's desk.

The SPEAKER. The Clerk will read the motion to commit.

The Clerk read as follows:

Mr. MANN moves to commit the resolution to a select committee, to be appointed by the Speaker, to be composed of seven members, with instructions to report back to the House forthwith a resolution in substance as follows:

Resolved, That the rules of the House of Representatives of the Sixty-third Congress shall be the rules of the House of Representatives of the Sixty-fourth Congress until January 17, 1916.

That said select committee be further instructed to consider said resolution committed to it and make report to the House prior to January 17, 1916, with its recommendations for the adoption of permanent rules for the Sixty-fourth Congress.

Mr. HENRY. Mr. Speaker, I move the previous question on that resolution.

The previous question was ordered.

The SPEAKER. The question is on the motion of the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. MANN] to commit the motion of the gentleman from Texas [Mr. HENRY], and everything that goes with it, to a special committee of seven members to be appointed by the Speaker.

Mr. MANN. And on that, Mr. Speaker, I ask for the yeas and nays.

The yeas and nays were ordered.

The question was taken; and there were—yeas 194, nays 209, not voting 29, as follows.

So the motion of Mr. MANN to commit was rejected.

The Clerk announced the following pairs:

Until further notice:

Mr. WALKER with Mr. MONDELL.

Mr. TALBOTT with Mr. GUERNSEY.

Mr. SHACKLEFORD with Mr. BEALES.

The result of the vote was announced as above recorded.

Mr. MANN. Now, Mr. Speaker, while the previous question is offered and agreed to upon the resolution of the gentleman from Texas [Mr. HENRY], there was an understanding that the Committee on Ways and Means would be increased by one member, who goes to the minority, and that the Committee on Labor would be increased by one member; and I hope the gentleman from Texas will ask unanimous consent to amend the motion so as to make those increases.

Mr. HENRY. Mr. Speaker, I have no objection to that; and in that respect I ask unanimous consent that the Committee on Ways and Means membership be increased one member, and the Committee on Labor one member.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Texas asks unanimous consent that the rules of the Sixty-third Congress be modified to such an extent as to assign one additional member to the Committee on Ways and Means and one to the Committee on Labor. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

The SPEAKER. The question is on agreeing to the resolution offered by the gentleman from Texas [Mr. HENRY].

The resolution was agreed to.

On motion of Mr. HENRY, a motion to reconsider the vote whereby the resolution was agreed to was laid on the table.

HOUR OF MEETING.

Mr. HENRY. Mr. Speaker, I offer the resolution which I send to the Clerk's desk.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Texas [Mr. HENRY] offers a resolution, which the Clerk will report.

The Clerk read as follows:

House resolution 5.

Resolved, That until otherwise ordered the daily hour of meeting of the House of Representatives shall be 12 o'clock meridian.

The SPEAKER. The question is on agreeing to the resolution.

The resolution was agreed to.

PRINTING AND BINDING FOR THE CONFERENCE MINORITY.

Mr. MANN. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent for the present consideration of the resolution which I send to the Clerk's desk.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Illinois [Mr. MANN] asks for the present consideration of a resolution, which the Clerk will report.

The Clerk read as follows:

House resolution 18.

Resolved, That the chairman of the conference minority be authorized to have such printing and binding done as may be necessary for official business.

Mr. MANN. That is the same resolution as was agreed to in the last House.

Mr. HENRY. Is that the same?

Mr. MANN. Yes; that is the same resolution. I need to have some printing done for committees; otherwise I would not ask it at this time.

The SPEAKER. The question is on agreeing to the resolution.

The resolution was agreed to.

LEAVE OF ABSENCE.

Mr. KELLEY rose.

The SPEAKER. For what purpose does the gentleman from Michigan rise?

Mr. KELLEY. To request leave of absence for my colleague, Mr. CRAMTON, for one week, on account of illness.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Michigan [Mr. KELLEY] asks unanimous consent for leave of absence for 10 days for his colleague, Mr. CRAMTON, on account of sickness. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

The SPEAKER. The Chair lays before the House the following personal request, which the Clerk will read.

The Clerk read as follows:

ATLANTA, GA., December 6, 1915.

Hon. WILLIAM C. ADAMSON,
House of Representatives, Washington, D. C.

DEAR SIR: Please secure leave of absence for two days, on account of serious illness of mother.

SCHLEY HOWARD.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to this request?

There was no objection.

Mr. BURNETT. Mr. Speaker, I want to make a similar request for my colleague, Mr. GRAY, for indefinite leave of absence, on account of serious illness at home.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Alabama [Mr. BURNETT] asks unanimous consent for indefinite leave of absence for his colleague, Mr. GRAY, on account of serious illness. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

Mr. SABATH. Mr. Speaker, I ask leave of absence for my colleague, THOMAS GALLAGHER, due to illness in his family.

There was no objection.

WITHDRAWAL OF PAPERS.

By unanimous consent, Mr. TILSON obtained leave to withdraw from the files of the House, without leaving copies, the papers in the case of Sigmond Bauer (H. R. 15369, Sixty-third Congress), no adverse report having been made thereon.

By unanimous consent, Mr. TILSON obtained leave to withdraw from the files of the House, without leaving copies, the papers in the case of Benjamin Kelsey (H. R. 5942, Sixty-second Congress), no adverse report having been made thereon.

EXTENSION OF REMARKS.

Mr. GORDON. Mr. Speaker, I ask leave to extend my remarks in the RECORD by publishing the first inaugural of Thomas Jefferson, together with an editorial from the editor of the World's Best Orations. It does not cover over a page.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Ohio [Mr. GORDON] asks unanimous consent to print in the RECORD the first inaugural——

Mr. FITZGERALD. On what subject?

The SPEAKER. Of Thomas Jefferson, together with an article by the editor of Brewer's "The World's Best Orations." Is there objection?

Mr. MANN. I think it would do the House good to read the inaugural of Thomas Jefferson. [Laughter.]

Mr. FITZGERALD. This side is familiar with it.

Mr. ADAMSON. Those on that side are beyond hope. [Laughter.]

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

Mr. BAILEY. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my remarks on the subject of the national defense.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. BAILEY] asks unanimous consent to extend his remarks on the subject of national defense. Is there objection?

Mr. MANN. Reserving the right to object, Mr. Speaker, is it for the purpose of extending the remarks of the gentleman or collating a large amount of matter in reference to the subject?

Mr. BAILEY. For printing the statement issued by the majority leader, Mr. KITCHIN.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection?

Mr. FITZGERALD. I object.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from New York [Mr. FITZGERALD] objects.

DEATH OF THE LATE REPRESENTATIVE GOULDEN.

Mr. BENNET. Mr. Speaker, it is my sad duty to announce to the House the death of one who was for three terms my colleague, of whom I was a constituent, and whom I succeeded; one of the few remaining old soldiers in this House, the Hon. JOSEPH A. GOULDEN, who passed away in the city of Philadelphia on May 2 of this year. At another time I shall ask this House to set apart a session to pay proper tribute to his memory. At this time I offer the following resolution:

The SPEAKER. The Clerk will report the resolution.

The Clerk read as follows:

House resolution 19.

Resolved, That the House has heard with profound sorrow of the death of Hon. JOSEPH A. GOULDEN, a Representative from the State of New York.

The resolution was agreed to.

DEATH OF REPRESENTATIVE ELECT BROWN, OF PENNSYLVANIA.

Mr. TEMPLE. Mr. Speaker, it becomes my painful duty to announce the death of Hon. WILLIAM M. BROWN, Representative elect from the twenty-fourth district of Pennsylvania. I wish to offer the following resolution and move its adoption.

The SPEAKER. The Clerk will report it.

The Clerk read as follows:

House resolution 20.

Resolved, That the House has heard with profound sorrow of the death of Hon. WILLIAM M. BROWN, a Representative elect from the State of Pennsylvania.

The resolution was agreed to.

DEATH OF REPRESENTATIVE WITHERSPOON.

Mr. CANDLER of Mississippi. Mr. Speaker, it is with sincere and genuine sadness, fully shared in by all of the delegation from Mississippi, that I announce to you and to the House of Representatives the death of my friend and colleague, Hon. SAMUEL ANDREW WITHERSPOON, Representative from the fifth district of Mississippi, which sad event occurred at his home in Meridian, Miss., at 6 o'clock p. m., November 24 last.

Mr. WITHERSPOON was a cultured Christian gentleman, a manly man, a hard student, who solved great questions, and with efficiency and faithfulness discharged every duty devolving upon him. His death is a distinct loss to his district, to his State, to this Nation, and to the House of Representatives, where he was always listened to with great attention when he presented any question.

I shall not say more at the present time, Mr. Speaker, but at some future date I will ask that a day be set apart, that a fitting eulogy may be paid to his splendid character and his useful life. For the present I offer the following resolution.

The SPEAKER. The Clerk will report the resolution.

The Clerk read as follows:

House resolution No. 21.

Resolved, That the House of Representatives has heard with profound sorrow of the death of Hon. SAMUEL ANDREW WITHERSPOON, late a Representative from the State of Mississippi.

Resolved, That the Clerk communicate these resolutions to the Senate and transmit a copy thereof to the family of the deceased.

The resolution was agreed to.

LEAVE TO EXTEND REMARKS.

Mr. CHANDLER of New York. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to insert in the RECORD certain correspondence consisting of two letters between the War Department and myself relating to alleged discrimination against Jews at West Point.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from New York asks unanimous consent to extend his remarks in the RECORD. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

ADJOURNMENT.

The SPEAKER. In connection with the announcements which have just been made there is another resolution which will be reported by the Clerk.

The Clerk read as follows:

Resolved, That as a further mark of respect to the memory of the Representatives of whose deaths the House has been informed, this House do now adjourn.

The motion was agreed to; accordingly (at 4 o'clock and 6 minutes p. m.) the House adjourned until Tuesday, December 7, 1915, at 12 o'clock noon.

EXECUTIVE COMMUNICATIONS, ETC.

Under clause 2 of Rule XXIV, a letter from the Third Assistant Postmaster General, transmitting the annual report of the board of trustees of the Postal Savings System for the fiscal year ended June 30, 1915 (H. SENATE.

TUESDAY, December 7, 1915.

The Chaplain, Rev. Forrest J. Prettyman, D. D., offered the following prayer:

Almighty God, because Thou art so near to us and Thy purpose is so divine, we seek continually to know more of Thy will. Day by day we call upon Thee that we may gain strength and wisdom for the tasks of each succeeding day. As we stand in the presence of the mighty problems that confront us and that affect in some measure the destiny of a great nation we would seek from Thee that grace by which we may master first ourselves. We know we can not be master of circumstances nor change the course of time unless we have brought ourselves into subjection to the divine will. Give us a quiet mind, give us a consecrated spirit, give us a kindly heart, that we may discharge faithfully and well the solemn and sacred duties put upon us in the order of Thy providence. We ask for Christ's sake. Amen.

The Journal of yesterday's proceedings was read and approved.

PETITIONS AND MEMORIALS.

Mr. OLIVER presented a petition of the Business Men's Association of Towanda, Pa., praying for an increase in armaments, which was referred to the Committee on Military Affairs.

He also presented memorials of the Singletax Club of Pittsburgh, and of sundry societies of Friends, all in the State of Pennsylvania, remonstrating against any increase in armaments, which were referred to the Committee on Military Affairs.

He also presented a petition of the congregation of the Swedish Evangelical Salem Church, of Greensburg, Pa., and a petition of the Swedish Bethany Lutheran Church, of Erie, Pa., praying for the placing of an embargo on munitions of war, which were referred to the Committee on Military Affairs.

Mr. SUTHERLAND. I present a resolution in the nature of a petition passed by the Women Voters' Convention at San Francisco, on September 16, 1915, praying for the adoption of the so-called Susan B. Anthony resolution proposing an amendment to the Constitution granting the right of suffrage to women. This resolution represents the sentiment of approximately 4,000,000 women voters in the 12 equal-suffrage States. I ask that it may be printed in the RECORD without reading.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Unless there is objection, such will be the order.

Mr. THOMAS. There was so much confusion I could not hear a word. I wish to inquire of the Senator from Utah what is the resolution?

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Chair must ask Senators to maintain order.

Mr. SUTHERLAND. It is a resolution passed by the Women Voters' Convention at San Francisco, praying for the adoption of the Susan B. Anthony resolution.

Mr. THOMAS. Is it the introduction of the resolution itself?

Mr. SUTHERLAND. It is not.

There being no objection, the resolution was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

Resolutions passed by the Women Voters' Convention, at San Francisco, September 16, 1915.

Whereas the enfranchisement of the women of the Nation is the paramount political issue before the people and the Congress of the United States: Therefore be it

Resolved, That we women voters, in convention assembled, call upon the Sixty-fourth Congress to pass the Susan B. Anthony amendment to the United States Constitution, and we pledge ourselves to work for this amendment, irrespective of the interest of any political party; and

Whereas the Susan B. Anthony amendment offers the only direct and effective method of securing national woman suffrage; Therefore be it

Resolved, That we pledge ourselves to work exclusively for the Susan B. Anthony amendment, and herewith record our unalterable opposition to the introduction into Congress of any other amendment dealing with the subject of national woman suffrage.

Mr. WARREN. I present a joint memorial of the Legislature of Wyoming, which I ask may be printed in the RECORD and referred to the Committee on Public Lands.

There being no objection, the joint memorial was referred to the Committee on Public Lands and ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

OFFICE OF THE SECRETARY OF STATE.

UNITED STATES OF AMERICA, State of Wyoming, ss:

I, Frank L. Houx, secretary of state of the State of Wyoming, do hereby certify that the following copy of enrolled joint memorial, No. 3, House of Representatives, Thirteenth Legislature of the State of Wyoming, has been carefully compared with the original, filed in this office on the 25th day of February, A. D. 1915, and is a full, true, and correct copy of the same and of the whole thereof.

In testimony whereof I have hereunto set my hand and affixed the great seal of the State of Wyoming.

Done at Cheyenne, the capital, this 6th day of March, A. D. 1915.

[SEAL.] FRANK L. HOUX,
Secretary of State,
By F. H. WESCOTT,
Deputy.

[Thirteenth Legislature of the State of Wyoming.]

Enrolled joint memorial No. 3, House of Representatives, State of Wyoming.

Be it enacted by the House of Representatives of the State Legislature of the State of Wyoming (the Senate concurring): That—

Whereas when the original thirteen States of the Union established their independence of the British Government and established the Government of the United States each State became the owner of the vacant and unappropriated lands within its borders; and

Whereas when new States were formed out of the territory of such original States and admitted into the Union, such new States became entitled to the vacant and unappropriated lands within their borders; and

Whereas the ownership of the United States lands within the limits of the original States of the Union is based upon cessions made to the Government of the United States by those respective States; and

Whereas subsequently when foreign governments at divers times ceded territory to the Government of the United States, the vacant and unappropriated lands within such ceded territory passed to the Government of the United States; and

Whereas when new States were formed out of such ceded territory those States were denied title to the vacant and unappropriated lands within their borders, we believe that an unwise, unjust, and detrimental public land policy was established by the Federal Government and one which has uniformly and powerfully operated to the retarding of the general welfare of the citizenship and prevention of the development of the resources of every character within the borders of those new States which have struggled under the blighting influence and effect of that selfish, short-sighted, and ruinous public-land policy.

The Federal Government, so far as internal affairs are concerned, viz, the promotion of the general welfare and the establishement of justice throughout the Nation; the economic reasons and public policies which should operate upon the Congress of the United States in doing justice to and promoting the general welfare and accelerating the industrial development of the so-called arid-land States of the Union, within whose borders the vastly larger part of the vacant and unappropriated lands, title to which is held by the United States Government, lie, are so patent and powerful and numerous that they need not be recapitulated in this memorial: Therefore,

We, the Senate and House of Representatives of the State of Wyoming, hereby memorialize the Congress of the United States to enact such legislation as will cause the cessions of the Government of the United States to the States comprising said Government of all vacant and unappropriated lands, title to which is held by the Federal Government, to the States respectively within whose borders they lie.

The paramount reasons for this memorial must be transparent to all and to the Congress of the United States if acceptance is given to the primary purpose of the creations; and

We believe that the prayer of this joint memorial will be voiced by all the States affected by the present public-land policy of the United States Government: Be it further

Resolved, That engrossed copies of this memorial and request be sent to the President of the United States, to the President of the United States Senate, to the Speaker of the United States House of Representatives, to the Senators from Wyoming in the Congress of the United States, viz, Hons. CLARENCE D. CLARK and FRANCIS E. WARREN, and our Representative in said Congress, Hon. FRANK W. MONDELL, asking their aid in bringing the object of this memorial before Congress: And be it further

Resolved, That engrossed copies of this memorial be sent to the governors of each State within whose borders there are still vacant and unappropriated lands, title to which is held by the Federal Government, asking them to place before the legislature of said States this memorial, urge its adoption, and request their cooperation in securing favorable action thereon by the Congress of the United States.

Approved February 24, 1915.

Mr. WARREN. I present a joint memorial of the Legislature of Wyoming, which I ask may be printed in the RECORD and referred to the Committee on Public Lands.

There being no objection, the joint memorial was referred to the Committee on Public Lands and ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

THE STATE OF WYOMING,

Thirteenth Legislature of the State of Wyoming, enrolled joint memorial No. 1, House of Representatives, State of Wyoming.

Be it resolved by the House of Representatives of the State of Wyoming (the Senate concurring), That the Congress of the United States be memorialized as follows:

Whereas the State of Wyoming is not thickly populated and the means of communication between the several parts of the State are so limited that the establishment and maintenance of public highways throughout the State would be a certain means of increasing the material prosperity and bringing in new settlers to the vacant public lands within the State; and

Whereas there is a bill now pending in the United States Congress, introduced by Senator WARREN, of this State, which provided for a grant of 1,000,000 acres of Federal land to the State of Wyoming for the purpose of building and maintaining public highways: Now therefore be it

Resolved, That the Congress of the United States be requested to take early and favorable action on the aforesaid bill for the purpose of creating the fund to be secured through the sale or leasing of such lands, to be used solely for the establishment and maintenance and good repair of the public roads within the State of Wyoming; and be it further

Resolved, That a certified copy of this memorial, together with a copy of the governor's message thereon, be sent to each of the members of the congressional delegation from the State in Congress, with the request that they employ their best efforts to secure the passage of this bill.

EDWARD W. STONE,
President of the Senate.

D. 1915, and is a full, true, and correct copy of the same and of the whole thereof.

In testimony whereof I have hereunto set my hand and affixed the great seal of the State of Wyoming.

Thirteenth Legislature of the State of Wyoming, enrolled joint memorial No. 2, Senate, State of Wyoming.

Memorial to the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States protesting against the withdrawal of vast areas of public lands and against proposed measures to federalize our water resources under a system of Government landlordism as being contrary to the reserved rights of the State and a dangerous menace to the natural development and prosperity of the public-land States.

Be it resolved by the Senate of the State of Wyoming (the House of Representatives concurring), That the Congress of the United States be memoralized as follows:

Resolved, That the legislature of this State, now in session, hereby earnestly and unanimously protest against the withdrawal of our public lands containing valuable mineral deposits, such as coal, iron, oil, phosphates, etc., and also against the withdrawal of power sites in order to control the water resources of the State; and we further protest against proposed measures for leasing the mines, water-power, and irrigation rights of the public domain and putting all these vast interests under the control and management of a Federal bureau as not only a dangerous menace to a republican form of government, but utterly destructive of the natural development, advancement, and prosperity of the public-land States.

Resolved, As the State of Wyoming owns all of the waters within its boundaries, the withdrawal of land along our streams is destroying the value and utility of our State property and is practically confiscation of the water power which belongs to the State, as granted, ratified, and confirmed by the acceptance by Congress of the constitution of the State of Wyoming.

The withdrawals of public land within the State for all purposes are:

	Acres.
Coal lands	2,951,156
Oil and petroleum lands	522,395
Phosphates	1,533,988
Power-site withdrawals	73,564
Water reserves	81,911
A total of	5,163,014
And, in addition, forest reserves of	8,370,000

A total of 13,533,014 acres out of a total area of 62,000,000 acres of the total area of the State.

During the period from March 4, 1913, to June 30, 1914, there was withdrawn from entry in the State of Wyoming 263,813 acres. During the same period the total withdrawals in Arizona, Colorado, Montana, New Mexico, Oregon, Utah, and Washington aggregated 236,675 acres, or 27,138 acres less than was withdrawn in this one State. We protest that such withdrawals are unjust and unfair and stop the development of our State.

Resolved, That such withdrawals constitute a denial of the rights heretofore accorded the individual American citizen to prospect, explore, develop, and acquire such public mining lands and deposits; it prevents the State from developing the varied resources within its borders, and, if persisted in, will establish a system of Government landlordism utterly inconsistent with the historic land policy under which the marvelous development and progress of the West has been accomplished.

Resolved, That as citizens of a sovereign State we are fully in accord with the utterances of President Wilson, who said in his letters to the American people:

"If any part of our people want to be wards, if they want guardians put over them, if they want to be children patronized by the Government, why, I am sorry, because it will sap the manhood of America; but I do not believe they do."

We also especially commend the true and vigorous assertions of Vice President MARSHALL, who said in a public address at Cheyenne in October, 1912:

"The State should control the conservation of its resources. The State should control irrigation and mineral deposits and lands, as against the present system of control by the Federal Government. Indiana and all the old States had control of the public lands within their borders and the new States should have the same rights. The people who live in Colorado and Wyoming and other public-land States are right here on the ground working for the advancement and development of their States. They know the conditions; they know what they need and can handle these questions better than Government officials thousands of miles away."

Resolved further, That we believe in a return to the safeguards of the American Constitution and the wise, liberal, historic policy which the Federal Government maintained for over a hundred years, and that was the policy of alienation—"the passing of title and control of the public domain into individual ownership and development as fast as possible, giving to the new States the same sovereignty and jurisdiction within their boundaries that the old States possessed."

Resolved, That copies of this memorial be transmitted to the President of the United States, to our Senators and Congressmen in Washington, to the Secretary of the Interior, and to each chairman of the Senate and House Committees on Public Lands.

EDWARD W. STONE,
President of the Senate.
JAMES M. GRAHAM,
Speaker of the House.

Thirteenth Legislature of the State of Wyoming, enrolled joint memorial No. 2, House of Representatives, State of Wyoming.

To the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States, relative to the destruction of predatory wild animals on forest reserves, Indian reservations, and in the Yellowstone National Park:

Be it resolved by the House of Representatives of the State of Wyoming (the Senate concurring), That the Congress of the United States be memorialized as follows:

Whereas the State of Wyoming has made earnest effort to destroy predatory wild animals by appropriating large sums of money to be paid as bounties for the destruction of these pests, which destroy large numbers of live stock and game and cause great damage to the principal industry of the State, decreasing the assessable property of the State; and

Whereas the Yellowstone National Park, the national forest reserves, and the Indian reservations where such animals have certain protection, are prolific breeding places of these animals, setting at naught the efforts of this State and its rural inhabitants to exterminate them: Therefore be it

Resolved, That the Congress of the United States enact a law and provide ways and means to exterminate, as nearly as practical, the predatory wild animals on all Indian reservations, forest reserves in this State, and in the Yellowstone National Park, and that civilians may be licensed by the proper Federal authorities to enter the said Yellowstone National Park at all seasons of the year to carry on the occupation of trapping predatory wild animals, under rules and regulations to be prescribed by the Federal authorities; be it further

Resolved, That the secretary of state be instructed to send a copy of this memorial to the United States Senators and Representatives in Congress from Wyoming.

Thirteenth Legislature of the State of Wyoming, enrolled joint memorial No. 4, House of Representatives, State of Wyoming.

Be it resolved by the House of Representatives of the State of Wyoming (the Senate concurring), That the Congress of the United States be memorialized as follows:

Whereas there is now pending in the Senate of the United States a bill relating to the reclamation of arid, semiarid, swamp, and overflow lands through district organizations, and authorizing Government aid therefor, such bill being known as Senate file 6827; and

Whereas the provisions of the bill would be applicable to thousands of acres of land within the State of Wyoming, and by reason of the enactment of such Senate file a vast area might be reclaimed and made habitable; and

Whereas there are a number of projects within the State of Wyoming capable of being improved under the Carey Land Act, and, in fact, many such projects are now pending: Therefore be it

Resolved, That the Congress of the United States be requested to take early and favorable action on such Senate file 6827, and that its provisions be extended so as to include the Carey Land Act projects; and be it further

Resolved, That a certified copy of this memorial be sent to each of the members of the congressional delegation from the State in Congress, the Secretary of the Interior, and the Commissioner of the General Land Office, with the request that they employ their best efforts to secure the passage of this bill.

Concurrent resolution. (Everson.)

Whereas the United States should maintain an attitude of impartial neutrality toward all the warring nations of Europe; and

Whereas the shipment of arms and munitions of war to any of said warring nations is not consistent with the purpose and policy of the United States to be strictly and impartially neutral; and

Whereas the shipment of arms and munitions of war has the effect of prolonging the conflict now raging in Europe: Therefore, be it

Resolved by the House of Representatives of the State of North Dakota (the Senate concurring), That we view the present war as a crime and travesty on civilization and read with horror its daily record of destruction and death.

That we earnestly urge Congress to prohibit the shipment of arms and munitions of war from the United States to any of the nations engaged in this war, in order to consistently maintain a fair and impartial neutrality toward all such nations.

Resolved, That we urge our Representatives in Congress to support this principle enacted into law, and that a copy of these resolutions be Congress, to the Secretary of State of the United States, and to the President of the United States.

Concurrent resolution (Gibbens) relating to national inspection and grading of grain.

Be it resolved by the Senate of the State of North Dakota (the House of Representatives concurring), That—

Whereas there is being considered by the Congress of the United States an act providing for the uniform grading of grain and the proper inspection thereof; and

Whereas this act provides for an appeal being made to some higher authority than a local State board of grain appeals, thus giving to the producers and shippers of grain of North Dakota a right of review of the findings of such board of grain appeals: Now, therefore, be it

Resolved, That we urge our Representatives in Congress to support this principle enacted into law, and that a copy of these resolutions be sent to each of such Representatives in Congress.

Concurrent resolution. (Turner.)

Whereas when North Dakota was admitted to statehood the State was given for State institutions by the Federal Government lands aggregating 500,000 acres. This land was divided among the various State institutions, and as these lands are sold the moneys derived from them go into a permanent fund, the income of which is used and shall be used for the maintenance and support of the institution for which these lands stand as an endowment; and

Whereas there is in North Dakota to-day about 700,000 acres of vacant Government land remaining, much of which is subject to the 320-acre homestead and may be subject to a homestead entry of 640 acres, provided a bill now before Congress shall be enacted into law; and

Whereas if it shall be done, the remaining public lands in North Dakota will only provide a little over 1,000 homesteads; and

Whereas if Congress should enact a law giving to every public-land State 500,000 acres of the remaining vacant public lands in the various public-land States, thereby benefiting all of the people of those States and in a way in which and by which they would derive a much greater benefit than were the lands open for homesteads to a few: Now, therefore, be it

Resolved by the House of Representatives of the State of North Dakota, the Senate concurring, That we respectfully request and petition the Congress of the United States through our Senators and Representatives of Congress, that a law be enacted so that the States receiving these public lands shall be authorized, through their legislatures, to distribute the lands so given between the penal, charitable, and educational institutions of the State, but providing that one-fifth of the lands so given shall be set aside by the legislature as an endowment fund, the interest from which, when the lands shall have been sold, to be used for the purpose of building roads and bridges in the various States.

House joint memorial No. 3.

A memorial to the Congress of the United States of America, petitioning the United States Government to make a part of the Ashley National Forest certain lands formerly within the Uintah Indian Reservation.

To the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States in Congress assembled:

Your memorialists, the governor and the Legislature of the State of Utah, respectfully represent that—

Whereas certain lands located in Wasatch, Duchesne, and Uintah Counties, in the State of Utah, and formerly within the boundaries of the Uintah Reservation, are now held and set apart as Indian grazing lands; and

Whereas said lands are now patrolled by Indian police, whose actions in the handling of cattle owned by residents of said counties continually cause the said residents serious inconvenience and much damage:

Now, therefore, the governor and the Legislature of the State of Utah respectfully petition that the said lands so set apart as Indian grazing lands be made a part of the Ashley National Forest and placed under the control of the Forest Service.

Approved March 16, 1915.

Senate joint memorial No. 4.

A memorial asking for a more liberal national policy in the disposition of the public domain and urging that the natural resources of the State of Utah be made available for development.

To the President of the United States and to the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States in Congress assembled:

Those who own their homes constitute the strength and power of our Government and the hope and promise of the Republic.

We believe that the vestment of property rights through the operation of liberal policies in the disposition of the public lands has been fundamentally responsible for the growth and development in the United States which is without parallel in the world's history.

The soil has yielded our greatest wealth, and the farms have contributed loyal citizens, whose substantial enduring patriotism is the bulwark of the Nation.

Rejoicing in the growth and development, the power and prestige of the older States of the Union, and recognizing that their advancement was made possible through the beneficent operation of a wise and most generous public-land policy on the part of the Government, the people of Utah view with alarm and apprehension the national tendency toward the curtailment of the former liberal policies in handling the public domain and disposing of the natural resources, as evidenced in the vast land withdrawals and the pending legislation, calculated to make our coal, our mineral, and our water-power resources chattels for Government exploitation through a system of leasing.

In harmony with the spirit and letter of the land grants to the National Government, in perpetuation of a policy that has done more to promote the general welfare than any other policy in our national life, and in conformity with the terms of our enabling act, we, the members of the Legislature of the State of Utah, memorialize the President and the Congress of the United States for the speedy return to the former liberal national attitude toward the public domain, and we call attention to the fact that the burden of State and local government in Utah is borne by the taxation of less than one-third the lands of the State, which alone is vested in private or corporate ownership, and we hereby earnestly urge a policy that will afford an opportunity to settle our lands and make use of our resources on terms of equality with the older States, to the benefit and upbuilding of the State and to the strength of the Nation.

Resolved, That copies of this memorial be engrossed and forwarded, one each to the President, the Senate and House of Representatives, and to Utah's congressional delegation, with request that they use every legitimate effort to promote the objects of said memorial.

Approved March 15, 1915.

STATE OF UTAH,
SECRETARY OF STATE'S OFFICE.

I, David Mattson, secretary of state of the State of Utah, do hereby certify that the foregoing memorial is a full, true, and complete copy of the original thereof, which was filed in the office of the secretary of state of the State of Utah, on the 15th day of March, 1914.

In testimony whereof I have hereunto set my hand and affixed the great seal of the State of Utah this 21st day of June, A. D. 1915.

[SEAL.] DAVID MATTSON,
Secretary of State.

Mr. SMOOT. I present a joint memorial of the Legislature of Utah, which I ask may be printed in the RECORD and referred to the Committee on Agriculture and Forestry.

There being no objection, the joint memorial was referred to the Committee on Agriculture and Forestry and ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

Senate joint memorial No. 5.

Relating to the destruction of certain wild animals.

To the honorable Senate and House of Representatives of the Congress of the United States:

Your memorialists, the governor and the Legislature of the State of Utah, respectfully represent that—

Whereas in the Western States, known as the public-land States, the losses of live stock and poultry due to the attacks of coyotes, wolves, wildcats, cougars, and bears amount to not less than $15,000,000 annually; and

Whereas in these western public-land States the State, county, and stockmen do now and have for years paid large bounties and used other means to bring about the eradication of these carnivorous wild animals; and

Whereas in these western public-land States there is now withdrawn from settlement in some form or other approximately 225,000,000 acres of Federal land, which land constitutes the principal breeding ground and refuge of these carnivorous wild animals and enables them to increase their numbers in spite of the efforts made by State, county, and stockmen to exterminate them: Now, therefore, be it

Resolved, That the Legislature of the State of Utah does hereby most respectfully urge and request that Congress immediately appropriate the sum of $300,000 to be used by the United States Department of Agriculture for the destruction of coyotes, wolves, wildcats, cougars, and bears in these western public-land States in order that the meat supply of the Nation may be increased and the proper development of the West encouraged.

Approved March 1, 1915.

STATE OF UTAH,
SECRETARY OF STATE'S OFFICE.

I, David Mattson, secretary of state of the State of Utah, do hereby certify that the foregoing memorial is a full, true, and complete copy of the original thereof, which was filed in the office of the secretary of state of the State of Utah on the 1st day of March, A. D. 1915.

In testimony whereof I have hereunto set my hand and affixed the great seal of the State of Utah this 21st day of June, A. D. 1915.

[SEAL.] DAVID MATTSON,
Secretary of State.

Mr. SMOOT. I present a joint memorial of the Legislature of Utah which I ask may be printed in the RECORD and referred to the Committee on Mines and Mining.

There being no objection, the joint memorial was referred to the Committee on Mines and Mining and ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

Senate joint memorial No. 1.

A petition for the enactment by the Congress of the United States of House resolution No. 15869, introduced by Mr. FOSTER.

To the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States in Congress assembled:

Your memorialists, the governor and the Legislature of the State of Utah, respectfully represent that—

Whereas there is now pending in Congress H. R. 15869, introduced by Mr. FOSTER, entitled "A bill to provide for the establishment and maintenance of mining-experiment and mine-safety stations for making investigations and disseminating information among employees in mining, quarrying, metallurgical, and other mineral industries, and for other purposes"; and

Whereas the purpose of this bill is "to improve conditions in the mining, quarrying, metallurgical, and other mineral industries, safeguarding life among employees, preventing unnecessary waste of resources, and otherwise contributing to the advancement of these industries"; and

Whereas this proposed legislation will be of very great importance to Utah and to all other mining States, by reason of advancing mine-safety education and mine-rescue work, and also by reason of making commercially valuable large bodies of low-grade ore, which can not now be worked for want of suitable processes; and

Whereas the mining industry has hitherto not received from the Federal Government the recognition and aid that its importance deserves and has therefore been deprived of the encouragement which has proved so wise and beneficial in the base of agriculture; and

Whereas this bill will broaden the scope to the United States Bureau of Mines and will enable it to undertake much needed work in the behalf of the metalliferous mining instead of being practically restricted to coal mining as heretofore; and

Whereas these enlarged activities of the Bureau of Mines are confidently expected to result in incalculable public benefit, not only to the mining States, but to the entire Nation: Therefore,

We, the governor and Legislature of the State of Utah, respectfully memorialize and urge the Congress of the United States to enact the pending Foster bill into law.

Approved March 6, 1915.

Mr. MYERS. I present a joint memorial of the Legislature of Montana, which I ask may be printed in the RECORD and referred to the Committee on Indian Affairs.

There being no objection, the joint memorial was referred to the Committee on Indian Affairs and ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

House joint memorial No. 5. (Easton.)

To the honorable Senators and Representatives of the United States in Congress assembled:

Whereas the Fort Peck Indian Reservation was opened for settlement on May 1, 1914, and during the period since that date less than 400 entries have been made on the reservation, on a tract of fertile land which would accommodate at least 6,000 entrymen; and

Whereas the Interior Department has, in an effort to stimulate settlement, increased the minimum area of homestead entries on the reservation from 160 acres to 320 acres, and yet effected no increase in the number of entries made nor stimulated interest in reservation lands; and

Whereas the large number of prospective settlers coming to this district are making entry and settlement on inferior lands in the public domain in preference to paying the price asked and making sacrifices required to acquire title to the reservation lands; and

Whereas careful inquiry from these settlers and a close study of the conditions show that the reason for the lack of interest in the reservation lands arises from the fact that the appraised valuation of the land is too high; and that it is possible to purchase in our settled communities deeded land of equal quality, with buildings, wells, fencing, plowing, and general improvements, and without any residence required, for less money per acre than can be done on the reservation, to say nothing of the settlers' cost of maintaining residence during the time required; and

Whereas the settlers already on the reservation are now without roads, which are badly needed, without schools for the education of their children, and without markets for their products within reasonable distance. Their lands, though equaling in quality those of their neighbors in settled districts outside of the reservation, will not bring an equal price, due to the unimproved, uninhabited lands around them. These drawbacks will continue until existing conditions and laws are changed, so as to be more promising and inviting to the prospective settler and the settlement of all the districts is obtained; and

Whereas the failure of settlement on the reservation works to the injury of the Fort Peck Indians and all business interests of the district and retards the development of one of the richest tracts of land left for settlement in the West: Now, therefore, be it

Resolved (the senate concurring), That we, the Fourteenth Legislative Assembly of the State of Montana, do hereby petition Congress of the United States to take such immediate steps as are practicable to reduce the appraised valuation of the lands of the Fort Peck Indian Reservation, making this reduction applicable to the lands of the present settlers as well as those to be settled upon in the future, and that this reduction be sufficient to make it possible for settlers desiring homestead lands to make entry and settlement on the reservation, with some reasonable assurance that they will be able to complete their improvements and make the payments required.

Resolved further, That a copy of this memorial be forwarded by the secretary of state of Montana to the honorable Senate and House of Representatives of the United States; and be it further

Resolved, That a copy hereof be transmitted by the secretary of state to each of our Senators and Representatives in the Congress of the United States and to the Hon. Cato Sells, Commissioner of Indian Affairs, at Washington, D. C., with the request that they use every effort within their power to bring about speedy action for the accomplishment of the ends and purposes herein indicated.

Mr. MYERS. I present a joint memorial of the Legislature of Montana, which I ask may be printed in the RECORD and referred to the Committee on Agriculture and Forestry.

There being no objection, the joint memorial was referred to the Committee on Agriculture and Forestry and ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

House joint resolution No. 4. (Graybeal.)

Whereas a high mountain range separates the southwestern part of Gallatin County, Mont., from the remainder of the county; and

Whereas the only practicable route for a wagon road to connect the two sections is through a corner of the Yellowstone National Park; and

Whereas the county of Gallatin has constructed, wholly at its own expense, a rude road through a corner of the Yellowstone National Park, that enables residents of said southwestern corner to travel on it to the Gallatin Valley, the county seat, and to stations on transcontinental railroad lines, and from points on said lines to Yellowstone, on the Oregon Short Line; and

Whereas said wagon road is an interstate north and south highway that connects the post roads of Montana with those of Idaho and the States to the south and west, and if put in condition would be a convenience to many interstate travelers; and

Whereas the part of this interstate highway that is within the Yellowstone National Park is in poor condition and at times impassable: Be it therefore

Resolved by the Legislative Assembly of the State of Montana, That the Government of the United States be urged to take over the road Gallatin County has constructed through the corner of the Yellowstone National Park and to improve the same, so that it may become a highway over which vehicles may travel in safety and comfort; and be it further

House joint memorial No. 6. (Hills.)

A memorial to the honorable Senate and House of Representatives of the United States in Congress assembled requesting the passage of House bill No. 15219, being a bill for an act to further the economic use of forests and forest lands and the training of forestry students in collegiate institutions that are or may be aided by States in which are Federal forest reserves.

To the honorable Senate and House of Representatives of the United States in Congress assembled:

Whereas there has been introduced and is pending in the House of Representatives of the United States House bill No. 15219 (introduced by Representative French), being a bill for an act to further the economic use of forests and forest lands and the training of forestry students in collegiate institutions that are or may be aided by States in which there are Federal forest reserves, by providing for an annual appropriation of 5 per cent (not to exceed $15,000 to one State) of the receipts of the forest areas in the respective States for the endowment of the forest school to be designated by the State legislature, or previous to such designation by the governor of the State; and

Whereas in the State of Montana, with her large Federal forest areas, the immediate benefit of forestry schools supported by that State accrues largely to the Government of the United States in technical and practical training of forest officials and employees and in the development and protection of national forest areas; and

Whereas it is only just that a proportion of the cost of maintaining such schools should be borne by the beneficiaries thereof:

Now, therefore, the honorable Senate and House of Representatives of the United States in Congress assembled is hereby respectively memorialized and petitioned by the Senate and House of Representatives of the Legislative Assembly of the State of Montana, duly assembled, to enact into law the above-designated bill;

And be it further resolved, That the secretary of state of Montana be, and he is hereby, directed to transmit to the Speaker of the House of Representatives and President of the Senate of the United States and to the Senators and Representatives from the State of Montana in Congress, severally, copies of this memorial.

Senate joint memorial No. 4. (Darroch.)

To the Honorable SECRETARY OF THE INTERIOR,
Washington, D. C.:

Whereas a war is raging in Europe, preventing thousands of American tourists from making their annual auto tour to European countries; and

Whereas the world's fairs are being held this year at San Francisco and San Diego; and

Whereas magnificent highways have been built from the Pacific to the Atlantic; and

Whereas the year 1915 offers an unusual opportunity for the United States to let her auto tourists see the most marvelous of all the world's scenery—the Yellowstone National Park—and hundreds of other scenic wonders of the West, the most of which are not equaled in Europe; and

Whereas this year offers the tourist an opportunity to spend his money in the United States; and

Whereas to take a trip across our vast domain enables our American citizens to more fully appreciate their native land; and

Whereas a trip of this kind instills a patriotism that would be hard to instill in any other way; and

Whereas auto tourists are largely discouraged from making transcontinental trips because they are not allowed the great convenience of passing through the Yellowstone National Park from north to south or from east to west with their machines; and

Whereas the prospective tourist is thus discouraged from seeing by auto much of America's most marvelous scenery; and

Whereas magnificent roads have been built in the Yellowstone Park with the Nation's money for the use of all the people, to give them access to this the greatest of the Nation's numerous playgrounds; and

Whereas the stations and hotels within the park are so located that autos can easily run from one to another between the hours of 6 p. m. and sunset and between sunrise and 7 a. m. of the days when the park is open to tourists, and at which time of day there need not be traffic by horses on any of the said roads; and

Whereas automobile travel in the hours asked for above will not in any way interfere with the present stage traffic in the park and will still afford autoists time to go from station to station within the park in daylight: Now, therefore, be it

Resolved, by the Senate of the Fourteenth Legislative Assembly of Montana, the House concurring, That we petition the honorable Secretary of the Interior to permit automobiles to pass over the roads in the Yellowstone National Park during the hours between 6 p. m. and 7 a. m. on those days when the park is open to the general public.

Mr. MYERS. I present a joint memorial of the Legislature of Montana, which I ask may be printed in the RECORD and referred to the Committee on Public Lands.

There being no objection, the joint memorial was referred to the Committee on Public Lands and ordered to be printed in the RECORD as follows:

Senate joint memorial No. 3. (Roberts.)

To the honorable Senate and House of Representatives of the United States in Congress assembled:

Whereas there lies within the county of Lincoln and State of Montana, and within the Cabinet Mountains, an unsurveyed territory described as follows:

"Beginning at the northwest corner of unsurveyed section one, township 30 north, range 33 west, M. M., and running south 12 miles to southwest corner of unsurveyed section 36, township 29 north, range 33 west; thence west to the northwest corner of unsurveyed section one of township 28 north, range 33 west; thence south six miles to the southwest corner of unsurveyed section 31, township 28 north, range 32 west; thence east to the summit of the main range of the Cabinet Mountains; thence in a northerly direction meandering the summit of the said main range to the north line of unsurveyed township 28 north, range 32 west; thence east to the southwest corner of unsurveyed section 35, township 29 north, range 32 west; thence north 12 miles to the northwest corner of unsurveyed section two, township 30 north, range 32 west; thence west along the north line of unsurveyed township 30 north, range 33 west to the point of beginning, embracing an area of approximately 100 square miles," which abounds in scenery of the natural beauty, consisting of rugged mountains, beautiful lakes, waterfalls, mountain streams, and the Blackwell Glacier, one of the greatest scenic sights of the Northwest; and

Whereas nowhere on the American Continent is there found a section of equal area which has more wonderful scenery than this, more rugged and awe-inspiring mountain views, more beautiful rivers and lakes than are to be found within this territory; and

Whereas the Blackwell Glacier is the only one to be found within the Cabinet range of mountains, all of which will attract many people and will gratify their natural desire for the beautiful, if the same be opened as a national park and taken care of in an appropriate manner; and

Whereas the country surrounding this in general abounds in all kinds of native wild game and the waters of both lakes and streams in trout and greyling and other fish, and if the same be set aside by the National Government for the benefit and enjoyment of the people in general it would, in a very short time, become one of the Nation's greatest recreation grounds; and

Whereas this proposed national park lies alongside of the highway known as the Glacier National Park-Spokane Interstate Automobile Highway and would be easily reached by automobile through the construction of but a few miles of road from this great national highway; and

Whereas at this time there is not a single settler in the area covered by the proposed park, entailing no hardships of any sort on any individual through this particular territory being designated and set aside as a national park: Now, therefore, be it

Resolved (the House of Representatives concurring), That we, the Fourteenth Legislative Assembly of the State of Montana, do hereby petition the Congress of the United States for the passage of necessary legislation to set aside the said territory as a national park for the use, enjoyment, and benefit of the people as a whole at as early a date as is practicable.

Resolved further, That a copy of this memorial be forwarded by the secretary of state to the honorable Secretary of the Interior and to our Senators and Representatives in Congress, with the request that they use every effort within their power to bring about the early creation, setting aside, and opening for the benefit of the public this territory to be known as designated as a national park.

Thirteenth Legislature of the State of Wyoming, enrolled joint memorial No. 1, House of Representatives, State of Wyoming.

Be it resolved by the House of Representatives of the State of Wyoming (the Senate concurring), That the Congress of the United States be memorialized as follows:

Whereas the State of Wyoming is not thickly populated and the means of communication between the several parts of the State are so limited that the establishment and maintenance of public highways throughout the State would be a certain means of increasing the material prosperity and bringing in new settlers to the vacant public lands within the State; and

Whereas there is a bill now pending in the United States Congress, introduced by Senator WARREN, of this State, which provided for a grant of 1,000,000 acres of Federal land to the State of Wyoming for the purpose of building and maintaining public highways: Now, therefore be it

Resolved, That the Congress of the United States be requested to take early and favorable action on the aforesaid bill for the purpose of creating the fund to be secured through the sale or leasing of such lands to be used solely for the establishment and maintenance and good repair of the public roads within the State of Wyoming; be it further

Resolved, That a certified copy of this memorial, together with a copy of the governor's message thereon, be sent to each of the members of the congressional delegation from the State in Congress, with the request that they employ their best efforts to secure the passage of this bill.

Thirteenth Legislature of the State of Wyoming, enrolled joint memorial, No. 2, Senate, State of Wyoming.

Memorial to the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States, protesting against the withdrawal of vast areas of public lands and against proposed measures to federalize our water resources under a system of Government landlordism, as being contrary to the reserved rights of the State, and a dangerous menace to the natural development and prosperity of the public land States.

Be it resolved by Senate of the State of Wyoming (the House of Representatives concurring), That the Congress of the United States be memorialized as follows:

Resolved, That the legislature of this State now in session hereby earnestly and unanimously protest against the withdrawal of our public lands containing valuable mineral deposits, such as coal, iron, oil, phosphates, etc.; and also against the withdrawal of power sites in order to control the water resources of the State; and we further protest against proposed measures for leasing the mines, water power, and irigation rights of the public domain and putting all these vast interests under the control and management of a Federal bureau as not only a dangerous menace to a republican form of government but utterly destructive of the natural development, advancement, and prosperity of the public land States.

Resolved, As the State of Wyoming owns all of the waters within its boundaries, the withdrawal of land along our streams is destroying the value and utility of our State property and is practically confiscation of the water power which belongs to the State, as granted, ratified, and confirmed by the acceptance by Congress of the constitution of the State of Wyoming.

The withdrawals of public land within the State for all purposes are:

	Acres.
Coal lands	2,951,156
Oil and petroleum lands	522,395
Phosphates	1,533,988
Power site withdrawals	73,564
Water reserves	81,911
A total of	5,163,014
And in addition, forest reserves of	8,370,000

A total of 13,533,014 acres out of a total area of 62,000,000 acres of the total area of the State.

During the period from March 4, 1913, to June 30, 1914, there was withdrawn from entry in the State of Wyoming 263,813 acres. During the same period the total withdrawals in Arizona, Colorado, Montana, New Mexico, Oregon, Utah, and Washington aggregate 236,675 acres, or 27,138 acres less than was withdrawn in this one State. We protest that such withdrawals are unjust and unfair and stop the development of our State.

Resolved, That such withdrawals constitute a denial of the rights heretofore accorded the individual American citizen to prospect, explore, develop, and acquire such public mining lands and deposits; it prevents the State from developing the varied resources within its borders, and if persisted in will establish a system of Government landlordism utterly inconsistent with the historic land policy under which the marvelous development and progress of the West has been accomplished.

Resolved, That as citizens of a sovereign State, we are fully in accord with the utterances of President Wilson, who said in his letters to the American people:

"If any part of our people want to be wards, if they want guardians put over them, if they want to be children patronized by the Government, why, I am sorry, because it will sap the manhood of America; but I do not believe they do."

We also especially commend the true and vigorous assertions of Vice President Marshall, who said in a public address at Cheyenne in October, 1912:

"The State should control the conservation of its resources. The State should control irrigation and mineral deposits and lands, as against the present system of control by the Federal Government. Indiana and all the old States had control of the public lands within their borders and the new States should have the same rights. The people who live in Colorado and Wyoming and other public land States are right here on the ground working for the advancement and development of their States. They know the conditions, they know what they need and can handle these questions better than Government officials thousands of miles away."

Resolved further, That we believe in a return to the safeguards of the American Constitution and the wise, liberal, historic policy which the Federal Government maintained for over a hundred years, and that was the policy of alienation—"the passing of title and control of the public domain into individual ownership and development as fast as possible, giving to the new States the same sovereignty and jurisdiction within their boundaries that the old States possessed."

Resolved, That copies of this memorial be transmitted to the President of the United States, to our Senators and Congressmen in Washington, to the Secretary of the Interior, and to each chairman of the Senate and House Committees on Public Lands.

President of the Senate.

Mr. CLARK of Wyoming. I present a joint memorial of the Legislature of Wyoming, which I ask may be printed in the RECORD and referred to the Committee on Agriculture and Forestry.

There being no objection, the joint memorial was referred to the Committee on Agriculture and Forestry and ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

THE STATE OF WYOMING,
OFFICE OF THE SECRETARY OF STATE.

UNITED STATES OF AMERICA, State of Wyoming, ss:

I, Frank L. Houx, secretary of state of the State of Wyoming, do hereby certify that the annexed copy of enrolled joint memorial No. 2, House of Representatives, State of Wyoming, has been carefully compared with the original filed in this office on the 25th day of February, A. D. 1915, and is a full, true, and correct copy of the same and of the whole thereof.

In testimony whereof I have hereunto set my hand and affixed the great seal of the State of Wyoming.

Thirteenth Legislature of the State of Wyoming, enrolled joint memorial No. 2, House of Representatives, State of Wyoming.

To the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States, relative to the destruction of predatory wild animals on forest reserves, Indian reservations, and in the Yellowstone National Park:

Be it resolved by the House of Representatives of the State of Wyoming (the Senate concurring), That the Congress of the United States be memorialized as follows:

Whereas the State of Wyoming has made earnest effort to destroy predatory wild animals by appropriating large sums of money to be paid as bounties for the destruction of these pests, which destroy large numbers of live stock and game and cause great damage to the principal industry of the State, decreasing the assessable property of the State; and

Whereas the Yellowstone National Park, the national forest reserves, and the Indian reservations, where such animals have certain protection, are prolific breeding places of these animals, setting at naught the efforts of this State and its rural inhabitants to exterminate them: Therefore be it

Resolved, That the Congress of the United States enact a law and provide ways and means to exterminate, as nearly as practical, the predatory wild animals on all Indian reservations, forest reserves in this State, and in the Yellowstone National Park, and that civilians may be licensed by the proper Federal authorities to enter the said Yellowstone National Park at all seasons of the year to carry on the occupation of trapping predatory wild animals, under rules and regulations to be prescribed by the Federal authorities; and be it further

Resolved, That the secretary of state be instructed to send a copy of this memorial to the United States Senators and Representatives in Congress from Wyoming.

EDWARD W. STONE,
President of the Senate.
JAMES M. GRAHAM,
Speaker of the House.

Mr. CLARK of Wyoming. I present a joint memorial of the Legislature of Wyoming, which I ask may be printed in the RECORD and referred to the Committee on Irrigation and Reclamation of Arid Lands.

There being no objection, the joint memorial was referred to the Committee on Irrigation and Reclamation of Arid Lands and ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

THE STATE OF WYOMING,
OFFICE OF THE SECRETARY OF STATE.

UNITED STATES OF AMERICA, State of Wyoming, ss:

I, Frank L. Houx, secretary of state of the State of Wyoming, do hereby certify that the annexed copy of enrolled joint memorial No. 4, House of Representatives, State of Wyoming, has been carefully compared with the original, filed in this office on the 25th day of February, A. D. 1915, and is a full, true, and correct copy of the same and of the whole thereof.

In testimony whereof I have hereunto set my hand and affixed the great seal of the State of Wyoming.

[SEAL.] FRANK L. HOUX,
Secretary of State.

Thirteenth Legislature of the State of Wyoming, enrolled joint memorial No. 4, House of Representatives, State of Wyoming.

Be it resolved by the House of Representatives of the State of Wyoming (the Senate concurring), That the Congress of the United States be memoralized as follows:

Whereas there is now pending in the Senate of the United States a bill relating to the reclamation of arid, semiarid, swamp, and overflow lands through district organizations and authorizing Government aid therefor, such bill being known as Senate file 6827; and

Whereas the provisions of the bill would be applicable to thousands of acres of land within the State of Wyoming, and by reason of the enactment of such Senate file a vast area might be reclaimed and made habitable; and

Whereas there are a number of projects within the State of Wyoming capable of being improved under the Carey land act, and in fact many such projects are now pending: Therefore be it

Resolved, That the Congress of the United States be requested to take early and favorable action on such Senate file 6827 and that its provisions be extended so as to include the Carey land act projects; and be it further

Resolved, That a certified copy of this memorial be sent to each of the Members of the congressional delegation from the State in Congress, the Secretary of the Interior, and the Commissioner of the General Land Office, with the request that they employ their best efforts to secure the passage of this bill.

Mr. GALLINGER. I present a resolution adopted at a Statewide mass meeting of the people of New Hampshire on the question of preparedness. It is very brief, and I ask that it may be printed in the RECORD without reading.

There being no objection, the resolution was referred to the Committee on Military Affairs and ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

NEW HAMPSHIRE LEAGUE FOR NATIONAL DEFENSE,
Concord, N. H., November 12, 1915.

Hon. JACOB H. GALLINGER,
Concord, N. H.

DEAR SENATOR GALLINGER: At a mass meeting of the people of New Hampshire held at the capital city, Thursday evening, November 11, under the auspices of the New Hampshire League for National Defense, the following preamble and resolutions were unanimously adopted:

"Whereas this Nation, established by the blood of the Revolution, preserved by the battles of the Civil War, and dedicated to human liberty, is now in our keeping as a sacred trust, which it is our duty to defend at whatever cost; and

"Whereas it has been shown that neither seas nor treaties nor neutrality nor the moral sense of the world are guaranties against invasion, and that our only safety lies in adequate military and naval preparation:

"Resolved by the people of New Hampshire, assembled in mass meeting, with the governor of the State presiding, That it is the duty of the President and Congress of the United States to proceed without unnecessary delay to make the Nation impregnable against foreign assault by land or by sea."

It was ordered that a copy be transmitted to the President and to the Members of Congress from New Hampshire.

Respectfully,

THOMAS H. WOLAHAN, Secretary.
CLARENCE E. CARR, President.

Mr. GALLINGER presented a petition of the Daughters of the North Lodge 46, Order of Vasa, of Manchester, N. H., praying for the placing of an embargo on munitions of war, which was referred to the Committee on Foreign Relations.

He also presented a memorial of the Society of Friends of Weare, N. H., and a memorial of Dr. and Mrs. A. L. Parker, of Concord, N. H., remonstrating against any increase in armament, which were referred to the Committee on Military Affairs.

He also presented petitions of sundry citizens of Concord, N. H., praying for an increased armament, which were referred to the Committee on Military Affairs.

Mr. SMITH of Michigan presented petitions of sundry citizens of Lupton, Rapid City, and Laingsburg, all in the State of Michigan, praying for national prohibition, which were referred to the Committee on the Judiciary.

He also presented petitions of the congregations of the Swedish Evangelical Lutheran Church of Manistee, of the Swedish Evangelical Church of Marquette, and of the Swedish Evangelical Church of Ludington, all in the State of Michigan, praying for the placing of an embargo on munitions of war, which were referred to the Committee on Foreign Relations.

Mr. LIPPITT. I present a petition of the Civic League of Newport, R. I., praying for the enactment of legislation at the present session of Congress authorizing an adequate appropriation to equip and maintain the Army and Navy of the United States for the defense of the country. I ask that the petition may be received and referred to the Committee on Military Affairs.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. HITCHCOCK. I present a petition from the American Neutrality and Peace Convention held at San Francisco, Cal., November 18, 1915, praying for the placing of an embargo on arms and ammunition. I ask that the petition be referred to the Committee on Foreign Relations.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The petition will be received and referred to the Committee on Foreign Relations.

Mr. WEEKS presented resolutions adopted at the Boston Laymen's Convention, of Boston, Mass., favoring the enactment of legislation to prohibit the exportation of intoxicating liquors to Africa, which were referred to the Committee on Foreign Relations.

He also presented resolutions adopted by the congregation of the Swedish Congregational Church, of Lynn, Mass., favoring the placing of an embargo on munitions of war, which were referred to the Committee on Foreign Relations.

Mr. WORKS presented a petition of 74 citizens of Hollister, Cal., praying for the enactment of legislation to provide a tax on liquors, which was referred to the Committee on Finance.

Mr. LODGE presented resolutions of the Federation of Churches of Massachusetts, favoring the promotion of peace, which were referred to the Committee on Foreign Relations.

He also presented petitions of sundry citizens of Massachusetts, praying for the placing of an embargo on the export of arms and munitions of war to belligerent nations in Europe, which were referred to the Committee on Military Affairs.

He also presented resolutions of the Congregational Ministers' Meeting, of Boston, Mass., favoring an appropriation for the publication of the report of the Commission on Industrial Relations, which were referred to the Committee on Appropriations.

He also presented resolutions of the city council of Worcester, Mass., favoring the construction of a canal from Worcester, Mass., to tidewater at Norwich, Conn., which were referred to the Committee on Commerce.

He also presented a memorial of the Society of Friends, of Amesbury, Mass., remonstrating against any increase in armament in the Army and Navy, which was referred to the Committee on Military Affairs.

He also presented a memorial of the British Veterans' Association of Fall River, Mass., remonstrating against the placing of an embargo on the export of munitions of war, which was referred to the Committee on Military Affairs.

VESSELS DETAINED BY BRITISH AUTHORITIES.

Mr. SMITH of Georgia. I wish to call attention to a statement regarding vessels detained by the British Government, made an exhibit in the last letter of the Secretary of State. I ask that it be printed in the RECORD.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Such will be the order unless there is objection. The Chair hears none.

The matter referred to is as follows:

APPENDIX No. 2.

STATEMENT REGARDING VESSELS DETAINED BY BRITISH AUTHORITIES.

SEPTEMBER 10, 1915.

(1) Vessels whose cargoes and papers have been of such a character as to require but brief time for examination have been held in British ports, according to this Government's information, for prolonged periods, in some instances for more than a month, and then released without the institution of prize-court proceedings.

The steamer Chester, which sailed from Baton Rouge for Rotterdam with a cargo of illuminating oil, was taken into Falmouth September 21, 1914, and held until November 4 of that year.

The steamer Ocean, carrying the same kind of a cargo from New York to Rotterdam, was taken into Plymouth September 23, 1914, and similarly released November 5.

The steamer Charlois and the steamer New York, carrying similar cargoes, were taken into British ports on September 30 and October 12, 1914, respectively, and similarly released on October 27.

The steamers American and Rotterdam, carrying cargoes of oil to Rotterdam, were also detained under conditions similar to those of the vessels just mentioned in the fall of 1914.

The steamer Christian Knudsen, carrying a cargo of oil in bulk, consigned to a Danish corporation in Copenhagen, was brought into the port of Kirkwall, detained for 11 days, and then released.

Vessels carrying oil from the United States to long-established markets in Scandinavian countries have repeatedly been detained without being sent to the prize court for adjudication. Among them may be mentioned the Brindilla, the Platuria, the Wico, the Polarine, the Pioneer, the Llama, the Muskogee, and the John D. Rockefeller.

The steamer Denver, which carried a full cargo of cotton from Norfolk to Bremen and which had been loaded under the supervision of a British consular officer, was taken into Kirkwall in January last, as the department was informed by the British Government, just to examine her papers and to verify her cargo.

The George W. Hawley was held for a month because she refused to comply with a requirement of the British authorities to discharge a single shipment, the illegal destination of which does not appear to have been disclosed by any evidence. The vessel carried a mixed cargo, including a shipment of oil. The British authorities insisted that the vessel should discharge the oil, which, the shipper represented, was consigned to one of its long-established agents in Sweden. Finally it was announced that the vessel would be released as an act of grace.

The steamer Wico was held by the British authorities last March. This Government was advised that the British minister at Stockholm had informed the Swedish foreign office that the vessel had arrived in a British port with a full cargo of oil for a concern in Stockholm, and that, in view of the recent seizure by a German man-of-war of the steamship Bryssel and her cargo, the British Government required complete assurances from the Swedish Government before the Wico could be allowed to proceed to destination that she would not share the fate of the Bryssel.

Subsequently this Government was informed that the vessel had been allowed to proceed, but that the British Government felt that, in the event of further cargoes going to Stockholm being seized by German ships, the whole question of permitting oil cargoes to proceed to that destination would have to be seriously reconsidered.

The steamer Llama, carrying a cargo of oil to a Scandinavian port, was taken into Kirkwall and subsequently released on June 5 last. After departing from Kirkwall the ship was again arrested on June 6, and although the officer of the war vessel which seized the Llama apparently was shown the ship's release papers, he placed a prize crew on board and ordered the vessel to Aberdeen and thence to Leith, where she was finally released on June 12, although she could not proceed until June 15, owing to a shortage of coal.

(2) Vessels have been held until they have reconsigned their cargoes to a consignee in a neutral country designated by the British Government.

The steamer Seguranca, which carried a general cargo from New York to the Netherlands, was detained at a great loss to the owners of the vessel and to the shippers in a British port for the greater part of last April, in order that her cargo might be reconsigned to the Netherlands Oversea Trust. The manifest showed that the entire cargo was consigned to named consignees in the Netherlands and was accompanied by a certificate of the British consul general in New York, stating that the loading was supervised by his inspector and that the vessel contained no cargo other than that specified in the manifest. A large part of the cargo, consisting of fresh fruit stored in the hold of the vessel, was subject to decay with great rapidity.

A similar requirement was imposed on the steamer F. J. Lisman, which during last June was detained at London. It appears that, after a prolonged detention of the ship of over a month, representatives of the shippers were compelled to discharge both contraband and noncontraband articles, and that the captain and the shippers, finding their efforts to comply with the requirements of the British authorities hopeless, abandoned the voyage.

The steamers A. A. Raven and Vitalia, carrying articles listed as conditional contraband, were detained in a British port in March last until the goods shipped to specified consignees in Holland could be consigned to the Netherlands Oversea Trust.

The steamer Neches was detained last May for about two weeks in order that a shipment of cotton destined for Rotterdam might be consigned to the Netherlands Oversea Trust.

The steamer Zzandjik was detained last June, as the department was informed, while the British minister at The Hague made inquiries as to whether the Netherlands Oversea Trust had accepted the consignment of the cargo.

(3) Detentions have been made without evidence amounting to probable cause. The steamer Annam, which was detained at Kirkwall last April, carried a cargo of food products from the United States to Swedish ports. She was detained owing to a "suspicion," as the British Government stated, that a part of its cargo was destined for Germany.

The steamer Dronning Olga was detained at Kirkwall in April last, and the cargo, which consisted of cotton and food products, was placed in the prize court on the ground, as the department was informed by the British Government, that it was "believed" that it was ultimately destined for Germany.

The steamer Hilding, which sailed from New York for Copenhagen with a general cargo consisting largely of food products, was seized and taken into Leith last April, and this Government was informed that the cargo had been seized as contraband, with the expectation of holding it under the Order in Council of March 11, 1915, if the charge that the goods were contraband should fail.

Numerous similar instances might be cited.

The steamers Christian Knudsen and Platuria, carrying oil from New York to Denmark, were detained by the British authorities last fall, taken into British ports, and held until the British Government, as they stated, could make an investigation as to the destination of the cargoes. Furthermore, this Government was informed that the vessels had been detained pending the receipt of guarantees from Denmark against the exportation of the cargoes, and that the orders were given for the release of the vessels on the receipt of satisfactory guarantees.

The steamer Brindilla, which sailed from New York October 13 last with a cargo of oil for Alexandria, was taken into port at Halifax and later released, as the department was informed, when the British authorities received information that the ship's cargo was expected at Alexandria.

The steamer Ambra was taken into a British port in July last, and this Government was informed that this vessel was held pending inquiries that had been instituted concerning destination of certain items of her cargo. About a week later the vessel was allowed to proceed.

In July last this Government was informed by the British Government that the prolonged detention of the oil steamers Polarine, Platuria, and Pioneer was due to the fact that His Majesty's Government's attention had latterly been drawn to the very large quantites of oil which had been shipped to Scandinavian countries during the last few months; that there had been every reason to suspect that some of the oil was destined for enemy countries; and that the arrival of the steamers in quick succession necessitated the institution of inquiries as to the ultimate destination of the oil.

The owners of these vessels and their cargoes complained to the Government of the United States against their detention, stating that the vessels carried the usual cargoes consigned in good faith to long-established subsidiaries in neutral countries, and further representing that since supplies from Russia and Roumania had been prevented from entering Scandinavian ports a large increase of business with them had been expected, but it had been found that during the first five months of the year 1915 total shipments of all petroleum products to these countries were less than for the same period last year, although business in previous years had steadily increased.

(4) Vessels have been held, according to statements of the British Government, because of the manner in which shipments have been consigned.

The steamer Einerjarl was brought into Kirkwall last May and its cargo of cottonseed cake, shipped from Newport News to Denmark, which the shippers represented was to be used exclusively for consumption in Denmark, was seized. This Government was informed that the cargo was discharged because it was consigned "to order."

The steamers Alfred, Nobel, Bjorstjerne, Bjornsen, and Friedland were seized last autumn because their cargoes were consigned "to order."

The shipments on the steamers America and Artemis have been placed in prize court under the Order in Council of March 11, 1915, because, the goods being consigned by the shippers to themselves, there was no guarantee of their ultimate destination.

(5) Goods have been seized by the British Government on the ground, as this Government has been informed, that the country to which they were shipped had not prohibited their export.

In the fall of the year 1914 copper shipped from the United States to Sweden on the steamers Francisco, Antares, Idaho, Tyr, and Toronto was seized by the British authorities because, as the British Government stated, the Swedish Government had not yet prohibited the reexportation of copper from Sweden.

A consignment of rubber on the Swedish ship Zamora had been placed in prize court last January because, as the British Government stated, of the absence of a comprehensive prohibition on the exportation of rubber in all its forms from Denmark.

(6) The British authorities have repeatedly seized articles classified as contraband, articles classified as conditional contraband, as well as noncontraband goods, shipped to Scandinavian countries, to the Netherlands, and to Italy, then neutral, although the reexportation of such commodities from these countries had been forbidden.

In December last the steamer Tellus was ordered to discharge a shipment of copper shipped from New York directly to a consignee in Milan, Italy, although by an Italian decree of November 13, 1914, the exportation of goods shipped in this manner was forbidden.

The steamer Joseph W. Fordney was seized 4 miles off the coast of Norway and in charge of a prize crew brought into Kirkwall April 8 last. The ship's manifest showed that the cargo consisted entirely of cattle fodder, consigned to a person in Malmo, Sweden. It appeared, from information presented to this Government, that an affidavit regarding the character and destination of the cargo, made by the shipper of the entire cargo, was attached to the bill of lading, and that this affidavit contained a certification by the British consul general and Swedish consul and also a statement by the latter to the effect that the exportation from Sweden of the goods of which the cargo consisted was prohibited. The vessel was brought into a British port and her cargo discharged. This Government was informed by the British Government that, apart from the uncertainty of the address of the consignee of the cargo of this vessel, His Majesty's Government had evidence that the cargo was not destined for bona fide Swedish consumption, but was intended for Germany.

Numerous other similar instances might be cited, including those of the detention of vessels carrying oil to Scandinavian ports which have been mentioned.

(7) Detentions have been made pending assurances that embargoed goods would be allowed to pass through a neutral country to Great Britain's allies.

The steamer Leelanaw, which carried a cargo of cotton from Galveston to Gothenburg for transshipment to Moscow, was detained in a British port early in June last. Relative to the detention of this vessel the British foreign office said:

"In view of the fact that cotton has now been placed on the Swedish prohibition of export list, His Majesty's Government have not considered it advisable to allow this large cargo to go on to Gothenburg until they are assured that there is a fair chance of it reaching its declared ultimate destination."

After a nearly a month's detention the vessel was released on the understanding that she should proceed directly to Archangel.

The steamers Jentland and Syrius appear to have been recently detained under circumstances similar to those of the steamer Leelanaw.

(8) From time to time this Government has been informed of the seizure of cargoes on the ground that consignees have been known to trade with the enemy or because they were suspected of doing so.

In January last this Government was advised by the British Government that the British Government had been compelled to place in prize court a consignment of rubber on board the Swedish vessel Zamora, the consignee of these goods being regarded with grave suspicion, and there being reason to believe that the ultimate destination of the rubber was the enemy forces.

(9) Vessels have been seized and brought into port and have been required by the British authorities to pay pilotage, harbor, unlading, warehouse, storage, or other dues, costs, and expenses in advance of a judicial determination of the validity of the seizure of vessel or cargo.

Instances of such treatment of vessels may be found in the cases of the detention of the steamer Neches last May, the Ogeechee, which was seized last April, and the Antilla, which was seized in February last and subjected to a prolonged detention. In the case of the last-mentioned ship it appears, however that the cost of discharging was borne by the British Government.

(10) Detentions of vessels proceeding from European ports:

The steamer Ogeechee, which left Bremen April 3 last for the United States, was detained at Sharpness and compelled to discharge its entire cargo, which consisted of approximately 200 shipments of goods urgently needed by American citizens. In most, if not all, cases it appears that ownership of these goods at the time of the seizure had passed to American consignees. In many instances American citizens had contracted for the sale of the goods consigned to them and were prevented from carrying out their contracts.

The release of shipments on the vessel has been allowed on the production of proofs of American ownership of the goods prior to March 11, 1915. American consignees, in order to avoid loss, have endeavored to comply with the requirements in the presentation of proofs.

The steamer Neches, which sailed from Rotterdam to the United States, was brought to London and compelled in June last to discharge cargo on the ground, apparently, that the goods originated partly in Belgium. The vessel was detained about a month, and after having been damaged to the extent of approximately £1,500 as a result of a collision with another vessel while under the control of the British admiralty, and after having been involved in litigation growing out of such collision, was allowed to proceed.

The following is a list of the vessels detained prior to March 11 last, among which are some regarding the detention of which details have been briefly stated in this memorandum:

Platuria, Brindilla, John D. Rockefeller, Kroonland, Noorham, Rotterdam, Sandefjord, Thomas J. Fordney, Fram, Edward Pierce, Ellen, Tellus, Sif, Kim, Canton, Ogeechee, Friedland, Gallileo, Uller, Verona, Zuiderdijk, Greenbrier, Herm, Arkansas, Ascot, Carolyn, Breiford, Bergensfjord, Bjornstjerne, Bjornsen, Ida Cuneo, Kentucky, General Minetonka, General Caloric, Denver.

The following is an incomplete list of vessels carrying American cargoes which, sailing in practically all instances from American to Scandinavian ports, were diverted by British authorities to the port of Kirkwall, or called at that port under instructions from owners, from March 11, 1915, to June 17, 1915:

REPORTS OF COMMITTEE ON INDUSTRIAL RELATIONS.

Mr. FLETCHER. I have a communication from the director of the Committee on Industrial Relations on the subject of printing the reports and testimony of that committee. The communication goes into details to some extent, and I ask that it may be printed in the RECORD and referred to the Committee on Printing.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. It will be printed in the RECORD, unless there is objection.

The communication is as follows:

COMMITTEE ON INDUSTRIAL RELATIONS,
Washington, D. C., December 3, 1915.

Senator FLETCHER,
United States Senate, Washington, D. C.

DEAR SIR: Inclosed is a brief statement showing the purposes of this committee.

As you will note by this statement our first task will be to urge upon Congress the publication of the reports and testimony of the Commission on Industrial Relations in such editions as will place this material at the disposal of every citizen who is interested in the vital problems of industrial relations.

The commission's final appropriation from Congress was to include the cost of printing reports. This mandate of Congress was fulfilled by the commission.

In order to reserve funds for this purpose it became necessary to curtail several very important investigations and to cancel public hearings which had been scheduled for Boston, Atlanta, and Pittsburgh. By thus curtailing or canceling some of its more important investigations the commission was able to finance the publication of 10,000 copies of a volume containing the report of Mr. Basil M. Manly, director of research and investigation, in which he summarized the testimony and reports of the staff, and the reports of the majority and minority members of the commission, and 6,000 copies each of the report of Mr. George P. West on the Colorado strike and the report of Mr. Luke Grant on the International Association of Bridge and Structural Iron Workers and the National Erectors' Association.

The edition of the final report published by the commission was exhausted at once by the necessity of sending copies to Members of Congress, public libraries, witnesses, editors, public officials, and to several thousand persons who had written to the commission prior to its expiration on August 23, asking that their names be placed on the mailing list. Since August 23 many thousands of requests for copies have been received by Members of Congress, the superintendent of public documents, and members of the commission. An attempt is now being made to assemble these requests, in order to furnish you with a close estimate of the number of those who have written letters or post cards asking for copies of the report. This great number of requests was received in spite of the efforts of the commission to notify the interested public that no more copies of the report were available. Trade and labor newspapers announced before September 1 that the edition had been exhausted. If this fact had not been common knowledge the number of requests received would have been many times as great.

In addition to the reports the commission submitted to Congress the equivalent of 7,300 printed pages of testimony taken at the public hearings which were held in the larger cities and industrial centers from coast to coast.

This testimony is of the very greatest immediate and historic value. It constitutes a picture of the social and industrial life of our Nation, more true, more vivid, and more complete than was ever before placed at the disposal of a generation to enable it to come to a correct solution of its social and industrial problems. The hearings occupied in all 154 days, or more than the equivalent of six months of the commission's time. One or more hearings were held in each of the following cities: Washington; New York; Paterson; Philadelphia; Boston; Chicago; Lead, S. Dak.; Butte; Seattle; Portland; San Francisco; Los Angeles; Denver; and Dallas. Witnesses were by no means limited to these communities, but in every case the best informed persons were brought to the centers at which the hearings were held. Of the 740 witnesses who appeared before the commission 230 were employers, managers, foremen, representatives of employers' organizations, attorneys for employers, efficiency engineers, employment agents, or capitalists, bankers, or directors. Of those affiliated with labor there were 245, including trade-union officials, working men and women, attorneys, Industrial Workers of the World, and representatives of the Socialist Party. Another group of witnesses, numbering 265, were not affiliated with either the employing or the labor group. These included agriculturists, attorneys, public officials, educators, economists, sociologists, investigators, representatives of the press, clergymen, and physicians.

At several of the hearings the problems of farm labor and farm tendency were thoroughly gone into, and much of this material is of more interest to those engaged in agriculture than to those living in industrial centers.

Taken together, the testimony not only constitutes a remarkable presentation of the facts regarding social and industrial conditions; but, equally important, presents a true and impressive record of the beliefs, feelings, and personal reactions that must be taken into account in any effort to understand industrial problems and to improve industrial relations. The commission disregarded at all times the paralyzing formalism of conventional court procedure, and by encouraging the frankest expression obtained a record such as never before has been made available for students, legislators, and citizens generally.

The American Federation of Labor, through the report of its executive council, which was unanimously adopted by the convention in San Francisco, had the following to say in regard to the value of the commission's hearings:

"The commission worked upon the theory that industrial problems can only be solved by arousing the will and conscience of the American people, and conducted their public hearings in conformity with this policy. They proceeded upon the theory that not only their final report and their written declarations would be helpful in accomplishing the task assigned them, but that the most powerful influence would be exerted by enabling those individuals that had first-hand information to get their stories to the American people. This policy caused criticism from some sources, because it was not molded upon judicial procedure, but the chairman as well as the members of the commission knew that judicial ethics and judicial precedents have thus far failed to establish industrial justice, and they knew that they had to do away with all formalism in order to get at the heart of the matter. The hearings that have been held in various parts of the country have been of tremendous human interest. They have revealed the daily lives of the people of all walks of life and their relations with their fellow men. The testimony given in these hearings carried with it the conviction of actual experiences and existing misery."

The American Federation of Labor and thousands of local unions throughout the country have adopted resolutions asking that Congress order the printing of the full testimony and reports.

Many employers have added their voice to those of the enormous group of wage earners, professional men, economists, and students who have asked in vain for copies of the reports and the transcript of testimony, and who look to Congress to supply the demand.

The committee has prepared estimates showing that all of the reports and all of the testimony of the Commission can be printed at an expense greatly below that incurred in printing the reports of other Federal commissions that have reported to Congress in recent years.

The publications of the Commission which it is believed Congress should order would include:

	Pages.
Final report	450
Testimony	7,300
Colorado report	250
Total	8,000

The report of the Industrial Commission of 1901 consisted of 19 volumes, containing 14,377 pages.

The report of the Immigration Commission of 1909 consisted of 42 volumes, containing 28,489 pages.

The report of the Monetary Commission of 1912 consisted of 47 volumes, containing 13,028 pages.

This committee respectfully submits that none of the subjects treated by these commissions touched the vital interests of the people as closely as does that of industrial relations.

After carefully estimating the demand we feel justified in urging that Congress authorize an edition of 200,000 copies of the final report of the commission, and the Colorado report with the Rockefeller correspondence attached. This correspondence is of the very greatest interest and importance because it sheds light on the question of directors' and stockholders' responsibility for labor conditions in great industrial corporations. It was not included in the edition of the Colorado report published by the commission, and unless Congress orders it printed it will not be available to the public. The final report of Mr. Manly, as director, and of the various commissioners, occupies 450 pages. The Colorado report with the Rockefeller correspondence attached will occupy 250 pages. We are, therefore, asking for 200,000 copies of a volume containing only 700 pages.

No such edition of the testimony taken by the commission will be required. We have estimated that this testimony in printed form can be supplied to the public libraries, chambers of commerce, trade-union reading rooms, and colleges, and through them made available to the public, by printing 10,000 copies. We accordingly, respectfully, urge that Congress order the publication of this number.

The constant endeavor of the commission during its existence was to share with the people all the information and the enlightenment which came to the commission itself in the course of its hearings and investigations. To a large extent the commission succeeded in this endeavor through the cooperation of the press. But much of the value of the work will be utterly lost unless the reports and testimony are made available for ready reference to publicists, students, legislators, public officials, and interested citizens.

No question now claiming your consideration is of such vital importance as the question of what constitutes the right relations between those who toil in field and factory and those who own and manage industry. The future peace and well being of the Nation depend on a proper working out of our industrial problem. In a democracy such as ours that problem can be worked out in only one way—through the will and conscience of the people. That will and conscience must, in turn, be founded on a full understanding of all the facts. Therefore, in asking that the material gathered by the commission be placed at the public's disposal, we ask that you take that action which, more than any other which is open to you, will make for a solution of our most pressing problem.

When it became apparent prior to August 23 that the entire edition of 10,000 copies of the final report printed by the commission would be exhausted at once, the chairman of the commission ordered that 600 copies of the report be reserved for the use of Members of Congress who might mislay the copies that were mailed to them. These 600 copies are now in the custody of Mr. Walsh, and a copy will be furnished you if you address this office.

Respectfully, yours,

BASIL M. MANLY, Director.

OCEAN FREIGHT RATES.

Mr. FLETCHER. I ask to have printed in the RECORD a report submitted to me by the American delegates to the International Institute of Agriculture at Rome, and an excerpt from the minutes of that institute regarding the resolution passed by Congress——

Mr. SMOOT. There is so much noise in the Chamber I can not hear the request of the Senator from Florida.

Mr. FLETCHER. I ask to have printed in the RECORD an excerpt from the minutes of the International Institute of Agriculture at Rome, respecting the action taken regarding the resolution passed by Congress bearing on the question of ocean freights.

Mr. SMOOT. The article does not include the whole of the minutes?

Mr. FLETCHER. No; only excerpts with reference to the particular resolution. It is not very long.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Unless there is objection, the request of the Senator from Florida will be granted. The Chair hears none.

The matter referred to is as follows:

INTERNATIONAL INSTITUTE OF AGRICULTURE,
ROME, ITALY.

(Excerpts.)

PRESENTATION TO THE PERMANENT COMMITTEE OF THE INTERNATIONAL INSTITUTE OF AGRICULTURE, FEBRUARY 27, 1915, OF CERTAIN RESOLUTIONS PASSED BY THE CONGRESS OF THE UNITED STATES OF AMERICA.

The PRESIDENT. I wish to remind the permanent committee that the resolution passed by the United States Congress was already communicated to the committee last October. As the American delegate was then in the United States, it was decided to defer action until his return. I now give Mr. Lubin the floor.

Mr. LUBIN (delegate of the United States). In accordance with instructions from the Government of the United States, I herewith present to the permanent committee the following resolutions of Congress:

"Joint resolution instructing the American delegate to the International Institute of Agriculture to present to the permanent committee for action at the general assembly in 1915 certain resolutions.

"Resolved by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That in accordance with the authority of letter (f) of article 9 of the treaty establishing the institute, which provides that it 'shall submit to the approval of the Governments, if there be need, measures for the protection of the common interests of farmers,' the American delegate to the International Institute of Agriculture is hereby instructed to present (during the 1914 fall sessions) to the permanent committee the following resolutions, to the end that they may be submitted for action at the general assembly in 1915, so as to permit the proposed conference to be held in Rome during the fortnight preceding the session of the general assembly of the institute in 1917.

"Resolutions: The general assembly instructs the International Institute of Agriculture to invite the adhering Governments to participate in an international conference on the subject of steadying the world's price of the staples.

"This conference shall consist of members appointed by each of the Governments adhering to the institute and is to consider the advisability of formulating a convention for the establishment of a permanent international commerce commission on merchant marine and on ocean freight rates with consultative, deliberative, and advisory powers.

"Said conference to be held in Rome during the fortnight preceding the session of the general assembly of the institute in 1917."

I now move that the proposal contained in the above resolutions be placed on the program of the next general assembly.

Mr. DOP (delegate of France). In the first place, I wish to express our thanks to the delegate of the United States, and through him to the Government of his country. By placing before the institute so important a question as that of ocean freight rates the United States is taking a direct and effective step toward the solution of a problem which is of the greatest economic and political importance to the whole world. Ocean freight rates have become the pivot on which turns the whole problem of the cost of cereals. It is therefore both the duty and the interest of the International Institute of Agriculture to accept with the greatest favor the proposal laid before it. Consequently I feel justified in stating that my Government will be quite willing to accept the proposal made by the Government of the United States.

Mr. DE MIKLOS (delegate of Hungary). I wish here to declare that my Government has authorized me to give its adherence to the proposal made by the Government of the United States that the next general assembly should deal with the question of ocean freight rates.

Mr. ZABIELLO (delegate of Russia). I wish to congratulate Mr. Lubin on the great success he has had and on the valuable work he has performed in his country by getting the Government of the United States to ask that the question of ocean freight rates be placed on the program of the general assembly. The proposal is one of the greatest importance, more especially for my country, which, in the matter of ocean freight rates, is almost entirely dependent on other countries. I can only express my entire support of the proposal that the question of ocean freight rates be made part of the program of the next general assembly.

Dr. MULLER (delegate of Germany). I wish to associate myself to the congratulations which have been addressed to Mr. Lubin for his initiative. I have not been instructed by my Government to make a special declaration on the motion before us, but I can state that my Government takes a great interest in this question. If the question is to be studied by the general assembly or by a special conference it is, however, necessary that a preliminary study be made. Consequently I would ask that the general secretary be instructed to take up this subject as thoroughly as possible.

Mr. DE POZZI (delegate of Austria). In the first place, I wish to declare myself heartily in favor of the motion presented by Mr. Lubin. I make a motion that a reporter be at once named to study the question, together with the proper bureau of the institute.

Sir JAMES WILSON (delegate of Great Britain). I wish to give my entire support to the motion presented by Mr. Lubin that the resolutions of Congress be placed before the next general assembly. I agree, however, with the president that next October will be the proper time for deciding whether the bureau should be ordered to draw up a report on the subject dealt with in the resolutions passed by the Congress of the United States, which call for a special conference to be held. As the date of the general assembly is postponed, there is no call for immediate action in this matter.

Mr. ALDUNATE (delegate of Chili). As the representative of a country which does not possess a merchant marine, I deem it proper for me to say a few words. The whole of Latin America has at present to submit to the freight rates formed in the great countries which possess powerful merchant marines. It is therefore of the utmost importance for our countries, for their economic and commercial prosperity, that a neutral ground be found, such as is afforded by this institute, in which it is possible for us not only to get in touch with those countries which determine freight rates, but where we may find some protection for our interests which are at stake. I deem it proper to make this statement at this time, so that those who have this matter in their hands may take into due consideration the situation of those countries which are at their mercy in this respect, but which, nevertheless, are of great importance to the merchant-marine countries, as it is they who supply the goods to be carried, and as they also largely supply Europe with her foodstuffs and with the raw material for her factories. Consequently, and speaking in the name of my Government, although I have not received direct instructions on this point, but interpreting faithfully the economic policy to which it constantly adheres, I wish to give my full support to the proposal which has been brought before the permanent committee by the Congress of the United States.

Mr. PIÑEIRO SORONDO (delegate of Argentina). First of all, I wish to congratulate Mr. Lubin on the fact that, thanks to his efforts, this important question has been brought before us by the Congress of the United States. It is a question of exceptional importance for the Argentine, which has not got a merchant marine, and which now finds itself compelled to pay enormous freight rates in order to export its products, freight rates which amount in certain cases to fully half the value of the product.

Mr. ROVIRA (delegate of Uruguay). I entirely agree with the remarks which have just been made by the delegate of Argentina, and which hold good for the country which I represent. The resolution passed by Congress has my hearty support.

The PRESIDENT. I put to the vote the motion submitted by Mr. Lubin, that the proposal relative to ocean freight rates, contained in the resolutions passed by the Congress of the United States, be made part of the program of the next general assembly of the institute.

The motion was carried unanimously.

A NAVAL AUXILIARY MERCHANT MARINE (S. DOC. NO. 4).

Mr. FLETCHER. I ask unanimous consent to have printed for the use of the Senate document room 20,000 extra copies of the speech of Hon. W. G. McAdoo, Secretary of the Treasury, before the Chamber of Commerce of Indianapolis.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Should it not be referred first to the Committee on Printing before acted upon?

Mr. FLETCHER. Not necessarily.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from Florida asks unanimous consent to have printed 20,000 extra copies of the speech indicated. Is there objection? The Chair hears none, and it is so ordered.

The order was reduced to writing, as follows:

Ordered, That 20,000 extra copies of the speech of Hon. W. G. McAdoo, Secretary of the Treasury, before the Chamber of Commerce of Indianapolis, Ind., October 13, 1915, on the subject of a naval auxiliary merchant marine be printed for the use of the Senate document room.

WOMAN SUFFRAGE.

Mr. SUTHERLAND. I introduce a joint resolution proposing an amendment to the Constitution of the United States conferring upon women the right of suffrage, which I ask may be printed in the RECORD. It is very short.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Unless there is objection, such will be the order. There is no committee to which the joint resolution can be referred. All petitions, bills, and joint resolutions must be introduced and laid on the table for further action by the Senate.

The joint resolution (S. J. Res. 1) proposing an amendment to the Constitution of the United States conferring upon women the right of suffrage was read twice by its title and ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

Resolved by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled (two-thirds of each House concurring therein), That the following article be proposed to the legislatures of the several States as an amendment to the Constitution of the United States, which, when ratified by three-fourths of the said legislatures, shall be valid as part of said Constitution, namely:

"ARTICLE —.

"SECTION 1. The right of citizens of the United States to vote shall not be denied or abridged by the United States or by any State on account of sex.

"SEC. 2. The Congress shall have power, by appropriate legislation, to enforce the provisions of this article."

Mr. THOMAS. Mr. President, on behalf of the National American Association of Woman Suffrage, I present a joint resolution providing for an amendment to the Constitution.

Mr. GALLINGER. Mr. President, I rise to a parliamentary inquiry.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Does the Senator from Colorado yield to the Senator from New Hampshire to submit a parliamentary inquiry?

Mr. THOMAS. Yes; I yield for an inquiry.

Mr. GALLINGER. Did I understand correctly the Chair to state that there are no committees to which bills can be referred?

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. That is true. Under the resolution of the last Congress arranging the committees they were, as the Chair recalls, limited in their existence to that Congress.

Mr. GALLINGER. We have been uniformly in the habit heretofore of recognizing the existence of committees until new committees have been appointed.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Chair is not informed that that has been the custom, and he was simply governed by the text of the resolution appointing the committees. The Senator himself introduced such a resolution in 1911, limiting its provisions to the Sixty-second Congress. The Chair has no desire to disregard any practice that has grown up.

Mr. GALLINGER. I think no such resolution was introduced during the last session.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Chair assumes that it was the customary resolution, but we can determine that in a few minutes. The Chair will request the Secretary to get the Journal.

Mr. SMOOT. Mr. President, I wish to call attention to the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD of March 2, 1915, page 5067.

Mr. THOMAS. I yield for that purpose.

Mr. SMOOT. I will ask the Senator to pardon me. I did not know the Senator had the floor.

Mr. THOMAS. I have the floor, but I yield for that purpose.

Mr. SMOOT. Pardon me for not asking the Senator to yield.

Mr. THOMAS. The Senator is entirely excusable.

Mr. SMOOT. I quote from the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD of March 2, 1915, page 5067, as follows:

STANDING COMMITTEES OF THE SENATE.

Mr. KERN. I have a formal resolution that it is necessary to have passed. I ask unanimous consent for its present consideration.

The resolution (S. Res. 559) was read, considered by unanimous consent, and agreed to, as follows:

"Resolved, That the standing committees of the Senate as constituted at the end of this session be, and they are hereby, continued until the next session of Congress or until their successors are duly elected."

That resolution was adopted by the Senate.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. In view of the suggestion of the Senator from Utah, the Chair stands corrected, and all the bills introduced will be read the first and second times and referred to the appropriate committees. The joint resolution introduced by the Senator from Utah [Mr. SUTHERLAND] will be appropriately referred.

UNITED STATES COURT AT SHANGHAI, CHINA.

Mr. SAULSBURY. I introduce a bill relative to the United States court at Shanghai, China. I ask the attention of the chairmen of the Committee on the Judiciary and of the Committee on Foreign Relations, as I am in doubt to which committee it should be referred. I myself think it should go to the Committee on Foreign Relations.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Chair is inclined to think it should be referred to the Committee on the Judiciary.

Mr. SAULSBURY. I think, if the Chair please, that the bill should be referred to the Committee on Foreign Relations.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator can have his choice about it. It can go to whatever committee he desires.

Mr. SAULSBURY. I ask that it be referred to the Committee on Foreign Relations.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. That will be the order, in the absence of objection.

The bill (S. 24) to supplement existing legislation relative to the United States court for China and to increase the serviceability thereof was read twice by its title and referred to the Committee on Foreign Relations.

WATER-POWER SITES.

Mr. SMOOT. I introduce a bill providing for the acquisition by a State, under certain conditions, of any lands therein which are or may become chiefly valuable for the development of water power.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. That general question is before the Committee on Commerce. In what way does this bill differ from other bills on the general subject?

Mr. SMOOT. I will say that this bill has reference to the establishment of water-power sites upon public lands within the different States.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Has the bill heretofore been before Congress?

Mr. SMOOT. It does not involve the question of commerce at all. That is embraced in an entirely different bill.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The bill will be referred to the Committee on Public Lands.

The bill (S. 44) providing for the acquisition by a State, under certain conditions, of any lands therein which are or may become chiefly valuable for the development of water power was read twice by its title and referred to the Committee on Public Lands.

VOCATIONAL EDUCATION.

Mr. SMITH of Georgia. I introduce a bill to provide for the promotion of vocational education which was presented in the last Congress, and I should like to have it read, referred, and printed in the RECORD.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Unless there is objection, such will be the order. The Chair hears none.

The bill (S. 703) to provide for the promotion of vocational education; to provide for cooperation with the States in the promotion of such education in agriculture and the trades and industries; to provide for cooperation with the States in the preparation of teachers of vocational subjects; and to appropriate money and regulate its expenditure was read twice by its title, referred to the Committee on Education and Labor, and ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

A bill (S. 703) to provide for the promotion of vocational education; to provide for cooperation with the States in the promotion of such education in agriculture and the trades and industries; to provide for cooperation with the States in the preparation of teachers of vocational subjects; and to appropriate money and regulate its expenditure.

Be it enacted, etc., That there is hereby annually appropriated out of the money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated the sums provided in sections 2, 3, and 4 of this act, to be paid to the respective States for the purpose of cooperating with the States in paying the salaries of teachers, supervisors, and directors of agricultural subjects, and of teachers of trade and industrial subjects, and in the preparation of teachers of agricultural, trade, and industrial, and home economics subjects; and the sum provided for in section 7 to the Federal Board for Vocational Education for the administration of this act, and for the purpose of making studies, investigations, and reports to aid in the organization and conduct of vocational education, which sums shall be expended as hereinafter provided.

SEC. 2. That for the purpose of cooperating with the States in paying the salaries of teachers, supervisors, or directors of agricultural subjects there is hereby appropriated to the States, for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1916, the sum of $500,000; for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1917, the sum of $750,000; for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1918, the sum of $1,000,000; for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1919, the sum of $1,250,000; for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1920, the sum of $1,500,000; for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1921, the sum of $1,750,000; for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1922, the sum of $2,000,000; for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1923, the sum of $2,500,000; for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1924, and annually thereafter, the sum of $3,000,000. Said sums shall be allotted to the States in the proportion which their rural population bears to the total rural population in the United States, not including outlying possessions, according to the last preceding United States census: Provided, That the allotment of funds to any State shall be not less than a minimum of $5,000 for any fiscal year prior to and including the fiscal year ending June 30, 1922, nor less than $10,000 for any fiscal year thereafter; and there is hereby appropriated the following sums, or so much thereof as may be necessary, for the purpose of providing the minimum allotment to the States provided for in this section: For the fiscal year ending June 30, 1916, the sum of $48,000; for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1917, the sum of $34,000; for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1918, the sum of $24,000; for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1919, the sum of $18,000; for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1920, the sum of $14,000; for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1921, the sum of $11,000; for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1922, the sum of $9,000; for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1923, the sum of $34,000, and annually thereafter the sum of $27,000.

SEC. 3. That for the purpose of cooperating with the States in paying the salaries of teachers of trade and industrial subjects there is hereby appropriated to the States, for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1916, the sum of $500,000; for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1917, the sum of $750,000; for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1918, the sum of $1,000,000; for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1919, the sum of $1,250,000; for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1920, the sum of $1,500,000; for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1921, the sum of $1,750,000; for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1922, the sum of $2,000,000; for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1923, the sum of $2,500,000; for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1924, the sum of $3,000,000, and annually thereafter the sum of $3,000,000. Said sums shall be allotted to the States in the proportion which their urban population bears to the total urban population in the United States, not including outlying possessions, according to the last preceding United States census: Provided, That the allotment of funds to any State shall be not less than a minimum of $5,000 for any fiscal year prior to and including the fiscal year ending June 30, 1922, nor less than $10,000 for any fiscal year thereafter, and there is hereby appropriated the following sums, or so much thereof as may be needed for the purpose of providing the minimum allotment to the States provided for in this section; for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1916, the sum of $66,000; for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1917, the sum of $46,000; for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1918, the sum of $34,000; for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1919, the sum of $28,000; for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1920, the sum of $25,000; for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1921, the sum of $22,000; for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1922, the sum of $19,000; for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1923, the sum of $56,000; for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1924, and annually thereafter, the sum of $50,000.

SEC. 4. That for the purpose of cooperating with the States in preparing teachers, supervisors, and directors of agricultural subjects, and teachers of trade and industrial and home economics subjects, there is hereby appropriated to the States, for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1916, the sum of $500,000; for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1907, the sum of $700,000; for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1918, the sum of $900,000; for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1919, and annually thereafter, the sum of $1,000,000. Said sums shall be allotted to the States in the proportion which their population bears to the total population of the United States, not including outlying possessions, according to the last preceding United States census: Provided, That the allotment of funds to any State shall be not less than a minimum of $5,000 for any fiscal year prior to and including the fiscal year ending June 30, 1918, nor less than $10,000 for any fiscal year thereafter. And there is hereby appropriated the following sums, or so much thereof as may be needed, for the purpose of providing the minimum allotment provided for in this section: For the fiscal year ending June 30, 1916, the sum of $46,000; for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1917, the sum of $32,000; for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1918, the sum of $24,000; for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1919, and annually thereafter, the sum of $90,000.

SEC. 5. That in order to secure the benefits of the appropriations provided for in sections 2, 3, and 4 of this act, any State shall, through the legislative authority thereof, accept the provisions of this act, and designate or create a State board, consisting of not less than three members, and having all necessary power to cooperate, as herein provided, with the Federal Board for Vocational Education in the administration of the provisions of this act. The State board of education or other board having charge of the administration of public education in the State, or any State board having charge of the administration of any kind of vocational education in the State, may, if the State so elect, be designated as the State board for the purposes of this act.

Any State may accept the benefits of any one or more of the respective funds herein appropriated, and it may defer the acceptance of the benefits of any one or more of such funds, and shall be required to meet only the conditions relative to the fund or funds the benefits of which it has accepted: Provided, That after June 30, 1917, no State shall receive any appropriation for salaries of teachers, supervisors, or directors of agricultural subjects unless it shall have taken advantage of at least the minimum amount appropriated for the training of teachers, supervisors, or directors of agricultural subjects, as provided for in this act, and that after said date no State shall receive any appropriation for the salaries of teachers of trade and industrial subjects unless it shall have taken advantage of at least the minimum amount appropriated for the training of teachers of trade and industrial subjects, as provided for in this act.

SEC. 6. That a Federal Board for Vocational Education is hereby created, to consist of the Postmaster General, the Secretary of the Interior, the Secretary of Agriculture, the Secretary of Commerce, and the Secretary of Labor. The board shall organize and elect one of its members as chairman. The board shall have power to cooperate with State boards in carrying out the provisions of this act. It shall be the duty of the Federal Board for Vocational Education to make, or cause to have made, studies, investigations, and reports, with particular reference to their use in aiding the States in the establishment of vocational schools and classes and in giving instruction in agriculture, trades and industries, commerce and commercial pursuits, and home economics. Such studies, investigations, and reports shall include agriculture and agricultural processes and requirements upon agricultural workers; trades, industries, and apprenticeships, trade and industrial requirements upon industrial workers, and classification of industrial processes and pursuits; commerce and commercial pursuits and requirements upon commercial workers; home processes and problems and requirements upon home workers; and problems of administration of vocational schools and of courses of study and instruction in vocational subjects.

Such studies, investigations, and reports concerning agriculture, for the purposes of agricultural education, shall, so far as practicable, be made in cooperation with or through the Department of Agriculture; such studies, investigations, and reports concerning trades and industries, for the purposes of trade and industrial education, shall, so far as practicable, be made in cooperation with or through the Department of Labor; such studies, investigations, and reports concerning commerce and commercial pursuits, for the purposes of commercial education, shall, so far as practicable, be made in cooperation with or through the Department of Commerce; such studies, investigations, and reports concerning the administration of vocational schools, courses of study, and instruction in vocational subjects shall, so far as practicable, be made in cooperation with or through the Bureau of Education.

The Commissioner of Education shall be the executive officer of the board. He may make such recommendations to the board relative to the administration of this act as he may from time to time deem advisable. It shall be the duty of the Commissioner of Education to carry out the rules, regulations, and decisions which the board may adopt. The Federal Board for Vocational Education shall have power to employ such assistants as may be necessary to carry out the provisions of this act.

SEC. 7. That there is hereby appropriated to the Federal Board for Vocational Education the sum of $200,000 annually, to be available from and after the passage of this act, for the purpose of making or cooperating in making the studies, investigations, and reports provided for in section 6 of this act, and for the purpose of paying the salaries of assistants and office and such other expenses as the board may deem necessary to the execution and administration of this act. The Federal Board for Vocational Education may allot any part of said appropriation to any United States department or bureau for the purpose of making any study or investigation, or part thereof, under the provisions of this act.

SEC. 8. That in order to secure the benefits of the appropriations for any purpose specified in this act the State board shall prepare plans showing the kinds of vocational education for which it is proposed that the appropriation shall be used; the kinds of schools and equipment; courses of study; methods of instruction; qualifications of teachers and, in the case of agricultural subjects, the qualifications of supervisors or directors; plans for the training of teachers; and, in the case of agricultural subjects, plans for the supervision of agricultural education as provided for in section 10. Such plans shall be submitted by the State board to the Federal Board for Vocational Education, and if the Federal board finds the same to be in conformity with the provisions and purposes of this act, the same shall be approved. The State board shall make an annual report to the Federal Board for Vocational Education on or before September 1 of each year on the work done in the State and the receipts and expenditures of money under the provisions of this act.

SEC. 9. That the appropriation for the salaries of teachers, supervisors, or directors of agricultural subjects and of teachers of trade and industrial subjects shall be devoted exclusively to the payment of salaries of such teachers, supervisors, or directors having the minimum qualifications set up for the State by the State board, with the approval of the Federal Board for Vocational Education. The cost of instruction supplementary to the instruction in agricultural and in trade and industrial subjects provided for in this act necessary to build a well-rounded course of training shall be borne by the State and local communities, and no part of the cost thereof shall be borne out of the appropriations herein made. The moneys expended under the provisions of this act, in cooperation with the States, for the salaries of teachers, supervisors, or directors of agricultural subjects, or for the salaries of teachers of trade and industrial subjects, shall be conditioned that for each dollar of Federal money expended for such salaries the State or local community, or both, shall expend an equal amount for such salaries; and that appropriations for the training of teachers of vocational subjects as herein provided shall be conditioned that such money be expended for maintenance of such training, and that for each dollar of Federal money so expended for maintenance the State or local community, or both, shall expend an equal amount for the maintenance of such training.

SEC. 10. That any State may use the appropriation or any part thereof allotted to it under the provisions of this act for the salaries of teachers, supervisors, or directors of agricultural subjects, either for the salaries of teachers of such subjects in schools or classes or for the salaries of supervisors or directors of such subjects under a plan of supervision for the State to be set up by the State board, with the approval of the Federal Board for Vocational Education. That in order to receive the benefits of such appropriation for the salaries of teachers, supervisors, or directors of agricultural subjects the State board of any State shall provide in its plan for agricultural education that such education shall be that which is supported and controlled by the public; that the controlling purpose of such education shall be to fit for useful employment; that such education shall be of less than college grade, and be designed to meet the needs of persons over 14 years of age, who have entered upon or who are preparing to enter upon the work of the farm or of the farm home; that the State or local community, or both, shall provide the necessary plant and equipment determined upon by the State board, with the approval of the Federal Board for Vocational Education as the minimum requirement for such education in schools and classes in the State; that the amount expended for the maintenance of such education in any school or class receiving the benefit of such appropriation shall be not less annually than the amount fixed by the State board, with the approval of the Federal board as the minimum for such schools or classes in the State; that such schools shall provide for directed or supervised practice in agriculture, either on a farm provided for by the school or other farm, for at least six months per year; that the teachers, supervisors, or directors of agricultural subjects shall have at least the minimum qualification determined for the State by the State board, with the approval of the Federal Board for Vocational Education.

SEC. 11. That in order to receive the benefits of the appropriation for the salaries of teachers of trade and industrial subjects, the State board of any State shall provide in its plan for trade and industrial education that such education shall be given in schools or classes supported and controlled by the public; that the controlling purpose of such education shall be to fit for useful employment; that such education shall be of less than college grade and shall be designed to meet the needs of persons over 14 years of age who are preparing for a trade or industrial pursuit or who have entered upon the work of a trade or industrial pursuit; that the State or local community, or both, shall provide the necessary plant and equipment determined upon by the State board with the approval of the Federal Board for Vocational Education, as the minimum requirement in such State for education for any given trade or industrial pursuit; that the total amount expended for the maintenance of such education in any school or class receiving the benefit of such appropriation shall be not less annually than the amount fixed by the State board, with the approval of the Federal board, as the minimum for such schools or classes in the State; that such schools or classes giving instruction to persons who have not entered upon employment shall require that at least half of the time of such instruction be given to practical work on a useful or productive basis, such instruction to extend over not less than 9 months per year and not less than 30 hours per week; that at least one-third of the sum appropriated to any State for the salaries of teachers of trade and industrial subjects shall, if expended, be applied to part-time schools or classes for young workers over 14 years of age who have entered upon employment, and such subjects in a part-time school or class may mean any subject given to enlarge the civic or vocational intelligence of such workers over 14 and less than 18 years of age; that such part-time schools or classes shall provide for not less than 144 hours of classroom instruction per year; that evening industrial schools shall fix the age of 16 years as a minimum entrance requirement and shall confine instruction to that which is supplemental to the daily employment; that the teachers of any trade or industrial subject in any State shall have at least the minimum qualifications for teachers of such subject determined upon for such State by the State board with the approval of the Federal Board for Vocational Education: Provided, That for cities and towns of less than 25,000 population, according to the last preceding United States census, the State board, with the approval of the Federal Board for Vocational Education, may modify the conditions as to the length of course and hours of instruction per week for schools and classes giving instruction to those who have not entered upon employment, in order to meet the particular needs of such cities and towns.

SEC. 12. That in order to receive the benefits of the appropriation in this act for the training of teachers, supervisors, or directors of agricultural subjects, or of teachers of trade and industrial or home economics subjects, the State board of any State shall provide in its plan for such training that the same shall be carried out under the supervision of the State board; that such training shall be given in schools or classes supported and controlled by the public; that such training shall be given only to persons who have had adequate vocational experience or contact in the line of work for which they are preparing themselves as teachers, supervisors, or directors, or who are acquiring such experience or contact as a part of their training, and that the State board, with the approval of the Federal board, shall establish minimum requirements for such experience or contact for teachers, supervisors, or directors of agricultural subjects and for teachers of trade and industrial and home economics subjects; that not more than 60 per cent nor less than 20 per cent of the money appropriated under this act for the training of teachers of vocational subjects to any State for any year shall be expended in the preparation of teachers, supervisors, or directors of agricultural subjects or of teachers of trade and industrial subjects or of teachers of home economics subjects.

SEC. 13. That in order to secure the benefits of the appropriations for the salaries of teachers, supervisors, or directors of agricultural subjects, or for the salaries of teachers of trade and industrial subjects or for the training of teachers as herein provided any State shall, through the legislative authority thereof, appoint the State treasurer as custodian for vocational education, who shall receive and provide for the proper custody and disbursement of moneys paid to the State from said appropriations.

SEC. 14. That the Federal Board for Vocational Education shall annually ascertain whether the States are using or are prepared to use the moneys received by them in accordance with the provisions of this act. On or before the 1st day of January of each year the Federal Board for Vocational Education shall certify to the Secretary of the Treasury as to each State which has accepted the provisions of this act and complied therewith, certifying the amounts which each State is entitled to receive under the provisions of this act. Upon such certification the Secretary of the Treasury shall pay quarterly to the custodian for vocational education of each State the moneys to which it is entitled under the provisions of this act. The moneys so received by the custodian for vocational education for any State shall be paid out on the requisition of the State board, as reimbursement for expenditures already incurred, to such schools as are approved by said State board and are entitled to receive such moneys under the provisions of this act.

SEC. 15. That whenever any portion of the fund annually allotted to any State has not been expended for the purpose provided for in this act, a sum equal to such portion shall be deducted by the Federal board from the next succeeding annual allotment from such fund to such State.

SEC. 16. That the Federal board for vocational education may withhold the allotment of moneys to any State whenever it shall appear that such moneys are not being expended for the purposes and under the conditions of this act. If any allotment is withheld from any State, the State board of such State may appeal to the Congress of the United States, and if the Congress shall not direct such sum to be paid it shall be covered into the Treasury.

SEC. 17. That if any portion of the moneys received by the custodian for vocational education of any State under this act, for any given purpose named in this act, shall, by any action or contingency, be diminished or lost, it shall be replaced by such State, and until so replaced no subsequent appropriation for such education shall be paid to such State. No portion of any moneys appropriated under this act for the benefit of the States shall be applied, directly or indirectly, to the purchase, erection, preservation, or repair of any building or buildings or equipment, or for the purchase or rental of lands.

SEC. 18. That the Federal board for vocational education shall make an annual report to Congress, on or before December 1, on the administration of this act, and shall include in such report the reports made by the State boards on the administration of this act by each State and the expenditure of the money allotted to each State.

AMENDMENT TO INDIAN APPROPRIATION BILL.

Mr. CLAPP submitted an amendment proposing to appropriate $20,000 for the relief of the Medawakanton and Wahpakoota bands of Sioux Indians residing in the State of Minnesota, etc., intended to be proposed by him to the Indian appropriation bill, which was referred to the Committee on Indian Affairs and ordered to be printed.

COMMERCIAL RIGHTS OF CITIZENS.

Mr. SMITH of Georgia. I desire to submit a resolution, which I ask to have read and go over until Friday.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Such will be the order if there is no objection. The Secretary will read the resolution.

The Secretary read the resolution (S. Res. 12), as follows:

Whereas the Executive department, through the Secretary of State, has protested the legality of the orders of Great Britain virtually blockading the neutral ports of northern Europe; and

Whereas the responsibility for the preservation of the commercial rights of citizens of the United States rests upon the Congress, as well as upon the Executive department: Therefore be it

Resolved, That the Committee on Foreign Relations be requested to investigate the subject and to suggest to the Senate the action, if any, they may deem advisable.

Mr. SMITH of Georgia. I desire to give notice that on Friday next, if the resolution is reached, I shall address the Senate with reference to it, and if it is not reached that immediately on the conclusion of the morning business on Friday I shall ask leave to address the Senate on the subject.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The notice given by the Senator from Georgia will be entered and on the request of the Senator from Georgia the resolution will lie on the table, subject to call.

IMPORTS AND EXPORTS.

Mr. FLETCHER. I submit a resolution, but I shall not ask for its immediate consideration, though I think there will be no objection to it.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Secretary will read the resolution.

The Secretary read the resolution (S. Res. 10), as follows:

Resolved, That the Secretary of Commerce be, and he is hereby, directed to furnish to the Senate information regarding the value of imports, exports, and import duties under the present and the two preceding tariff acts, with a special statement for the period from the enactment of the existing tariff act to the outbreak of the European war, compared with a corresponding period of the previous year; the value of imports compared with the value of domestic production and the expenditure for wages in each industry before the outbreak of the European war; and the imports and exports of leading manufacturing countries during recent years.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The resolution goes over.

AMENDMENT OF THE RULES.

Mr. OWEN. I present a motion for certain proposed changes in the rules of the Senate, and ask that it be printed and lie over until to-morrow.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. That will be the order.

Mr. SHAFROTH submitted the following resolution (S. Res. 11), which was read and referred to the Committee on Rules:

Resolved, That paragraph 1, of Rule XIX, of the rules of the Senate be amended so it shall read as follows:

RULE XIX.

DEBATE.

1. When a Senator desires to speak, he shall rise and address the Presiding Officer, and shall not proceed until he is recognized, and the Presiding Officer shall recognize the Senator who shall first address him. No Senator shall interrupt another Senator in debate without his consent, and to obtain such consent he shall first address the Presiding Officer. No Senator shall speak for more than two hours upon any one bill, resolution, or matter in debate, and all motions affecting the same, nor for more than one hour on all amendments thereto without the consent of the Senate, which shall be determined without debate.

Mr. NORRIS. Mr. President, I desire to make a parliamentary inquiry.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from Nebraska will state it.

Mr. NORRIS. Under the rule I have a notice that I desire to give of a resolution to amend the rules.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator has a right to send the notice to the desk and it will be treated as such, and will be taken up one day after it is given.

Mr. NORRIS. I understand, but the question I want to ask the Chair is whether it is proper under this order to submit it?

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. It can be done by unanimous consent, which will be readily granted. The notice proposed by the Senator from Nebraska will be accepted as a sufficient notice under the rule unless there is objection. The Chair hears none and it is so ordered.

The notice submitted by Mr. NORRIS is as follows:

NOTICE.

In accordance with Rule XL of the Senate Rules, I hereby give notice that on to-morrow I will propose an amendment to the rules of the Senate by adding thereto a new rule, to be known as Rule XLI, and to read as follows:

"Rule XLI. It shall be in order during the morning hour to make a motion that any bill or resolution then on the calendar shall be considered under the terms of this rule. Such motion, when made, shall lie over one day and shall then be decided without debate. No Senator shall be allowed to vote on a motion to consider a bill or resolution under this rule who is bound by any caucus or conference of Senators to vote in any particular way on said bill or resolution, or any amendment thereto; but when any Senator's right to vote upon such motion is challenged, such Senator shall be allowed to determine for himself whether he is disqualified from voting on said motion. When it has been decided to consider a bill or resolution under this rule, the same shall first be considered in general debate, during which time no Senator, except by unanimous consent, shall be allowed to speak more than three hours. At the close of general debate the bill or resolution shall be read for amendments, and on any amendment that may be offered no Senator, except by unanimous consent, shall speak for more than 15 minutes: Provided, That any Senator who has not spoken for three hours in general debate shall, in addition to said 15 minutes, be allowed additional time, but in no case shall such additional time or times, including the time used by such Senator in general debate, exceed in the aggregate three hours: Provided further, That if unanimous consent for additional time is asked in behalf of any Senator, either during general debate or when the bill or resolution is being considered for amendment, and the same is refused, it shall be in order by motion to extend the time of such Senator for a time to be named in said motion, which motion shall be decided without debate. When the bill or resolution is being read for amendment all debate shall be confined to the amendment which is then pending."

Mr. WILLIAMS submitted the following resolution (S. Res. 8), which was read and referred to the Committee on Rules:

Resolved, That Rule XXII of the standing rules of the Senate be amended as follows: Insert, after the words "to lay on the table," in Rule XXII, the following:

"Any Senator arising in his place and asserting that in his opinion an attempt is being made on the floor of the Senate to obstruct, hinder, or delay the right of the Senate to proceed to a vote, the Chair shall, without permitting any debate thereon, put the question to the Senate 'Is it the sense of the Senate that an attempt is being made to obstruct, hinder, or delay a vote?' And if that question shall be decided in the affirmative, then it shall be in order, to the exclusion of the consideration of all other questions, for any Senator to move to fix a time for voting on the pending bill or resolution and all amendments thereto; and the said motion shall be decided without debate: Provided, however, That the time fixed in said motion for taking the vote on the pending bill or resolution and all amendments thereto shall be at least two calendar days after the day on which said motion is made."

Mr. WILLIAMS submitted the following resolution (S. Res. 7), which was read and referred to the Committee on Rules:

Resolved, That the Rules of the Senate be amended as follows: In Rule XII, clause 1, after the words "by the Senate," there shall be inserted the following: "and any Senator may arise and declare that he is paired and how he would vote if not paired, and may add that being present he desired to be so recorded, in order to constitute a quorum, whereupon he shall be so recorded and his presence as a part of the quorum announced by the Chair."

COLVILLE INDIAN RESERVATION LANDS.

Mr. POINDEXTER. I submit a resolution which I shall ask to go over under the rule until to-morrow.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The resolution will be read.

The Secretary read the resolution (S. Res. 9), as follows:

Resolved by the Senate of the United States, That the Secretary of the Interior is requested to inform the Senate as to what progress has been made toward carrying out the terms and provisions of the act of Congress of March 22, 1906, providing for the opening to homestead entry of the surplus unallotted agricultural lands on the diminished or south half of the Colville Indian Reservation, in the State of Washington, and also as to what steps are being taken at the present time for that purpose, and the reasons for the delay therein.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. In accordance with the request of the Senator from Washington the resolution just read will lie on the table subject to call.

Mr. POINDEXTER. I understand it will come up for action to-morrow under the rule.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. It will come up to-morrow under the rule or the Senator can call it up at a later day if he wishes to have it considered later.

COMMISSION ON INDUSTRIAL RELATIONS.

Mr. POINDEXTER submitted the following concurrent resolution (S. Con. Res. 1), which was read and referred to the Committee on Printing:

Resolved by the Senate (the House of Representatives concurring), That there shall be printed 100,000 copies of the report in full, including the several members' reports, of the Federal Industrial Relations Commission, including all testimony taken by the same commission or its said members in pursuance of the authority conferred upon them by law, 35,000 of the said copies to be for the use of the Senate and 65,000 for the use of the House of Representatives for public distribution.

Mr. ASHURST submitted the following concurrent resolution (S. Con. Res. 2), which was read and referred to the Committee on Printing:

Resolved by the Senate (the House of Representatives concurring), That there be printed for the use of Congress 100,000 copies of the final report of the Commission on Industrial Relations, addressed to the Sixty-fourth Congress and dated August 23, 1915, of which 50,000 copies shall be for the use of the House of Representatives, 25,000 copies shall be for the use of the Senate, and 25,000 copies shall be deposited with the Superintendent of Documents at the Government Printing Office for distribution by him.

LETITIA D. MAXHAM.

Mr. PAGE submitted the following resolution (S. Res. 6), which was read and referred to the Committee to Audit and Control the Contingent Expenses of the Senate:

Resolved, That the Secretary of the Senate be, and he hereby is, authorized and directed to pay from the miscellaneous items of the contingent fund of the Senate to Letitia D. Maxham, widow of Azro J. Maxham, late a folder of the United States Senate, a sum equal to six months salary at the rate he was receiving by law at the time of his death, said sum to be considered as including funeral expenses and all other allowances.

ADJOURNMENT TO FRIDAY.

Mr. KERN. Mr. President, in the present situation it is quite apparent that the formation of committees can not be completed before Friday. I therefore move that when the Senate adjourns to-day it be until Friday next.

The motion was agreed to.

DEATH OF REPRESENTATIVES GOULDEN, BROWN, AND WITHERSPOON.

Mr. WILLIAMS. Mr. President, it becomes my sad duty to announce that in the time intervening between the adjournment of the last Congress and the convening of this Congress three distinguished citizens of the Republic, Members of the House of Representatives, have died—the Hon. JOSEPH A. GOULDEN, of New York, the Hon. WILLIAM M. BROWN, of Pennsylvania, and the Hon. SAMUEL ANDREW WITHERSPOON, of the State of Mississippi. I move, as a fitting tribute to the memory of the deceased Members of the House of Representatives, that the Senate do now adjourn.

The motion was unanimously agreed to; and (at 2 o'clock and 20 minutes p. m.) the Senate adjourned until Friday, December 10, 1915, at 12 o'clock meridian.

HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES.

TUESDAY, December 7, 1915.

The House met at 12 o'clock noon.

The Chaplain, Rev. Henry N. Couden, D. D., offered the following prayer:

O Lord God, our heavenly Father, source of all knowledge, all wisdom, all purity, bear with our infirmities as a people and inspire every American citizen with an overwhelming desire for these precious gifts that the genius of our Republic may increase and vindicate the wisdom of our fathers in a Government "conceived in liberty and dedicated to the proposition that all men are created equal"; that the central truths of the Christian religion, fatherhood, brotherhood, may be exemplified in popular government and be a beacon light to all the world in its civil, political, and religious rights. Prepare the lawmakers of the Nation to hear with unbiased minds the annual message of our President that they may act calmly, deliberately, wisely on his recommendations and thus serve the interests of the people whom they represent. In the spirit of the Master. Amen.

The Journal of the proceedings of yesterday was read and approved.

MESSAGE FROM THE SENATE.

A message from the Senate, by Mr. Tulley, one of its clerks, announced that the Senate had passed the following resolution without amendment:

House concurrent resolution 1.

Resolved by the House of Representatives (the Senate concurring), That the two Houses of Congress assemble in the Hall of the House of Representatives on Tuesday, the 7th day of December, 1915, at 12 o'clock and 30 minutes in the afternoon for the purpose of receiving such communications as the President of the United States shall be pleased to make to them.

SWEARING IN OF A MEMBER.

Mr. MANN. Mr. Speaker, the gentleman from Michigan, Mr. CRAMTON, is present and ready to take the oath of office.

Mr. CRAMTON appeared at the bar of the House and took the oath of office prescribed by law.

The SPEAKER. In making preparation for the joint session of the Senate and House, when the Members of the Senate come in they will occupy the three front rows of seats, which should be vacated on both sides of the House.

RECESS.

Mr. KITCHIN. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that the House stand in recess until 12 o'clock and 25 minutes p. m.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from North Carolina asks unanimous consent that the House stand in recess until 12.25 p. m. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

Accordingly the House stood in recess until 12 o'clock and 25 minutes p. m.

JOINT MEETING OF THE SENATE AND HOUSE.

At the expiration of the recess the House resumed its session and was called to order by the Speaker. At 12 o'clock and 35 minutes p. m. the Doorkeeper, Mr. Sinnott, announced the President pro tempore and the members of the United States Senate.

The Members of the House rose.

The Senate, preceded by the President pro tempore and by their Secretary and Sergeant at Arms, entered the Chamber.

The President pro tempore took the chair at the right of the Speaker and the Members of the Senate took the seats reserved for them.

The SPEAKER. On behalf of the House the Chair appoints as a committee to wait on the President Mr. KITCHIN, Mr. FITZGERALD, Mr. CARLIN, Mr. MANN, and Mr. FORDNEY.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore of the Senate. On the part of the Senate the Chair appoints Mr. OVERMAN, Mr. JOHNSON of Maine, Mr. JAMES, Mr. SMITH of Michigan, and Mr. WORKS.

At 12 o'clock and 40 minutes the President of the United States, escorted by the committee of Senators and Representatives, entered the hall of the House and stood at the Clerk's desk, amid applause on the floor and in the galleries.

The SPEAKER. Gentlemen of the Senate and the House, I present to you the President of the United States. [Applause.]

ADDRESS OF THE PRESIDENT (H. DOC. NO. 1).

The PRESIDENT. Gentlemen of the Congress, since I last had the privilege of addressing you on the state of the Union the war of nations on the other side of the sea, which had then only begun to disclose its portentous proportions, has extended its threatening and sinister scope until it has swept within its flame some portion of every quarter of the globe, not excepting our own hemisphere, has altered the whole face of international affairs, and now presents a prospect of reorganization and reconstruction such as statesmen and peoples have never been called upon to attempt before.

We have stood apart, studiously neutral. It was our manifest duty to do so. Not only did we have no part or interest in the policies which seem to have brought the conflict on; it was necessary, if a universal catastrophe was to be avoided, that a limit should be set to the sweep of destructive war and that some part of the great family of nations should keep the processes of peace alive, if only to prevent collective economic ruin and the breakdown throughout the world of the industries by which its populations are fed and sustained. It was manifestly the duty of the self-governed nations of this hemisphere to redress, if possible, the balance of economic loss and confusion in the other, if they could do nothing more. In the day of readjustment and recuperation we earnestly hope and believe that they can be of infinite service.

In this neutrality, to which they were bidden not only by their separate life and their habitual detachment from the politics of Europe but also by a clear perception of international duty, the states of America have become conscious of a new and more vital community of interest and moral partnership in affairs, more clearly conscious of the many common sympathies and interests and duties which bid them stand together.

There was a time in the early days of our own great nation and of the republics fighting their way to independence in Central and South America when the government of the United States looked upon itself as in some sort the guardian of the republics to the south of her as against any encroachments or efforts at political control from the other side of the water; felt it its duty to play the part even without invitation from them; and I think that we can claim that the task was undertaken with a true and disinterested enthusiasm for the freedom of the Americas and the unmolested self-government of her independent peoples. But it was always difficult to maintain such a rôle without offence to the pride of the peoples whose freedom of action we sought to protect, and without provoking serious misconceptions of our motives, and every thoughtful man of affairs must welcome the altered circumstances of the new day in whose light we now stand, when there is no claim of guardianship or thought of wards but, instead, a full and honourable association as of partners between ourselves and our neighbours, in the interest of all America, north and south. Our concern for the independence and prosperity of the states of Central and South America is not altered. We retain unabated the spirit that has inspired us throughout the whole life of our government and which was so frankly put into words by President Monroe. We still mean always to make a common cause of national independence and of political liberty in America. But that purpose is now better understood so far as it concerns ourselves. It is known not to be a selfish purpose. It is known to have in it no thought of taking advantage of any government in this hemisphere or playing its political fortunes for our own benefit. All the governments of America stand, so far as we are concerned, upon a footing of genuine equality and unquestioned independence. [Applause.]

We have been put to the test in the case of Mexico, and we have stood the test. Whether we have benefited Mexico by the course we have pursued remains to be seen. Her fortunes are in her own hands. But we have at least proved that we will not take advantage of her in her distress and undertake to impose upon her an order and government of our own choosing. Liberty is often a fierce and intractable thing, to which no bounds can be set, and to which no bounds of a few men's choosing ought ever to be set. Every American who has drunk at the true fountains of principle and tradition must subscribe without reservation to the high doctrine of the Virginia Bill of Rights, which in the great days in which our government was set up was everywhere amongst us accepted as the creed of free men. That doctrine is, "That government is, or ought to be, instituted for the common benefit, protection, and security of the people, nation, or community;" that "of all the various modes and forms of government, that is the best which is capable of producing the greatest degree of happiness and safety, and is most effectually secured against the danger of maladministration; and that, when any government shall be found inadequate or contrary to these purposes a majority of the community hath an indubitable, inalienable, and indefeasible right to reform, alter, or abolish it, in such manner as shall be judged most conducive to the public weal." We have unhesitatingly applied that heroic principle to the case of Mexico, and now hopefully await the rebirth of the troubled Republic, which had so much of which to purge itself and so little sympathy from any outside quarter in the radical but necessary process. We will aid and befriend Mexico, but we will not coerce her [applause]; and our course with regard to her ought to be sufficient proof to all America that we seek no political suzerainty or selfish control.

The moral is, that the states of America are not hostile rivals but coöperating friends, and that their growing sense of community of interest, alike in matters political and in matters economic, is likely to give them a new significance as factors in international affairs and in the political history of the world. It presents them as in a very deep and true sense a unit in world affairs, spiritual partners, standing together because thinking together, quick with common sympathies and common ideals. Separated they are subject to all the cross currents of the confused politics of a world of hostile rivalries; united in spirit and purpose they cannot be disappointed of their peaceful destiny.

This is Pan-Americanism. It has none of the spirit of empire in it. It is the embodiment, the effectual embodiment, of the spirit of law and independence and liberty and mutual service.

A very notable body of men recently met in the City of Washington, at the invitation and as the guests of this Government, whose deliberations are likely to be looked back to as marking a memorable turning point in the history of America. They were representative spokesmen of the several independent states of this hemisphere and were assembled to discuss the financial and commercial relations of the republics of the two continents which nature and political fortune have so intimately linked together. I earnestly recommend to your perusal the reports of their proceedings and of the actions of their committees. You will get from them, I think, a fresh conception of the ease and intelligence and advantage with which Americans of both continents may draw together in practical coöperation and of what the material foundations of this hopeful partnership of interest must consist,—of how we should build them and of how necessary it is that we should hasten their building.

There is, I venture to point out, an especial significance just now attaching to this whole matter of drawing the Americas together in bonds of honourable partnership and mutual advantage because of the economic readjustments which the world must inevitably witness within the next generation, when peace shall have at last resumed its healthful tasks. In the performance of these tasks I believe the Americas to be destined to play their parts together. I am interested to fix your attention on this prospect now because unless you take it within your view and permit the full significance of it to command your thought I cannot find the right light in which to set forth the particular matter that lies at the very front of my whole thought as I address you to-day. I mean national defense.

No one who really comprehends the spirit of the great people for whom we are appointed to speak can fail to perceive that their passion is for peace, their genius best displayed in the practice of the arts of peace. Great democracies are not belligerent. They do not seek or desire war. Their thought is of individual liberty and of the free labour that supports life and the uncensored thought that quickens it. Conquest and dominion are not in our reckoning, or agreeable to our principles. But just because we demand unmolested development and the undisturbed government of our own lives upon our own principles of right and liberty, we resent, from whatever quarter it may come, the aggression we ourselves will not practice. We insist upon security in prosecuting our self-chosen lines of national development. We do more than that. We demand it also for others. We do not confine our enthusiasm for individual liberty and free national development to the incidents and movements of affairs which affect only ourselves. We feel it wherever there is a people that tries to walk in these difficult paths of independence and right. From the first we have made common cause with all partisans of liberty on this side the sea, and have deemed it as important that our neighbours should be free from all outside domination as that we ourselves should be; have set America aside as a whole for the uses of independent nations and political freemen. [Applause.]

Out of such thoughts grow all our policies. We regard war merely as a means of asserting the rights of a people against aggression. And we are as fiercely jealous of coercive or dictatorial power within our own nation as of aggression from without. We will not maintain a standing army except for uses which are as necessary in times of peace as in times of war; and we shall always see to it that our military peace establishment is no larger than is actually and continuously needed for the uses of days in which no enemies move against us. But we do believe in a body of free citizens ready and sufficient to take care of themselves and of the governments which they have set up to serve them. In our constitutions themselves we have commanded that "the right of the people to keep and bear arms shall not be infringed," and our confidence has been that our safety in times of danger would lie in the rising of the nation to take care of itself, as the farmers rose at Lexington.

But war has never been a mere matter of men and guns. It is a thing of disciplined might. If our citizens are ever to fight effectively upon a sudden summons, they must know how modern fighting is done, and what to do when the summons comes to render themselves immediately available and immediately effective. And the government must be their servant in this matter, must supply them with the training they need to take care of themselves and of it. The military arm of their government, which they will not allow to direct them, they may properly use to serve them and make their independence secure,—and not their own independence merely but the rights also of those with whom they have made common cause, should they also be put in jeopardy. They must be fitted to play the great rôle in the world, and particularly in this hemisphere, for which they are qualified by principle and by chastened ambition to play.

It is with these ideals in mind that the plans of the Department of War for more adequate national defense were conceived which will be laid before you, and which I urge you to sanction and put into effect as soon as they can be properly scrutinized and discussed. They seem to me the essential first steps, and they seem to me for the present sufficient.

They contemplate an increase of the standing force of the regular army from its present strength of five thousand and twenty-three officers and one hundred and two thousand nine hundred and eighty-five enlisted men of all services to a strength of seven thousand one hundred and thirty-six officers and one hundred and thirty-four thousand seven hundred and seven enlisted men, or 141,843, all told, all services, rank and file, by the addition of fifty-two companies of coast artillery, fifteen companies of engineers, ten regiments of infantry, four regiments of field artillery, and four aero squadrons, besides seven hundred and fifty officers required for a great variety of extra service, especially the all important duty of training the citizen force of which I shall presently speak, seven hundred and ninety-two noncommissioned officers for service in drill, recruiting and the like, and the necessary quota of enlisted men for the Quartermaster Corps, the Hospital Corps, the Ordnance Department, and other similar auxiliary services. These are the additions necessary to render the army adequate for its present duties, duties which it has to perform not only upon our own continental coasts and borders and at our interior army posts, but also in the Philippines, in the Hawaiian Islands, at the Isthmus, and in Porto Rico.

By way of making the country ready to assert some part of its real power promptly and upon a larger scale, should occasion arise, the plan also contemplates supplementing the army by a force of four hundred thousand disciplined citizens, raised in increments of one hundred and thirty-three thousand a year throughout a period of three years. This it is proposed to do by a process of enlistment under which the serviceable men of the country would be asked to bind themselves to serve with the colors for purposes of training for short periods throughout three years, and to come to the colors at call at any time throughout an additional "furlough" period of three years. This force of four hundred thousand men would be provided with personal accoutrements as fast as enlisted and their equipment for the field made ready to be supplied at any time. They would be assembled for training at stated intervals at convenient places in association with suitable units of the regular army. Their period of annual training would not necessarily exceed two months in the year.

It would depend upon the patriotic feeling of the younger men of the country whether they responded to such a call to service or not. It would depend upon the patriotic spirit of the employers of the country whether they made it possible for the younger men in their employ to respond under favorable conditions or not. I, for one, do not doubt the patriotic devotion either of our young men or of those who give them employment—those for whose benefit and protection they would in fact enlist. I would look forward to the success of such an experiment with entire confidence.

As least so much by way of preparation for defense seems to me to be absolutely imperative now. We cannot do less.

The programme which will be laid before you by the Secretary of the Navy is similarly conceived. It involves only a shortening of the time within which plans long matured shall be carried out; but it does make definite and explicit a programme which has heretofore been only implicit, held in the minds of the Committees on Naval Affairs and disclosed in the debates of the two Houses but nowhere formulated or formally adopted. It seems to me very clear that it will be to the advantage of the country for the Congress to adopt a comprehensive plan for putting the navy upon a final footing of strength and efficiency and to press that plan to completion within the next five years. We have always looked to the navy of the country as our first and chief line of defense; we have always seen it to be our manifest course of prudence to be strong on the seas. Year by year we have been creating a navy which now ranks very high indeed among the navies of the maritime nations. We should now definitely determine how we shall complete what we have begun, and how soon.

The programme to be laid before you contemplates the construction within five years of ten battleships, six battle cruisers, ten scout cruisers, fifty destroyers, fifteen fleet submarines, eighty-five coast submarines, four gunboats, one hospital ship, two ammunition ships, two fuel oil ships, and one repair ship. It is proposed that of this number we shall the first year provide for the construction of two battle ships, two battle cruisers, three scout cruisers, fifteen destroyers, five fleet submarines, twenty-five coast submarines, two gunboats, and one hospital ship; the second year, two battleships, one scout cruiser, ten destroyers, four fleet submarines, fifteen coast submarines, one gun boat, and one fuel oil ship; the third year, two battle ships, one battle cruiser, two scout cruisers, five destroyers, two fleet submarines, and fifteen coast submarines; the fourth year, two battle ships, two battle cruisers, two scout cruisers, ten destroyers, two fleet submarines, fifteen coast submarines, one ammunition ship, and one fuel oil ship; and the fifth year, two battle ships, one battle cruiser, two scout cruisers, ten destroyers, two fleet submarines, fifteen coast submarines, one gunboat, one ammunition ship, and one repair ship.

The Secretary of the Navy is asking also for the immediate addition to the personnel of the navy of seven thousand five hundred sailors, twenty-five hundred apprentice seamen, and fifteen hundred marines. This increase would be sufficient to care for the ships which are to be completed within the fiscal year 1917 and also for the number of men which must be put in training to man the ships which will be completed early in 1918. It is also necessary that the number of midshipmen at the Naval academy at Annapolis should be increased by at least three hundred in order that the force of officers should be more rapidly added to; and authority is asked to appoint, for engineering duties only, approved graduates of engineering colleges, and for service in the aviation corps a certain number of men taken from civil life.

If this full programme should be carried out we should have built or building in 1921, according to the estimates of survival and standards of classification followed by the General Board of the Department, an effective navy consisting of twenty-seven battleships, of the first line, six battle cruisers, twenty-five battleships of the second line, ten armored cruisers, thirteen scout cruisers, five first class cruisers, three second class cruisers, ten third class cruisers, one hundred and eight destroyers, eighteen fleet submarines, one hundred and fifty-seven coast submarines, six monitors, twenty gunboats, four supply ships, fifteen fuel ships, four transports, three tenders to torpedo vessels, eight vessels of special types, and two ammunition ships. This would be a navy fitted to our needs and worthy of our traditions.

But armies and instruments of war are only part of what has to be considered if we are to provide for the supreme matter of national self-sufficiency and security in all its aspects. There are other great matters which will be thrust upon our attention whether we will or not. There is, for example, a very pressing question of trade and shipping involved in this great problem of national adequacy. It is necessary for many weighty reasons of national efficiency and development that we should have a great merchant marine. The great merchant fleet we once used to make us rich, that great body of sturdy sailors who used to carry our flag into every sea, and who were the pride and often the bulwark of the nation, we have almost driven out of existence by inexcusable neglect and indifference and by a hopelessly blind and provincial policy of so-called economic protection. It is high time we repaired our mistake and resumed our commercial independence on the seas. [Applause.]

For it is a question of independence. If other nations go to war or seek to hamper each other's commerce, our merchants, it seems, are at their mercy, to do with as they please. We must use their ships, and use them as they determine. We have not ships enough of our own. We cannot handle our own commerce on the seas. Our independence is provincial, and is only on land and within our own borders. We are not likely to be permitted to use even the ships of other nations in rivalry of their own trade, and are without means to extend our commerce even where the doors are wide open and our goods desired. Such a situation is not to be endured. It is of capital importance not only that the United States should be its own carrier on the seas and enjoy the economic independence which only an adequate merchant marine would give it, but also that the American hemisphere as a whole should enjoy a like independence and self-sufficiency, if it is not to be drawn into the tangle of European affairs. Without such independence the whole question of our political unity and self-determination is very seriously clouded and complicated indeed.

Moreover, we can develop no true or effective American policy without ships of our own,—not ships of war, but ships of peace, carrying goods and carrying much more; creating friendships and rendering indispensable services to all interests on this side the water. They must move constantly back and forth between the Americas. They are the only shuttles that can weave the delicate fabric of sympathy, comprehension, confidence, and mutual dependence in which we wish to clothe our policy of America for Americans. [Applause.]

The task of building up an adequate merchant marine for America private capital must ultimately undertake and achieve, as it has undertaken and achieved every other like task amongst us in the past, with admirable enterprise, intelligence, and vigor [applause]; and it seems to me a manifest dictate of wisdom that we should promptly remove every legal obstacle that may stand in the way of this much to be desired revival of our old independence and should facilitate in every possible way the building, purchase, and American registration of ships. But capital cannot accomplish this great task of a sudden. It must embark upon it by degrees, as the opportunities of trade develop. Something must be done at once; done to open routes and develop opportunities where they are as yet undeveloped; done to open the arteries of trade where the currents have not yet learned to run,—especially between the two American continents, where they are, singularly enough, yet to be created and quickened; and it is evident that only the government can undertake such beginnings and assume the initial financial risks. When the risk has passed and private capital begins to find its way in sufficient abundance into these new channels, the government may withdraw. But it cannot omit to begin. It should take the first steps, and should take them at once. Our goods must not lie piled up at our ports and stored upon side tracks in freight cars which are daily needed on the roads; must not be left without means of transport to any foreign quarter. We must not await the permission of foreign ship-owners and foreign governments to send them where we will.

With a view to meeting these pressing necessities of our commerce and availing ourselves at the earliest possible moment of the pressing unparalleled opportunity of linking the two Americas together in bonds of mutual interest and service, an opportunity which may never return again if we miss it now, proposals will be made to the present Congress for the purchase or construction of ships to be owned and directed by the government similar to those made to the last Congress, but modified in some essential particulars. I recommend these proposals to you for your prompt acceptance with the more confidence because every month that has elapsed since the former proposals were made has made the necessity for such action more and more manifestly imperative. [Applause.] That need was then foreseen; it is now acutely felt and everywhere realized by those for whom trade is waiting but who can find no conveyance for their goods. I am not so much interested in the particulars of the programme as I am in taking immediate advantage of the great opportunity which awaits us if we will but act in this emergency. In this matter, as in all others, a spirit of common counsel should prevail, and out of it should come an early solution of this pressing problem.

There is another matter which seems to me to be very intimately associated with the question of national safety and preparation for defense. That is our policy towards the Philippines and the people of Porto Rico. Our treatment of them and their attitude towards us are manifestly of the first consequence in the development of our duties in the world and in getting a free hand to perform those duties. We must be free from every unnecessary burden or embarrassment; and there is no better way to be clear of embarrassment than to fulfil our promises and promote the interests of those dependent on us to the utmost. [Applause.] Bills for the alteration and reform of the government of the Philippines and for rendering fuller political justice to the people of Porto Rico were submitted to the sixty-third Congress. They will be submitted also to you. I need not particularize their details. You are most of you already familiar with them. But I do recommend them to your early adoption with the sincere conviction that there are few measures you could adopt which would more serviceably clear the way for the great policies by which we wish to make good, now and always, our right to lead in enterprises of peace and good will and economic and political freedom.

The plans for the armed forces of the nation which I have outlined, and for the general policy of adequate preparation for mobilization and defense, involve of course very large additional expenditures of money,—expenditures which will considerably exceed the estimated revenues of the government. It is made my duty by law, whenever the estimates of expenditure exceed the estimates of revenue, to call the attention of the Congress to the fact and suggest any means of meeting the deficiency that it may be wise or possible for me to suggest. I am ready to believe that it would be my duty to do so in any case; and I feel particularly bound to speak of the matter when it appears that the deficiency will arise directly out of the adoption by the Congress of measures which I myself urge it to adopt. Allow me, therefore, to speak briefly of the present state of the Treasury and of the fiscal problems which the next year will probably disclose.

On the thirtieth of June last there was an available balance in the general fund of the Treasury of $104,170,105.78. The total estimated receipts for the year 1916, on the assumption that the emergency revenue measure passed by the last Congress will not be extended beyond its present limit, the thirty-first of December, 1915, and that the present duty of one cent per pound on sugar will be discontinued after the first of May, 1916, will be $670,365,500. The balance of June last and these estimated revenues come, therefore, to a grand total of $774,535,605.78. The total estimated disbursements for the present fiscal year, including twenty-five millions for the Panama Canal, twelve millions for probable deficiency appropriations, and fifty thousand dollars for miscellaneous debt redemptions, will be $753,891,000; and the balance in the general fund of the Treasury will be reduced to $20,644,605.78. The emergency revenue act, if continued beyond its present time limitation, would produce, during the half year then remaining, about forty-one millions. The duty of one cent per pound on sugar, if continued, would produce during the two months of the fiscal year remaining after the first of May, about fifteen millions. These two sums, amounting together to fifty-six millions, if added to the revenues of the second half of the fiscal year, would yield the Treasury at the end of the year an available balance of $76,644,605.78.

The additional revenues required to carry out the programme of military and naval preparation of which I have spoken, would, as at present estimated, be for the fiscal year 1917, $93,800,000. Those figures, taken with the figures for the present fiscal year which I have already given, disclose our financial problem for the year 1917. Assuming that the taxes imposed by the emergency revenue act and the present duty on sugar are to be discontinued, and that the balance at the close of the present fiscal year will be only $20,644,605.78, that the disbursements for the Panama Canal will again be about twenty-five millions, and that the additional expenditures for the army and navy are authorized by the Congress, the deficit in the general fund of the Treasury on the thirtieth of June, 1917, will be nearly two hundred and thirty-five millions. To this sum at least fifty millions should be added to represent a safe working balance for the Treasury, and twelve millions to include the usual deficiency estimates in 1917; and these additions would make a total deficit of some two hundred and ninety-seven millions. If the present taxes should be continued throughout this year and the next, however, there would be a balance in the Treasury of some seventy-six and a half millions at the end of the present fiscal year, and a deficit at the end of the next year of only some fifty millions, or, reckoning in sixty-two millions for deficiency appropriations and a safe Treasury balance at the end of the year, a total deficit of some one hundred and twelve millions. The obvious moral of the figures is that it is a plain counsel of prudence to continue all of the present taxes or their equivalents, and confine ourselves to the problem of providing one hundred and twelve millions of new revenue rather than two hundred and ninety-seven millions.

How shall we obtain the new revenue? We are frequently reminded that there are many millions of bonds which the Treasury is authorized under existing law to sell to reimburse the sums paid out of current revenues for the construction of the Panama Canal; and it is true that bonds to the amount of approximately $222,000,000 are now available for that purpose. Prior to 1913, $134,631,980 of these bonds had actually been sold to recoup the expenditures at the Isthmus; and now constitute a considerable item of the public debt. But I, for one, do not believe that the people of this country approve of postponing the payment of their bills. [Applause.] Borrowing money is short-sighted finance. It can be justified only when permanent things are to be accomplished which many generations will certainly benefit by and which it seems hardly fair that a single generation should pay for. The objects we are now proposing to spend money for cannot be so classified, except in the sense that everything wisely done may be said to be done in the interest of posterity as well as in our own. It seems to me a clear dictate of prudent statesmanship and frank finance that in what we are now, I hope, about to undertake we should pay as we go. The people of the country are entitled to know just what burdens of taxation they are to carry, and to know from the outset, now. The new bills should be paid by internal taxation.

To what sources, then, shall we turn? This is so peculiarly a question which the gentlemen of the House of Representatives are expected under the Constitution to propose an answer to that you will hardly expect me to do more than discuss it in very general terms. We should be following an almost universal example of modern governments if we were to draw the greater part or even the whole of the revenues we need from the income taxes. By somewhat lowering the present limits of exemption and the figure at which the surtax shall begin to be imposed, and by increasing, step by step throughout the present graduation, the surtax itself, the income taxes as at present apportioned would yield sums sufficient to balance the books of the Treasury at the end of the fiscal year 1917 without anywhere making the burden unreasonably or oppressively heavy. The precise reckonings are fully and accurately set out in the report of the Secretary of the Treasury which will be immediately laid before you.

And there are many additional sources of revenue which can justly be resorted to without hampering the industries of the country or putting any too great charge upon individual expenditure. A tax of one cent per gallon on gasoline and naphtha would yield, at the present estimated production, $10,000,000; a tax of fifty cents per horse power on automobiles and internal explosion engines, $15,000,000; a stamp tax on bank cheques, probably $18,000,000; a tax of twenty-five cents per ton on pig iron, $10,000,000; a tax of twenty-five cents per ton on fabricated iron and steel, probably $10,000,000. In a country of great industries like this it ought to be easy to distribute the burdens of taxation without making them anywhere bear too heavily or too exclusively upon any one set of persons or undertakings. What is clear is, that the industry of this generation should pay the bills of this generation.

I have spoken to you to-day, Gentlemen, upon a single theme, the thorough preparation of the nation to care for its own security and to make sure of entire freedom to play the impartial rôle in this hemisphere and in the world which we all believe to have been providentially assigned to it. I have had in my mind no thought of any immediate or particular danger arising out of our relations with other nations. We are at peace with all the nations of the world, and there is reason to hope that no question in controversy between this and other Governments will lead to any serious breach of amicable relations, grave as some differences of attitude and policy have been and may yet turn out to be. I am sorry to say that the gravest threats against our national peace and safety have been uttered within our own borders. There are citizens of the United States, I blush to admit, born under other flags but welcomed under our generous naturalization laws to the full freedom and opportunity of America, who have poured the poison of disloyalty into the very arteries of our national life; who have sought to bring the authority and good name of our Government into contempt, to destroy our industries wherever they thought it effective for their vindictive purposes to strike at them, and to debase our politics to the uses of foreign intrigue. Their number is not great as compared with the whole number of those sturdy hosts by which our nation has been enriched in recent generations out of virile foreign stocks; but it is great enough to have brought deep disgrace upon us and to have made it necessary that we should promptly make use of processes of law by which we may be purged of their corrupt distempers. [Loud applause.] America never witnessed anything like this before. It never dreamed it possible that men sworn into its own citizenship, men drawn out of great free stocks such as supplied some of the best and strongest elements of that little, but how heroic, nation that in a high day of old staked its very life to free itself from every entanglement that had darkened the fortunes of the older nations and set up a new standard here,—that men of such origins and such free choices of allegiance would ever turn in malign reaction against the Government and people who had welcomed and nurtured them and seek to make this proud country once more a hotbed of European passion. A little while ago such a thing would have seemed incredible. Because it was incredible we made no preparation for it. We would have been almost ashamed to prepare for it, as if we were suspicious of ourselves, our own comrades and neighbors! But the ugly and incredible thing has actually come about and we are without adequate federal laws to deal with it. I urge you to enact such laws at the earliest possible moment and feel that in doing so I am urging you to do nothing less than save the honor and self-respect of the nation. Such creatures of passion, disloyalty, and anarchy must be crushed out. [Applause.] They are not many, but they are infinitely malignant, and the hands of our power should close over them at once. They have formed plots to destroy property, they have entered into conspiracies against the neutrality of the Government, they have sought to pry into every confidential transaction of the Government in order to serve interests alien to our own. It is possible to deal with these things very effectually. I need not suggest the terms in which they may be dealt with.

I wish that it could be said that only a few men, misled by mistaken sentiments of allegiance to the governments under which they were born, had been guilty of disturbing the self-possession and misrepresenting the temper and principles of the country during these days of terrible war, when it would seem that every man who was truly an American would instinctively make it his duty and his pride to keep the scales of judgment even and prove himself a partisan of no nation but his own. But it cannot. There are some men among us, and many resident abroad who, though born and bred in the United States and calling themselves Americans, have so forgotten themselves and their honor as citizens as to put their passionate sympathy with one or the other side in the great European conflict above their regard for the peace and dignity of the United States. They also preach and practice disloyalty. No laws, I suppose, can reach corruptions of the mind and heart; but I should not speak of others without also speaking of these and expressing the even deeper humiliation and scorn which every self-possessed and thoughtfully patriotic American must feel when he thinks of them and of the discredit they are daily bringing upon us.

While we speak of the preparation of the nation to make sure of her security and her effective power we must not fall into the patent error of supposing that her real strength comes from armaments and mere safeguards of written law. It comes, of course, from her people, their energy, their success in their undertakings, their free opportunity to use the natural resources of our great home land and of the lands outside our continental borders which look to us for protection, for encouragement, and for assistance in their development; from the organization and freedom and vitality of our economic life. The domestic questions which engaged the attention of the last Congress are more vital to the nation in this its time of test than at any other time. We cannot adequately make ready for any trial of our strength unless we wisely and promptly direct the force of our laws into these all-important fields of domestic action. A matter which it seems to me we should have very much at heart is the creation of the right instrumentalities by which to mobilize our economic resources in any time of national necessity. I take it for granted that I do not need your authority to call into systematic consultation with the directing officers of the army and navy men of recognized leadership and ability from among our citizens who are thoroughly familiar, for example, with the transportation facilities of the country and therefore competent to advise how they may be coördinated when the need arises, those who can suggest the best way in which to bring about prompt coöperation among the manufacturers of the country, should it be necessary, and those who could assist to bring the technical skill of the country to the aid of the Government in the solution of particular problems of defense. I only hope that if I should find it feasible to constitute such an advisory body the Congress would be willing to vote the small sum of money that would be needed to defray the expenses that would probably be necessary to give it the clerical and administrative machinery with which to do serviceable work.

What is more important is, that the industries and resources of the country should be available and ready for mobilization. It is the more imperatively necessary, therefore, that we should promptly devise means for doing what we have not yet done: that we should give intelligent federal aid and stimulation to industrial and vocational education, as we have long done in the large field of our agricultural industry; that, at the same time that we safeguard and conserve the natural resources of the country we should put them at the disposal of those who will use them promptly and intelligently, as was sought to be done in the admirable bills submitted to the last Congress from its committees on the public lands, bills which I earnestly recommend in principle to your consideration; that we should put into early operation some provision for rural credits which will add to the extensive borrowing facilities already afforded the farmer by the Reserve Bank Act adequate instrumentalities by which long credits may be obtained on land mortgages [applause]; and that we should study more carefully than they have hitherto been studied the right adaptation of our economic arrangements to changing conditions.

Many conditions about which we have repeatedly legislated are being altered from decade to decade, it is evident, under our very eyes, and are likely to change even more rapidly and more radically in the days immediately ahead of us, when peace has returned to the world and the nations of Europe once more take up their tasks of commerce and industry with the energy of those who must bestir themselves to build anew. Just what these changes will be no one can certainly foresee or confidently predict. There are no calculable, because no stable, elements in the problem. The most we can do is to make certain that we have the necessary instrumentalities of information constantly at our service so that we may be sure that we know exactly what we are dealing with when we come to act, if it should be necessary to act at all. We must first certainly know what it is that we are seeking to adapt ourselves to. I may ask the privilege of addressing you more at length on this important matter a little later in your session.

In the meantime may I make this suggestion? The transportation problem is an exceedingly serious and pressing one in this country. There has from time to time of late been reason to fear that our railroads would not much longer be able to cope with it successfully, as at present equipped and coördinated. I suggest that it would be wise to provide for a commission of inquiry to ascertain by a thorough canvass of the whole question whether our laws as at present framed and administered are as serviceable as they might be in the solution of the problem. It is obviously a problem that lies at the very foundation of our efficiency as a people. Such an inquiry ought to draw out every circumstance and opinion worth considering and we need to know all sides of the matter if we mean to do anything in the field of federal legislation.

No one, I am sure, would wish to take any backward step. The regulation of the railways of the country by federal commission has had admirable results and has fully justified the hopes and expectations of those by whom the policy of regulation was originally proposed. The question is not what should we undo? It is, whether there is anything else we can do that would supply us with effective means, in the very process of regulation, for bettering the conditions under which the railroads are operated and for making them more useful servants of the country as a whole. It seems to me that it might be the part of wisdom, therefore before further legislation in this field is attempted, to look at the whole problem of coordination and efficiency in the full light of a fresh assessment of circumstance and opinion, as a guide to dealing with the several parts of it.

For what we are seeking now, what in my mind is the single thought of this message, is national efficiency and security. We serve a great nation. We should serve it in the spirit of its peculiar genius. It is the genius of common men for self-government, industry, justice, liberty and peace. We should see to it that it lacks no instrument, no facility or vigor of law, to make it sufficient to play its part with energy, safety, and assured success. In this we are no partisans but heralds and prophets of a new age. [Applause.]

At 1 o'clock and 43 minutes p. m. the President retired from the Hall of the House.

Thereupon the President pro tempore and Members of the Senate returned to their Chamber.

REFERENCE OF THE PRESIDENT'S MESSAGE.

Mr. KITCHIN. Mr. Speaker, I move to refer the President's message to the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from North Carolina moves to refer the President's message to the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union.

The motion was agreed to.

ADJOURNMENT UNTIL FRIDAY.

Mr. KITCHIN. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that when the House adjourns to-day it adjourn to meet on Friday next.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from North Carolina asks unanimous consent that when the House adjourns to-day it adjourn to meet on Friday next. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

RESIDENT COMMISSIONERS OF THE PHILIPPINE ISLANDS.

Mr. GARRETT. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that the Resident Commissioners from the Philippine Islands shall be entitled to seats on the floor of the House.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Tennessee asks unanimous consent that the Resident Commissioners from the Philippine Islands be entitled to seats in the Hall of the House.

Mr. MILLER of Minnesota. I would like to ask the gentleman from Tennessee if they have not that right under the rules of the House?

Mr. GARRETT. They have not, under the rules of the House. The Resident Commissioner of Porto Rico has that right under the rules of the House, but it has been the custom, both when the Republican Party was in control and since the Democratic Party has been in control, to give this permission to these Commissioners by special vote. The rules make no provision for it, and I ask that it shall be done as it has been done heretofore.

Mr. MILLER of Minnesota. I have no objection, but I think they ought to have that right secured to them by the rules.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Tennessee [Mr. GARRETT]?

There was no objection.

HYDROELECTRICITY ON THE FARM.

Mr. SIMS. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that an address delivered by the distinguished gentleman from Georgia, Mr. ADAMSON, at the Southern Conference, held at Chattanooga, Tenn., on April 28, 1915, on the subject of the uses and benefits of hydroelectricity on the farm be printed in the RECORD.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Tennessee asks unanimous consent that an address delivered by the gentleman from Georgia, Mr. ADAMSON, at Chattanooga respecting the use of electricity on the farm be published in the RECORD. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

EXTRA COPIES OF THE PRESIDENT'S MESSAGE.

Mr. KITCHIN. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that 15,000 extra copies of the President's message be printed.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from North Carolina asks unanimous consent that 15,000 extra copies of the President's message be printed. Is there objection?

Mr. BORLAND. To be distributed in what way?

Mr. KITCHIN. I suggest that they be distributed through the folding room.

The SPEAKER. To be distributed through the folding room. Is there objection?

Mr. EDWARDS. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, about how many copies would that give to each Member?

Mr. KITCHIN. It would be about 35 or 40 copies.

Mr. GARNER. Mr. Speaker, I suggest to the gentleman from North Carolina that he make his request for 17,500 extra copies, 2,500 to be distributed through the document room, so that in case any Member runs out of copies through the folding room he can send a letter to the document room and have his request for copies filled there.

Mr. MANN. I would have no objection to that.

Mr. KITCHIN. I have no objection to that.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from North Carolina modifies his request and asks unanimous consent that 17,500 extra copies of the President's message be printed, 15,000 copies to be distributed through the folding room and 2,500 copies through the document room. Is there objection?

There was no objection, and it was so ordered.

ADJOURNMENT.

Mr. KITCHIN. Mr. Speaker, I move that the House do now adjourn.

The motion was agreed to; and accordingly (at 1 o'clock and 53 minutes p. m.), in accordance with the order heretofore made, the House adjourned until Friday, December 10, 1915, at 12 o'clock noon.

SENATE.

FRIDAY, December 10, 1915.

The Chaplain, Rev. Forrest J. Prettyman, D. D., offered the following prayer:

Almighty God, we seek Thee because we are seekers of truth. We have walked with Thee in comradeship in all the paths of the Nation. We have read Thy thought and purpose in all our human history, and there is within us that which finds no correspondence or answer except in Thee. We would find our light in Thee, and we would look to our Nation's history and achievement and destiny as the record of Thy will and of Thy purpose. We would institute not only justice but righteousness, and a desire that our land may be established not only in peace and prosperity but in piety and reverence to Thy name. Hear us, and let Thy grace fit us for every good word and work. For Christ's sake. Amen.

THE JOURNAL.

The Journal of the proceedings of Tuesday, December 7, 1915, was read.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Unless there is objection, the Journal will stand approved as read.

Mr. SHAFROTH. Mr. President, I wish to make a correction in the Journal. It is in relation to the reference of Senate bill No. 777, but I do not see the Senator from Montana [Mr. WALSH] here, and I think——

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. That matter may be adjusted pending the appearance of the Senator from Montana by asking unanimous consent that that particular question may come up hereafter without prejudice from anything that may have been done in the approval of the Journal.

Mr. SHAFROTH. That is what I ask.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Unless there is objection, such will be the order, and the Journal will stand approved.

Mr. SMOOT. Mr. President, there is one other correction I desire to call to the attention of the Chair. On page 76 of the RECORD Senate bill 63 was introduced by me for the purpose of amending section 3 of an act entitled "An act making appropriations for sundry civil expenses of the Government for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1902," and so forth. It was referred to the Committee on Appropriations. I desire to have the reference changed from the Committee on Appropriations to the Committee on Public Lands, and I will call——

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. There can not be a correction of the Journal after the Journal has been approved, but a motion to change the reference will be entertained.

Mr. SMOOT. I was on my feet before the Journal was approved.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. By unanimous consent, the approval of the Journal will be the pending question. Is there objection? The Chair hears none, and it is so ordered.

Mr. SMOOT. I wish to say that I am not asking anything that is not agreeable to the practice of the Senate. It is true that the title of the bill says "amending the sundry civil appropriation act," but the Carey Act, to which the bill refers, was placed upon the sundry civil appropriation act, and this bill proposes to amend that part of the Carey Act which was a part of the appropriation bill, and the subject has always been handled by the Committee on Public Lands.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Chair will say in this connection that there were about 1,200 bills introduced at the last meeting, and necessarily the Chair sacrificed certainty to expedition in many cases. These can be brought to the attention of the Senate, and I am sure the Senate will correct any mistake that may have been made. The bill indicated by the Senator from Utah will be referred to the Committee on Public Lands if there is no objection. The Chair hears none.

Mr. SHAFROTH. The Senator from Montana [Mr. WALSH] is now here, and I should like to bring up the matter to which I referred.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. In view of the circumstances, the Journal can be approved and then that matter can come up as a privileged question. Is there objection to the approval of the Journal? There is none. The Senator from Colorado.

COAL, PHOSPHATE, OIL, GAS, ETC., ON THE PUBLIC DOMAIN.

Mr. SHAFROTH. Mr. President, there was introduced in the Senate last Tuesday a bill by the Senator from Montana [Mr. WALSH]. It is numbered 777 and is entitled "A bill to encourage and promote the mining of coal, phosphate, oil, gas, potassium, and sodium on the public domain." The RECORD states that the bill was referred to the Committee on Mines and Mining.

Mr. CLARK of Wyoming. What is the page?

Mr. SHAFROTH. It is on page 85 of the RECORD. I will state that I made a request to be heard upon the reference of the bill before it should be assigned to any committee. I made that request of the President of the Senate, and I also indicated my desire to one of the clerks at the Secretary's desk. The bill was presented, but it was not read in the Senate. I was listening intently while bills were being introduced, but I did not hear that one read by title. I feel confident it was not read, but, as the President of the Senate has suggested, the bills were so numerous they were placed in the files for reference without following the order established in the Senate in regard to bills.

Mr. President, I want to be heard on the question of the reference of the bill. It seems to me it is a matter which should be corrected in the Journal and that the bill ought to stand as one introduced but not referred; that the reference of it should be determined by presentation to the Chair, and then whichever view the Chair takes, if one side or the other is dissatisfied, appeal to the Senate can be taken or it can be moved that the bill be recommitted.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Under the unanimous consent just given the matter is now before the Senate unprejudiced by anything heretofore done. If the Senator from Colorado desires to change the reference of the bill, a motion to that effect will be entertained after the Senator from Montana has been heard.

Mr. SHAFROTH. The President of the Senate is required by the rules to refer bills to committees, and it seems to me that the presentation of the question should be made to him, so that if either side is not satisfied with the reference by the Chair a motion to recommit or to discharge the committee would be in order. At this stage it appears to me there should be a presentation to the President of the Senate himself as to where the bill should be referred, and then when he refers it there can be offered a motion to discharge the committee by one who is dissatisfied with the Chair's assignment.

Now, Mr. President, on the question as to what committee this bill should be assigned, I will state that a similar bill was introduced in the Senate two years ago in the Sixty-third Congress and it was probably through inadvertence referred to the Committee on Mines and Mining. There came up a discussion in the Senate as to where these leasing bills should be referred. There was a motion made by the Senator from Arizona [Mr. SMITH] that the Public Lands Committee should be given the jurisdiction of the bill for the disposition of the coal lands in the Territory of Alaska. There was a discussion here for three or four days on the question, and by a vote of 34 to 19 the Senate declared that the bill and practically all other bills relating to coal lands should be assigned to the Public Lands Committee.

Following that vote the bill was transferred from the Committee on Mines and Mining; at least I find it on the calendar of the Public Lands Committee, and hearings were had upon that identical bill by the Committee on Public Lands.

It seems to me that that is the only committee to which to refer this bill in view of that action of the Senate, because the identical bill has been before the Committee on Public Lands and testimony has been taken upon the same by that committee.

But there are other good reasons why the bill should be referred to the Committee on Public Lands. There is a grave question before the Congress of the United States as to whether there should be a disposition of the public lands by leases or by entry. That is a question over which undoubtedly the Committee on Public Lands would have jurisdiction, and it would be absurd to refer such a question to another committee that would deal with the alteration or change of the laws relating to the disposition of the public domain.

I find, Mr. President, that there were a number of bills introduced on this same question during the last Congress and bearing upon this identical question, and they all went to the Committee on Public Lands. One was Senate bill 473, introduced by the Senator from North Dakota [Mr. GRONNA]. It was a bill entitled "A bill to provide for the disposal of coal and coal lands."

Senate bill 475, Sixty-third Congress, "A bill to authorize the disposal of phosphate, oil, asphaltum, or natural gas," was introduced also by the Senator from North Dakota [Mr. GRONNA] and referred to the Committee on Public Lands.

Senate bill 603, "to provide for the acquiring of title to public lands classified as and carrying phosphate deposits," was introduced by the Senator from Idaho [Mr. BORAH] and referred to the Committee on Public Lands.

Senate bill 4594, "to provide for agricultural entries on oil, gas, and phosphate lands," was introduced by the Senator from Montana [Mr. WALSH] himself. It was first referred to the Committee on Mines and Mining, and after a controversy over the bill concerning the mining of coal lands in the Territory of Alaska, it went to the Committee on Public Lands, and a hearing was had relative to the matter in that committee.

Senate bill No. 6753, "to regulate the quantity of coal lands which may be entered or controlled by associations or corporations," introduced by myself in the Sixty-third Congress, was referred to the Committee on Public Lands. That is a bill which takes the opposite view of the leasing policy, and it was proper that each of these views should be presented to the same committee, the Committee on Public Lands.

Then there was referred to the Committee on Public Lands what is called the Ferris bill, which is almost the same bill as that which has been introduced by the Senator from Montana [Mr. WALSH], namely, House bill 16136, "A bill to authorize exploration for and disposition of coal, phosphate, oil, gas, potassium, or sodium."

Mr. President, I wish to call attention to the fact that as the Public Lands Committee has had all of these bills referred to them there should not now be one of them singled out and sent to the Committee on Mines and Mining. The Public Lands Committee unquestionably has jurisdiction. These bills have been referred to that committee. Bills relating to coal lands and phosphate lands have been referred to it a number of times in a number of Congresses, and it is not denied by anyone that that committee has jurisdiction of bills of this character.

Then the identical bill which the Senator from Montana has introduced and which has been referred to the Committee on Mines and Mining was taken from the Committee on Mines and Mining and given to the Committee on Public Lands by a vote in this body of 34 to 19.

Mr. President, it is natural that we should in the determination of matters of this kind have in one committee all the conflicting bills, so that they can be reconciled, if possible, or if not reconciled that the committee may have the power and the right to determine which class of bills shall become the legislation with respect to coal, oil, and phosphate lands.

Mr. SHEPPARD. Mr. President——

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Does the Senator from Colorado yield to the Senator from Texas?

Mr. SHAFROTH. I yield.

Mr. SHEPPARD. Will the Senator give us the date on which the vote was taken?

Mr. SHAFROTH. Yes, sir; I can give you the date. It will be found on page 3824 of the RECORD of the second session of the Sixty-third Congress. The bill was for the disposition of coal lands in Alaska and the date of the vote was February 19, 1914.

Mr. STONE. Mr. President——

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Does the Senator from Colorado yield to the Senator from Missouri?

Mr. SHAFROTH. I yield to the Senator.

Mr. STONE. There seems to be a controversy as to the reference of the particular bill which relates to the disposition of coal lands in Alaska?

Mr. SHAFROTH. Yes, sir.

Mr. STONE. The Senator is making an argument why that bill should be confided to the Public Lands Committee.

Mr. SHAFROTH. Not that bill, because the bill now introduced applies to deposits of coal, oil, phosphate, and potassium in the entire United States. The Senator will see that the bill which has been introduced is a general bill relating to that subject for the entire public domain of the United States.

Mr. STONE. Has the bill been referred?

Mr. SHAFROTH. It was not referred. I requested the President of the Senate to allow me to have a hearing before he referred it, and I notified the clerk at the desk also.

Mr. STONE. The Senator from Colorado desires to have it referred to the Public Lands Committee?

Mr. SHAFROTH. I want a hearing upon the question of reference. That is my desire.

Mr. STONE. The Senator from Montana wants to have it referred to the Committee on Mines and Mining?

Mr. SHAFROTH. Yes, sir.

Mr. STONE. The Senator from Colorado has referred to a number of bills that have been referred to the Committee on Public Lands by way of supporting his argument.

Mr. SHAFROTH. Yes, sir.

Mr. STONE. Now, what concerns me immediately to know, aside from the mere right of the technical reference, is this, if the Senator can inform me, and no doubt he can. Is there a distinct, definite difference of policy with respect to the subjects covered by these bills as between these two committees?

Mr. SHAFROTH. I do not know whether there is or not. The Committee on Public Lands reported the bill called the Ferris bill. It did not suit me, but at the same time I think this matter being under the control of the Committee on Public Lands, it would be much better that it should consider all the bills relating to the subject.

Mr. STONE. Then the only question before the Senate for the President of the Senate is as to the technical right under the rule of one committee over the other to have charge of the bill.

Mr. SHAFROTH. I do not know that you can call it a technical right, because these bills have always been referred to the Committee on Public Lands. In the last Congress the question was discussed and thrashed out as to whether the bill should be referred to the Committee on Public Lands or the Committee on Mines and Mining. A vote of the Senate was taken, and that vote was 34 to 19, and the Alaska bill concerning coal lands was referred to the Public Lands Committee, reported by that committee to the Senate, and passed by the Senate, and also it was passed by the House of Representatives. It related to the leasing of coal lands in Alaska.

Mr. President, it seems to me that under all of the precedents that have been established this matter should be referred to the Committee on Public Lands. Then, if the Senator from Montana wants to test the question in the Senate, he can move to discharge the Committee on Public Lands and to have the bill referred to the Committee on Mines and Mining; but I do not believe that the Senate, after having taken the vote to which I have referred, will reverse its own action.

Mr. VARDAMAN. Mr. President, I would like to ask the Senator from Colorado a question.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Does the Senator from Colorado yield to the Senator from Mississippi for that purpose?

Mr. SHAFROTH. Yes, sir.

Mr. VARDAMAN. The bill, as I understand, is now before the Senate for reference?

Mr. SHAFROTH. Yes, sir.

Mr. VARDAMAN. It is not necessary that it should be referred to the committee and then that the committee be discharged. It would be in order, I take it, for the Senator from Colorado to move that the bill be referred to a certain committee. That is a matter within the right of the Senate to dispose of, it seems to me.

Mr. SHAFROTH. I suppose that, inasmuch as the rule provides that the President of the Senate shall assign the bills in the first instance, that should be done.

Mr. VARDAMAN. That is where the question is not raised.

Mr. SHAFROTH. That may be. If the Chair thinks that that is the proper procedure, then, of course, I should like to have the bill referred to the Committee on Public Lands.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. At this point the Chair will take the liberty of making a statement. As the Chair has heretofore stated, about 1,200 bills have been offered. It is utterly impossible within the time that the Senate is likely to remain in session to make an individual reference of every one of the bills. So the Chair directed the Secretary to make the reference in cases where there was not likely to be any dispute about the matter. The Chair overlooked the fact that an objection had been made as to the reference of this particular bill. If his attention had been called to the pendency of this bill, it would have been excepted from the rule directing the Secretary to make the reference.

In the few cases where the references were made by the Chair, the Chair adopted the plan of referring all bills that came over from the former Congress or bills pending in the former Congress to the same committees before which they were heretofore pending. No exception was made to that rule; and it would have been observed in this case if the attention of the Chair had been called to it; but now that the matter has arisen, it seems to the Chair the proper way to dispose of it is for the Senator from Colorado [Mr. SHAFROTH] to make a motion to refer this bill to any particular committee to which he desires to have it go. The matter can then be presented to the Senate in some form where it can act. The Chair prefers not to exercise any right about it, rather preferring to submit the whole matter to the Senate.

Mr. SHAFROTH. I make that motion.

Mr. CLARK of Wyoming. Mr. President, I want to make a suggestion to the Senator from Colorado. I have been attempting to get hold of a printed copy of this bill, but I have just this moment been informed that it has not yet been printed. Not having a copy of the bill before me, it occurs to me it would be well for it to go over until we can get the printed bill and see what it really contains.

Mr. SMOOT. It is exactly the same as the bill of last year.

Mr. CLARK of Wyoming. I do not know whether or not it is the same as the bill of last year. I should like to examine the bill before it is referred.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senate having taken up the matter by unanimous consent, the Chair does not think that a single objection will send it over at this stage.

Mr. SHAFROTH. It seems to me we ought to settle it now.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. It can be disposed of unless the Senate shall otherwise direct.

Mr. SHAFROTH. I understand this is identically the same bill as that presented last year.

Mr. CLARK of Wyoming. If the Senator from Montana, who introduced the bill, is able to say that it is exactly the same as the former bill, that is all I care for.

Mr. WALSH. Mr. President, I took the same course in presenting this bill that I did in connection with every other bill I presented. I indorsed upon each of the bills the committee to which, in my estimation, the bill should be referred. Apparently this bill was referred accordingly to the Committee on Mines and Mining. I understood that the bill was opposed by the esteemed Senator from Colorado [Mr. SHAFROTH], and I imagined that when the title was read at the desk objection would be made to its being referred to the Committee on Mines and Mining, and that the matter would be then thrashed out; but on account of the vast number of bills introduced the Chair deemed it advisable to refer them without any announcement. Accordingly, the bill went to the Committee on Mines and Mining.

Mr. President, I trust very sincerely, indeed, that the bill will not be taken away from the Committee on Mines and Mining. It belongs there by right. Of course, Mr. President, this is not a mere matter of personal choice at all. The Senator from Colorado is a member of the Mines and Mining Committee; he is not a member of the Committee on Public Lands. He does not want the bill to go to the Committee on Mines and Mining for some reason. That reason is because he is opposed to the bill; he does not want it passed, and he thinks apparently that that end will be more certainly accomplished by having the bill referred to the Committee on Public Lands than by having it referred to the Committee on Mines and Mining. That is a legitimate method of conducting his opposition to this bill.

But, Mr. President, there is no rule of the Senate under which the jurisdiction of any particular committee is defined. The question as to whether bills shall go to one committee or to another committee is ordinarily determined by the nearness of relation between the title of the bill and the name of the committee. This has gone to the Committee on Mines and Mining. It deals with the occupation of mineral lands so that they may be mined. It is entirely appropriate, accordingly, to send it to the Committee on Mines and Mining. At the same time the bill deals with a certain class of public lands, and it may be said that for that reason it is appropriate to send the bill to the Committee on Public Lands. It is a mere matter of choice as to which of these committees the bill shall be sent.

Mr. VARDAMAN. Mr. President, I should like to ask the Senator from Montana if there are other bills of this character before the Committee on Public Lands? Has that committee under consideration, or had it under consideration at the last session, bills similar to this?

Mr. WALSH. There have been bills of the same general character before the Committee on Public Lands; and on Tuesday a bill was introduced by the Senator from Utah [Mr. SMOOT] providing for a commission to revise the entire body of the mineral laws, which was referred to the Committee on Mines and Mining.

Mr. VARDAMAN. My reason for making the inquiry was that the Senator from Colorado [Mr. SHAFROTH] suggested that certain testimony has been taken by that committee on this matter; and it seems to me that if the change were now made it would merely cause a double amount of work, a duplication of investigation.

Mr. WALSH. Not at all, Mr. President; not in the slightest degree. If any testimony was taken on that bill introduced during the last Congress it was, I presume, reduced to writing, printed, and is available to every member of the Mines and Mining Committee; and every member of the Mines and Mining Committee who takes any interest in this matter can ascertain what that testimony is; but, as a matter of fact, there was not any testimony taken on the subject; it was just simply considered by the committee. There has been no testimony taken, so far as my present recollection serves me, on that particular bill, but it is a mere matter of choice between the two committees.

Mr. President, I undertake to say that the number of bills introduced on Tuesday and referred to the Committee on Public Lands aggregates more than the number of bills assigned to any other committee of the Senate; I undertake to say, sir, that, if they were counted, it would be found that more than twice as many bills have gone to that committee as to any other committee; in other words, Mr. President, that committee is now overwhelmed with work and it always is. Among the bills referred to that committee was a bill dealing with the disposition of water-power sites on the public domain. That is one of the great bills that are going to come before this Congress for consideration. There is to my mind no subject which will engage its attention that is of greater or of more immediate public importance than is that bill. The committee will be engaged in the consideration of that bill, in all probability, for some time to come.

Mr. President, the other bill providing for the disposition of coal, oil, and gas lands, lands containing deposits of phosphate, potash, and of sodium, is one which demands the immediate consideration of Congress. Everybody concedes that the existing laws have no proper application at all to the subject of the appropriation of lands containing deposits of oil. There is the keenest rivalry to-day out in the State of Wyoming and in the State of Montana in relation to oil lands; a great strife has arisen; practically a stampede to that country has ensued; and there is no adequate law for the appropriation of lands containing deposits of oil. On Monday last the Secretary of the Interior withdrew from entry a large area of lands along the border line between those two States because the present law is entirely inapplicable, and leads to fraud and rapine. Some immediate relief is necessary in order not to arrest the development of that country.

I want to get this bill before the Committee on Mines and Mining so that a report may be made speedily upon it while the Committee on Public Lands is engaged in the consideration of the water-power bill and other important legislation of that character. I do not want to see this bill buried in that committee until everything else that is before it, its great mass of business, is disposed of. Why should not the two committees go right on to work on these two great measures?

Mr. President, this bill deals with the subject of lands containing deposits of phosphate. There are great deposits of phosphates in the States of Idaho, Montana, Utah, and Wyoming. Five million dollars are ready to go into improvements for the purpose of mining and treating these deposits in my State and in the adjacent States if only some law can be passed under which the lands containing them can be appropriated.

My friend, the esteemed Senator from Colorado, does not like our ideas concerning the character of legislation that ought to be had upon this subject, but, Mr. President, why then should he not come forward and offer a substitute for the proposed legislation and let it be thrashed out here upon the floor? If he can offer a wiser suggestion for the disposition of these lands than we, why should he not do so?

I ask you in all fairness to the great western country, for which I assume to speak on this occasion, do not bury this bill where it will never be heard of again, but let us get it out of committee as soon as possible and have it considered here upon its merits, whatever they may be.

Mr. SMITH of Arizona. Mr. President, this matter has already been fought out before this body. I will not say, for it would be unjust to the high character of my distinguished friend from Montana [Mr. WALSH] to say that the very title of this bill is misleading, but the title of the bill does not show its purpose; it conceals its purpose. Let us see. It is entitled:

A bill to encourage and promote the mining of coal, phosphate, oil, gas, potassium, and sodium on the public domain.

It takes in every State that has within its borders any public lands bearing any of these metals. Then, in the very first section the bill provides:

That deposits of coal, phosphate, oil, gas, potassium, or sodium, in land owned by the United States and not otherwise reserved, shall be subject to disposition in the form and manner provided by this act to citizens of the United States—

And so forth.

The purpose now is to take from the Committee on Public Lands jurisdiction over the public lands and to hand to the Committee on Mines and Mining the right to take from the public domain any part of the country it pleases, all under the assertion that the action proposed is to be a wonderful help to the people of the West and to the people of the United States.

Questions relating to the segregation of mineral lands or any other lands have from the formation of our public land policy been referred to the Committee on Public Lands. I had the honor for many years to serve in the other House on the Committee on Mines and Mining, and in this body, and in the other House also, I have served on the Committee on Public Lands, and I appeal to the history of the reference of bills touching the question of segregating, controlling, fixing prices, and manner of handling of any of the public lands, mineral or nonmineral, to support the statement that all such bills have been referred to the Committee on Public Lands in both bodies.

For what purpose do we find this question raised here? The Senator from Montana insists that the jurisdiction over this question shall be changed and handed to his particular committee. Except for his high character and integrity, one would be led to believe that probably underlying it was a great hope of personal notoriety, but his great character prevents such an imputation. His sincerity, however, must not throw the Senate off its feet and change the policy relating to the public lands which has been followed for all these years by referring a bill providing that certain portions of the public domain "shall be subject to disposition in the form and manner provided by this act" to a committee that never before had jurisdiction of even a cognate question.

The Senate should refer this bill where every bill of similar character which has come before it has been referred, namely, to the Committee on Public Lands, so that, as the Senator from Colorado [Mr. SHAFROTH] justly suggests, having before us the entire subject and the policy of the country as to the disposition and care of the public lands, the committee may take appropriate action in the premises. The jurisdiction of the Committee on Mines and Mining arises only when any land becomes mineral land under the action of the Public Lands Committee and of Congress. The question of segregating the public lands must lie in their hands. The Committee on Mines and Mining may take up and suggest amendments to the laws affecting the mining industry, but certainly it can not consider questions relating to the disposition and classification of the public lands of the United States.

Mr. CLARK of Wyoming. Mr. President, I was somewhat astonished to find that this particular bill had been sought to be referred to the Committee on Mines and Mining. This is, I am told, identically the bill that was introduced at the last session of Congress. The bill was prepared, as I understand, under the careful study of the Secretary of the Interior, the chairman of the Public Lands Committee in the House, the chairman of the Public Lands Committee in the Senate, and the chairman of the Committee on Mines and Mining in the Senate. The identical bill was referred to the Committee on Public Lands in the House, and was referred to the Committee on Public Lands in the Senate.

The Committee on Public Lands in the Senate gave careful attention to this bill. It is of wide importance, particularly to the members of the committee, who are drawn mostly from the public-land States. Very careful attention was given to it, and the bill was reported out from that committee at the last session of Congress.

Whether or not the report of that committee was satisfactory to the Senator from Montana, I do not know, but I can not see how the Senate can better itself by taking the bill from a committee that has already considered and made a report upon it and referring it to a committee that heretofore has had nothing whatever to do with it. Certainly the character of the bill and the substance of the bill make it absolutely proper for the jurisdiction of the Committee on Public Lands.

The bill refers to something more than mines and mining. It refers to the leasing of lands, the leasing of the public domain of the United States—leasing it in large bodies, leasing it in small bodies, providing for the annual rental, providing for everything of that sort which should naturally come before the Committee on Public Lands.

In view of the supreme importance of this measure, and in view of the fact that the Committee on Public Lands has already given it great consideration, I trust that the motion of the Senator from Colorado will prevail.

Mr. VARDAMAN. Mr. President——

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Does the Senator from Wyoming yield to the Senator from Mississippi?

Mr. CLARK of Wyoming. I do.

Mr. VARDAMAN. I was going to suggest to the Senator, with his permission, that in order to compose the differences between the belligerents on this matter, as suggested by the always vigilant Senator from Kentucky [Mr. JAMES], the bill might go to the Committee on the Conservation of National Resources. That would be absolutely neutral ground, and I assure the Senator from Montana that it shall not be buried there without action.

Mr. CLARK of Wyoming. I agree partially with the Senator from Mississippi. I think that as between the two committees—the Committee on Mines and Mining and the Committee on Conservation of National Resources—the bill should go to the Committee on Conservation of National Resources. This bill, however, provides something more. It provides for the disposition of the public domain of the United States in all the public-land States.

Mr. VARDAMAN. I want the Senator to understand that I am not going to insist on that course. I merely made the suggestion as a means of composing the differences between the Senators, one wanting it to go to one committee and one to another. I think the committee I have suggested would be absolutely neutral ground, where the matter could be fought out and an early report made.

Mr. CLARK of Wyoming. I assume that any committee to which it may go is an absolutely neutral committee and will report.

Mr. VARDAMAN. The Senator from Montana intimated that if the bill should go as requested by the Senator from Colorado it would be buried.

Mr. CLARK of Wyoming. I think the Senator from Montana did not intend to be so understood, because it was not buried at the last session but was reported to the Senate. The bill provides for leasing all sorts of these lands, in large and small quantities, at an annual rental per acre; and I can not see why it should go to any other committee than that to which it has gone. Certainly the personnel of the Public Lands Committee is not such but that this body can trust it to give fair consideration to whatever bills are referred to it.

Mr. FALL. Mr. President——

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Does the Senator from Wyoming yield to the Senator from New Mexico?

Mr. CLARK of Wyoming. I do.

Mr. FALL. The Senator from Wyoming has been a Member of this body for a number of years. I wish to ask him if there is not a fundamental difference between the two committees which seems to be entirely overlooked by the Senator from Montana; that is, that the mining of coal, phosphates, and other minerals of that character belongs peculiarly to the matter of public lands. The mining of precious minerals—gold and silver and lead—does not belong to the Committee on Public Lands but belongs to the Committee on Mines and Mining. Is not that the distinction the Senate has always had in mind in the establishment of the two committees?

In other words, if you make an application for the location of a mining claim known as a coal claim, your application is made to the Public Land Office. If you make an application for the location of a mineral claim, you do not make it to the Public Land Office nor to any public-land authority. That right is given you by the laws of Congress. You simply make your location, place it upon the property itself, and, under the laws and local rules and regulations of the majority of the States, you file it with the probate clerk. It is not a matter for the consideration of the Land Department at all, until later it may come to the question of a patent.

To my mind, that has always been the difference between the subject matters to be considered properly by the Committee on Mines and Mining and the Committee on Public Lands. Phosphates, coal, and so forth, are matters peculiarly belonging to the public lands, and necessarily for the consideration of the Committee on Public Lands. As I say, you can only acquire title by going to the Public Land Office in the one instance, when you acquire an absolute title, and you may take $5,000,000 from the bowels of the earth in the other instance by simply making your location on the ground.

Mr. CLARK of Wyoming. Mr. President——

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from Wyoming will take notice that he has about yielded himself off the floor.

Mr. CLARK of Wyoming. I am perfectly willing to yield the floor for the present.

Mr. WORKS. Mr. President, at the last session of Congress a number of bills were introduced involving the question of the disposition of the public lands. Their ultimate purpose was to change entirely the system of dealing with the public lands of the Government. Heretofore they have been disposed of by entry and sale, whereby the title passed from the Government. The object of these bills, taken as a whole, was to reserve the title in the Government, and to lease the lands to private individuals.

That line of proposed legislation is looked upon with a good deal of apprehension in the Western States. It involves, I think, a very grave constitutional question, as to whether the Government, as a landed proprietor, can hold title to these lands indefinitely and lease them under long terms. It is a very grave question that is going to bring about a great deal of discussion at this session of Congress.

Nearly all of those bills, I presume, have been reintroduced at the beginning of this session. One of them was the subject of long hearings before the Public Lands Committee at the last session of Congress. That committee conducted a very exhaustive hearing on the whole subject, and long reports were made by the majority and by the minority members of the committee, dealing not only with the question of propriety but with the legal questions involved. That committee was not so overwhelmed with business at the last session of Congress that it could not give careful attention to this question, which I think is one of the most important that will come before this session of Congress.

I can conceive of no reason why the jurisdiction over those bills should be transferred from the Public Lands Committee to the Committee on Mines and Mining. They involve the disposition of the public lands. They propose a policy of a permanent character, and one that is revolutionary, it seems to me, in dealing with the public lands. I believe they ought to be left in the hands of the Public Lands Committee, whose duty it is to deal directly with these questions.

Mr. SMOOT. Mr. President, bills similar to this have been introduced in the Senate for the last seven years. As a member of the Public Lands Committee I want to say to the Senate that not only were there hearings at the last session, but the first hearing upon a similar bill was held some five years ago.

This bill is for the disposition of public lands and ought to go to the Public Lands Committee. Involved in it is the leasing system, which to my mind is a revolutionary move that is going to affect vitally every Western State. Furthermore, the expense to which the Government has been put for reporting and printing last session's hearings is such that I do not believe the consideration of the bill ought to be undertaken by another committee and involve the Government in a great additional expense.

I rather resented the implication of the Senator from Montana wherein he stated that the Committee on Public Lands was so overwhelmed with the reference of bills that it was impossible for that committee to give proper consideration to them. There is no committee in this body that gives more time to its work than the Public Lands Committee. There is no committee in this body that has its calendar nearer cleared than that committee. As for the statement that more bills are referred to it than to any other committee, I want to say to the Senator that he is mistaken. There are more bills referred to the Committee on Claims than there are to the Committee on Public Lands. Would the Senator from Montana want one or two thousand claims bills referred to the Committee on Mines and Mining because of the greater number of bills that are referred to the Committee on Claims than to the Committee on Mines and Mining?

Mr. WALSH. Mr. President——

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Does the Senator from Utah yield to the Senator from Montana?

Mr. SMOOT. I do.

Mr. WALSH. If the Senator from Utah will pardon me, I should like to except claims and pensions, but outside of those I think my statement was correct.

Mr. SMOOT. I was going to refer to pensions.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Chair desires to notify the Senator from Utah that the next time he yields he will abandon the floor.

Mr. SMOOT. If I yield again, Mr. President, I am perfectly willing to abandon the floor. I will also say that I am going to take only a moment more of the Senate's time.

The reference of this identical bill has been acted upon by the Senate of the United States, Mr. President. We discussed it for about two hours and a half, and a vote of the Senate was taken upon it, and it was referred to the Public Lands Committee. If it had been announced to the Senate when introduced, the question would have been raised immediately, and perhaps this discussion would have been obviated.

I can not help but believe that the bill ought to go to the Committee on Public Lands.

Mr. PITTMAN. Mr. President, it seems to me the question here is whether or not we are going to dispense with the services of the Committee on Mines and Mining. There has been appointed as the chairman of that committee one of the ablest mining lawyers in the West. He is willing to give his services to that committee. He desires to work on matters connected with mines. I assume that that committee was created for the purpose of considering matters referred to it by the Senate in relation to mines.

As far as the public lands are concerned, there is hardly a gold mine or a silver mine in the West that is not located on the public lands. There is not a patent to a gold mine or a silver mine in the West that does not carry with it title to Government land; and yet I do not believe the members of the Public Lands Committee are going to ask that subjects dealing with gold and silver mines shall be sent over to the Public Lands Committee. If matters affecting gold, silver, copper, and lead mines are not to be transferred from the Mining Committee to the Public Lands Committee, why should bills relating to the acquisition of phosphates, coal, potassium, and oil be so transferred? They are treated by the courts as minerals. They come under the mining law.

For instance, this bill deals with the disposition of minerals just as much as the disposition of gold or silver or copper or lead. Is it not the wish of the Senate that matters dealing with the disposition of minerals should go to the Mining Committee? Did you not select one of the ablest mining lawyers in this country as chairman of that committee so that this body might have the benefit of his legal knowledge?

You are trying to cloud the question by saying that the bill deals with the public lands. In dealing with all mines we deal with lands, but mining matters are always recognized as constituting a separate branch of the public-land law. The public-land law deals with homesteads, with desert-land entries, with Carey Act entries, with all kinds of surface entries—matters that are particularly land matters; but questions affecting minerals are segregated from the land matters, and they always have been.

It seems to me that in this case it is entirely unfair to the Senator from Montana [Mr. WALSH] to take a committee that should be a live committee, a committee that should be working all the time on these matters, and make it a dead committee. It seems to me unfair to the Senator from Montana that he should be induced to accept the chairmanship of a committee where his legal training and his legal knowledge are supposed to come into play for the benefit of the Senate and then to take everything away from such committee. I say to you that if you can take this bill away from him, you can take every bill away from him.

I am a member of the Committee on Public Lands, and I want to say that at the time of the adjournment of the last Congress there were pending before that committee, undisposed of, 375 bills. The chairman of that committee, the senior Senator from Montana [Mr. MYERS], worked day and night in the discharge of his duties as chairman, and he was complaining to the Committee on Rules all the time that he could not stand it; that he had to have more help. Now, what do you want to do? Do you want to pile additional work on him?

There is not any question but that the work coming before the Public Lands Committee at the coming session is going to be greater than ever. There is not any question but that there are going to be hearings on the power bill that will run for weeks, if not for months. There is not any question but that if this bill goes back to the Public Lands Committee there will be hearings on it again, and there is not a member of that committee but that believes there will be hearings on this bill no matter to which committee it goes. The fact that the committee reported it out favorably at the last session does not mean that it is not going to consider it at this session.

I do not believe there is a member of the Public Lands Committee but that knows that there will be further hearings on the bill, no matter to what committee it goes, and that there will be further consideration of it; and I think, in all fairness to the Senate itself, that it should not proceed to destroy a valuable committee.

Mr. CLARK of Wyoming. Mr. President——

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from Wyoming has addressed the Senate twice on this proposition.

Mr. CLARK of Wyoming. Only once, I think.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator yielded to the Senator from New Mexico.

Mr. CLARK of Wyoming. I did; that is the first time.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Chair stated to the Senator that he was about to exhaust his right to the floor for the day on this question. If he interpreted that to be an absolute announcement that he had done so, the Chair will state that he did not intend to take the Senator off the floor without giving him notice that that would happen; and in view of that fact the Chair will recognize the Senator now.

Mr. CLARK of Wyoming. Mr. President, I probably allowed the Senator from New Mexico to overstep my time; and if the Chair thinks that I ought not to address the Senate further——

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Chair does not think anything on the subject. The Senator is at liberty to proceed to suit himself.

Mr. CLARK of Wyoming. I wanted to say, Mr. President, that I had not quite finished what I started to say upon the question of the public domain as given in the text of this bill. It was with no desire to nullify the activity of the usefulness of the Committee on Mines and Mining—nobody recognizes more than the present speaker the preeminent ability of the Senator from Montana, who is the chairman of that committee—but we have certain jurisdictions for certain committees, notwithstanding they are not clearly defined under the rules of the Senate or under the resolution creating the committees. The Committee on Public Lands, without question, no matter whether it is overworked or underworked, is the committee to deal with the public domain of the United States. It is the committee to which bills should be referred with regard to the disposal of the public domain of the United States. Else, what is the province of that committee?

The bill which is before us is a bill which does just that. In regard to mines and mining, I do not suppose the Committee on Mines and Mining is any better able to deal with the production of oil and gas than any other committee, because they are minerals only by legislative enactment; that is all. The laws of mines and mining are applied to these resources simply as a matter of technicality by legislative enactment.

This bill, however, provides for the leasing of the public domain, as I said, in large and small quantities. It provides for people to go over the public domain, to prospect it, to drill the public domain, to sink shafts upon the public domain. If they find anything they are to be allowed to lease that particular land, and then the balance of all this land that is withdrawn is to be leased without reference to those discoveries at all. It is purely and simply a bill to dispose of large portions of the public domain of the United States.

Mr. President, I have no personal feeling in regard to this matter. I have the utmost confidence in the Senator from Montana. I have the utmost confidence in the Senator from Nevada, who is a member of both these committees; and I know that upon either of them he would exercise his very best judgment under all the conditions as they should be presented to him. But I do believe in maintaining the integrity of the jurisdiction of these committees; and if this bill is taken from the Public Lands Committee I can not conceive of any bill that would properly come under its jurisdiction.

Mr. SHAFROTH. Mr. President, I wish to say just a word in reply to what has been said. The Committee on Public Lands, as has been so amply stated here, has jurisdiction over all matters that relate to the disposition of public lands. The Committee on Mines and Mining is a committee that has been created, in my judgment, for the purpose of dealing with questions of mining, such as assessment work, the location of mines, the location of placer claims, and the amount of work annually to be performed upon them. They have an infinite amount of work if they desire to do it. The American Mining Congress every year, for the past few years at least, has insisted that there should be a codification of the mining laws. The Committee on Mines and Mining is the proper committee to do that work, but every time the question comes before the Mines and Mining Committee it is said "we have not the time to do that, we must have a commission of some kind"; and we sometimes have reports in favor of a commission to codify these laws when as a matter of fact the committee itself ought to do that work.

Mr. President, I do not want to go into the matter further. Here are bills introduced this session of Congress. Take the calendar. I will warrant that the bill which the Senator from North Dakota has introduced relating to coal lands has been assigned to the Committee on Public Lands. I will warrant that the bill providing for the classification of lands has been given to the Committee on Public Lands. The bill for agricultural entry on coal lands no doubt has been given to the Committee on Public Lands, and the bill to authorize the disposal of phosphate, oil, potassium, and natural gas has also been referred to that committee. This morning when the Journal was approved those bills were referred to the Committee on Public Lands. It seems to me, Mr. President, that there is no good reason why this bill should be taken from the Committee on Public Lands.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The question is on the motion of the Senator from Colorado [Mr. SHAFROTH] that the bill be referred to the Committee on Public Lands. [Putting the question.] The ayes seem to have it.

Mr. WALSH. I ask for a roll call.

The yeas and nays were ordered, and the Secretary proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. GALLINGER (when his name was called). I have a general pair with the Senator from New York [Mr. O'GORMAN], which I transfer to the Senator from Idaho [Mr. BRADY] and vote "yea."

Mr. SHERMAN (when Mr. LEWIS's name was called). I wish to state that my colleague [Mr. LEWIS] is confined to his room by illness, and can not attend to-day's session.

Mr. ROBINSON (when Mr. MYERS's name was called). I have been requested to announce that the Senator from Montana [Mr. MYERS] is unavoidably absent from the Chamber on an official engagement.

Mr. OLIVER (when Mr. PENROSE's name was called). My colleague [Mr. PENROSE] is unavoidably absent. If he were present, he would vote "yea."

Mr. SAULSBURY (when his name was called). I transfer my pair with the junior Senator from Rhode Island [Mr. COLT] to the junior Senator from Indiana [Mr. KERN] and vote "nay."

Mr. MARTIN of Virginia (when Mr. SHIVELY's name was called). The Senator from Indiana [Mr. SHIVELY] is detained from the Chamber by sickness. He is paired with the Senator from Maine [Mr. BURLEIGH], who, I understand, is also absent, sick.

Mr. TILLMAN (when his name was called). I transfer my pair with the Senator from West Virginia [Mr. GOFF] to my colleague [Mr. SMITH of South Carolina] and vote "yea."

Mr. WARREN (when his name was called). I have a general pair with the junior Senator from North Carolina [Mr. OVERMAN]. I do not see him in his place, and therefore withhold my vote.

Mr. WILLIAMS (when his name was called). I have a general pair with the senior Senator from Pennsylvania [Mr. PENROSE]. Being informed by the statement made by his colleague that if he were present his vote and mine would not conflict, I vote "yea."

The roll call was concluded.

Mr. CLARK of Wyoming (after having voted in the affirmative). I have a general pair with the senior Senator from Missouri [Mr. STONE]. That Senator is absent, but on a communication from him I shall allow my vote to stand.

Mr. CHILTON. I wish to announce that the junior Senator from Indiana [Mr. KERN] is unavoidably absent.

Mr. GALLINGER. I was requested to state that the Senator from Maine [Mr. BURLEIGH] is detained by illness and is paired with the Senator from Indiana [Mr. SHIVELY]; also, that the Senator from Delaware [Mr. DU PONT] is paired with the Senator from Texas [Mr. CULBERSON].

The result was announced—yeas 46, nays 23, as follows:

YEAS—46.

Bankhead	Gronna	Martin, Va.	Sterling

The communication is accompanied with illustrations, and, if there be no objection, it will be referred to the Committee on Printing for further action.

DISTRICT TIDAL BASIN.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Chair lays before the Senate a communication from the Secretary of War, transmitting, in response to a resolution of February 19, calendar day March 2, 1915, certain information relative to the bathing in the Tidal Basin in Potomac Park, Washington, D. C. The communication will be printed and referred to the Committee on the District of Columbia and, without objection, it will also be printed in the RECORD.

The communication is as follows:

WAR DEPARTMENT,
Washington, December 7, 1915.

The PRESIDENT OF THE SENATE.

SIR: In compliance with Senate resolution 557 of February 19 (calendar day March 2), 1915, instructing the Secretary of War to inform the Senate on certain questions relative to bathing in the Tidal Basin in Potomac Park, Washington, D. C., I have the honor to submit the following information. The questions are taken up in the order in which they appear in the resolution.

First. By what authority of law or regulation are private parties permitted to maintain a boat and bathhouse on said Tidal Basin?

Congress, by act of September 26, 1890, authorized a bathing beach and dressing houses to be constructed on the east shore of the tidal reservoir against the Washington Monument Grounds and appropriated $3,000 for this purpose. The Secretary of War was requested in the act to grant a permit for the new beach. The houses were built and in use for a number of years. To make way for park improvement Congress authorized the removal of this beach in 1902 to what was then known as the inner basin, northwest of the present site of the Paul Jones Monument, and $4,000 was appropriated to cover the removal and new construction.

On November 22, 1902, the Secretary of War allowed boathouses to be built on the bathing beach in the inner basin by private persons (M. N. Hekimian and J. H. Hollis), at their own expense; the houses to revert to the commissioners of the District after five years; the builders to have exclusive use of them for renting to the public the privilege of fishing, boating, swimming, and skating.

On March 3, 1903, Congress appropriated $5,000 for floating baths to be moored in the tidal reservoir or the water front of Washington.

Under the authority for removal of the beach boathouses were constructed on the beach on the inner basin on what is now filled-in land. Under the authority for floating baths two floats were built in 1903 and moored in the Tidal Basin. A permit was granted by the Secretary of War in 1902 allowing a space 400 feet long by 200 feet wide in the Tidal Basin for these floats which were built with the appropriation of March 3, 1903, above referred to.

It thus appears that floats for swimming at the present location and boathouses on the Tidal Basin were all duly authorized by Congress.

In 1907 the Commissioners of the District relinquished jurisdiction over this area and the Chief of Engineers resumed charge of the beach, including the boathouses. The tenant at that time, Mr. Hekimian, was permitted by the Chief of Engineers to retain his occupancy under a new lease dated July 11, 1908. Mr. Hekimian was followed by Mr. Plunkett and he in turn by the present lessee, Mr. Wells, who occupies it under lease dated February 27, 1914.

Second. What rental or fee, if any, is paid by the proprietors of said boat and bathhouse for the privilege of maintaining the same on the shores of said Tidal Basin?

The present tenant pays rental at the rate of $500 per year. He secured his lease in competition under sealed proposal after public advertising. The terms of his lease do not grant him any right to charge for bathing in the tidal reservoir. Bathing in the waters is free to all; but if bathers use the boathouse, or the tenant's floats, boats, bathing suits, etc., he has the privilege under the terms of the lease to charge them for the use of these facilities.

Third. What is the cause of the contamination and the pollution of the waters of said Tidal Basin?

The causes of the contamination and the pollution of the waters of the basin are several. The Potomac River water feeding the basin is itself polluted, although tests of its condition near the influent to the basin indicates that it is improved, perhaps, by dilution caused by tidal action. The raw river water at Great Falls is considered too polluted for drinking purposes, and reaches a satisfactory filtration point only after passing over three settling basins between that point and the source of raw supply. After passing Great Falls the river water is continually charged with more or less sewage, the main sources of this above the basin being Georgetown, Rock Creek, the Chesapeake & Ohio Canal, and a large sewer near the Lincoln Memorial. This condition has been considerably mitigated by the recently built intercepting sewer along the river.

Furthermore, the condition of the water in the basin itself is polluted by the direct discharge of sewage from 10 toilets in the immediate vicinity into the basin itself and by refuse thrown into the water by the public picnicking and fishing along its borders. These toilets are not used by many people, but are undeniably the source of some pollution.

Fourth. By what means, if any, can the waters of said Tidal Basin be freed from such pollution and contamination?

The extent of this pollution is not great. Daily examinations of the water of the basin covering a period of six weeks were made last spring by officials of the Public Health Bureau, and the water was found unfit to drink, but there was some doubt expressed as to whether it was not clean enough to bathe in. Opinions vary on this point, but it seems a very rigorous requirement that water for swimming in the summer time should be pure enough to drink.

It is thought that the waters in the Tidal Basin can not be entirely freed from pollution at reasonable cost. Filtration or chemical treatment would not be justified on account of the expense. They can be considerably purified by eliminating the direct discharge of sewage into the basin from the toilets in the vicinity without much trouble, by preventing trash and other refuse from being thrown into the basin by stricter policing and attacking the aquatic weed growth detrimental to the condition of the water. This could be done at comparatively small expense. If sewage ejection at points above the influent to the basin could all be intercepted it would add materially to the purity of waters feeding the basin, but it would seem that such an undertaking would perhaps not be an economical step for this purpose alone.

It is thought that the tidal flushing of the basin, by which two-thirds of the whole volume of the basin is changed daily, makes the water in the basin compare very favorably with water in use in bathing establishments along rivers in other cities of this country and abroad. Such baths are in constant use along the rivers of London, Paris, Berlin, and Vienna. An extreme instance may be cited in New York City. That city has been for years operating floating public baths in the North River and East River, at the Battery, and in the Boroughs of Manhattan and Kings. In these floating baths it has been found necessary to construct the spaces permitting the free entrance and exit of the river water very small in order to keep out the larger and consequently more objectionable particles of floating matter, and even at the open beaches in the North River it has been found necessary to screen the river water as it flows down from adjacent sewers by the bathing establishments. Notwithstanding this, in one year alone these baths were used by over 1,800,000 bathers. It is understood that these public baths have been condemned, and, if they have not been discontinued by this time, they will be later, despite their apparent popularity.

In view of the comparatively slight contamination there may be in the waters of the basin, as shown by recent tests, and the apparent benefit to a large number of people, it is believed that its temporary use for bathing should not be objected to. Only good swimmers can, on account of the depth, avail themselves of the bathing there, and such swimmers do not swallow the water that inexperienced swimmers or bathers do in shallow pools. The ideal standard for water for bathing purposes would be to have it approximate in purity that used for drinking purposes. To maintain such a standard is, of course, not possible in any large open basin, and can only be attained at considerable expense in a modern and well-kept bathing pool supplied by purified water.

During the past year report was rendered to Congress from this department on the practicability of establishing bathing beaches in the Tidal Basin. The studies for the location of the beaches and buildings in the area referred to in that report showed that location there is impracticable and undesirable when considered in connection with other large park development planned for Potomac Park. Furthermore, extended inquiries into the objections to the use of the basin on account of its pollution have about convinced the officer in charge of public buildings and grounds that, while it would impose a decided hardship at this time to do away with the temporary use of the basin for swimming purposes, nothing should be planned for permanent bathing establishments there.

Studies are now in course of preparation in the Office of Public Buildings and Grounds, with the assistance and supervision of the National Fine Arts Commission, for the improvement of the large area of east Potomac Park as a large public recreation ground. These studies include extensive provisions for outdoor swimming pools and natatoriums of the most up-to-date kind. It is believed that these plans, if adopted by Congress, will remedy the deplorable lack of bathing facilities in the District of Columbia. Washington in the summer time has one of the most trying climates in the United States, and the conditions for swimming and bathing are inadequate. Every effort is being made, with full recognition of these facts, to present to Congress at an early date a satisfactory solution of the problem which will relieve the present conditions.

Very respectfully,

LINDLEY M. GARRISON,
Secretary of War.

LIST OF JUDGMENTS (H. DOC. NO. 102).

The PRESIDENT pro tempore laid before the Senate a communication from the chief clerk of the Court of Claims, transmitting, pursuant to law, a statement of all judgments rendered by the Court of Claims for the year ended December 7, 1915, the amount thereof, the parties in whose favor rendered, together with a brief synopsis of the nature of the claims, which, with the accompanying paper, was referred to the Committee on Claims and ordered to be printed.

PETITIONS AND MEMORIALS.

Mr. TILLMAN presented a petition of the Kaminski Hardware Co., of Georgetown, S. C., praying for the enactment of legislation to provide a standard price on patented and trademarked articles, etc., which was referred to the Committee on Education and Labor.

He also presented memorials of sundry citizens of South Carolina, remonstrating against the enactment of legislation to regulate child labor, which were referred to the Committee on Education and Labor.

He also presented the memorial of C. G. Patterson, of Salt Lake City, Utah, remonstrating against the right of Senator REED SMOOT to a seat in the Senate, which was referred to the Committee on Privileges and Elections.

Mr. GALLINGER presented petitions of the Sons of the Revolution of the State of New York and of Frank W. Russell, of Plymouth, N. H., praying for an increase in armaments, which were referred to the Committee on Military Affairs.

He also presented a memorial of the American Automobile Association, of Washington, D. C., remonstrating against a tax on automobiles and gasoline, which was referred to the Committee on Finance.

He also presented the memorial of Daniel H. Sawyer, of Plymouth, N. H., remonstrating against an increase in armaments, which was referred to the Committee on Military Affairs.

He also presented a petition of Mount Washington Lodge, No. 461, Brotherhood of Locomotive Firemen and Enginemen, of Woodsville, N. H., praying that the report of the Commission on Industrial Relations be printed as a public document, which was referred to the Committee on Printing.

Mr. OWEN. I present a petition of Choctaw citizens, and as it is very short I ask that it may be printed in the RECORD and referred to the Committee on Indian Affairs.

There being no objection, the petition was referred to the Committee on Indian Affairs and ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

To the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled:

Whereas the Choctaw Nation or Tribe of Indians have vast tribal interests that are yet unsettled, consisting of coal and asphalt deposits of an estimated value of approximately $20,000,000, the remaining unallotted lands and coal lands surface of a value of several hundred thousand dollars, the unsold timberlands of an estimated value of over $2,000,000, together with the accumulated funds to the credit of over $5,000,000 (now over $7,000,000); and

Whereas not only are the Choctaw people entitled to an early settlement of the tribal estate and an immediate distribution of the funds on deposit in the United States Treasury to their credit, but they are, many of them, in actual want and distress and very much in need of their respective shares of the tribal money; and

Whereas constant and repeated efforts are being made to reopen the Choctaw rolls, which, if successful, would expose the tribal estate to depletion by thousands of citizenship applications whose inspired claims are without merit, besides complicating and delaying indefinitely the settlement of tribal affairs: Therefore

We, the undersigned members of the Choctaw Tribe of Indians, feel that in the administration of our estate, to the amount of many million dollars in value, by the Government it would be to the interest of our people and alike to the Government of the United States that the tribe have a delegate on the floor of the Congress, who would be charged with the particular duty of looking after the affairs of the tribe; that such delegate would, by reason of his acquaintance with Indian affairs and conditions, be of great assistance to Congress in working out matters of Indian legislation, as well as to the administrative officers of the Government in the Indian Service.

We therefore indorse the hereto attached bill and ask for its passage by Congress.

Mr. PITTMAN presented a petition of the Commercial Club of Pioche, Nev., praying for a revision of the mining laws, which was referred to the Committee on Mines and Mining.

Mr. GRONNA presented a petition of sundry citizens of Williams County, N. Dak., praying for national prohibition, which was referred to the Committee on the Judiciary.

Mr. JAMES. I present resolutions introduced by Mrs. Emma Bunch Tanner and adopted unanimously by the General Samuel Hopkins Chapter, National Society Daughters of the American Revolution, at its regular meeting December 4, 1915, held at Henderson, Ky., favoring an increase in the armaments of the country and also a restriction of immigration. I ask that the resolutions be printed in the RECORD and referred to the Committee on Foreign Relations.

There being no objection, the resolutions were referred to the Committee on Foreign Relations and ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

Resolutions introduced by Mrs. Emma Bunch Tanner, and adopted unanimously by the General Samuel Hopkins Chapter, National Society Daughters of the American Revolution, at its regular meeting December 4, 1915.

Resolved, That it is the sense of the General Samuel Hopkins Chapter, National Society Daughters of the American Revolution, located in Henderson, Ky., that our country is totally unprepared for national defense in case of need, and that we urge upon our Senators from Kentucky and upon our Representative in Congress from this the second congressional district of Kentucky that they vote in the affirmative for all bills which may be brought before Congress to enable our beloved country to be put into such preparedness that no nation nor combination of nations dare attack her, and that she may thus be able to continue to be, in the future as in the past, "first in peace, first in war," and now and always "first in the hearts of her countrymen."

Resolved, That we urge upon the aforesaid Senators and Representative that they vote in the affirmative for a restriction of immigration, to take effect at once, so as to prevent any further danger to the aims and ideals of our country as founded by our ancestors, which danger has come upon us already on account of our unfortunate laws concerning this most important matter.

JENNIE T. RUDY (GIVEN),
EMMA BUNCH TANNER,
D. B. HART,

Mr. McCUMBER. I present a concurrent resolution adopted by the Legislature of North Dakota, which I ask may be printed in the RECORD and referred to the Committee on Public Lands.

There being no objection, the concurrent resolution was referred to the Committee on Public Lands and ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

STATE OF NORTH DAKOTA,
DEPARTMENT OF STATE.

I, Thomas Hall, secretary of state of the State of North Dakota, and keeper of the great seal thereof, hereby certify that the attached is a true and correct copy of a certain concurrent resolution adopted by the Fourteenth Legislative Assembly of the State of North Dakota, and the whole of such resolution.

In testimony whereof, I have hereunto set my hand and affixed the great seal of the State, at the capitol, in the city of Bismarck, this 15th day of March, A. D. 1915.

[SEAL.]

THOMAS HALL,
Secretary of State.

A Concurrent Resolution. (Lathrop Committee.)

Whereas by Chapter 6 of the Laws of the State of North Dakota of 1891, entitled "An act designating and appropriating section 36 in township 140 north, range 49 west, in the county of Cass, for the use of the State agricultural college as a site for that institution, there was appropriated, with the consent of the Congress of the United States, out of the lands granted to the State of North Dakota by the United States for the use of the common schools, section 36 in township 140 north, range 49 west, in Cass County, N. Dak., for the use of the said agricultural college as a site for that institution;

Whereas the common-school fund has been thereby decreased;

Whereas it is for the best interest of such common schools in the State that such section of land so appropriated be replaced and a new section granted in lieu thereof; and

Whereas Federal legislation is necessary for that purpose: Therefore be it

Resolved by the House of Representatives of the State of North Dakota (the Senate concurring): That the Congress of the United States be, and it hereby is, respectfully petitioned and requested to grant and set apart from the unappropriated Government lands within the State of North Dakota a section of land to be selected by the said State of North Dakota, in lieu of the foregoing section 36 in township 140, range 49, for the use of the common-school fund of said State; be it further

Resolved, That the secretary of state be instructed to send a copy of these resolutions to the Senators and Representatives of the State of North Dakota in Congress.

A. P. HANSON,
Speaker of the House.
ALBERT N. WOLD,
Chief Clerk of the House.
J. H. FRAINE,
President of the Senate.
M. J. GEORGE,
Secretary of the Senate.

Mr. McCUMBER presented a petition of the German Alliance of the State of North Dakota, of Gladstone, N. Dak., praying that special neutral vessels be provided for carrying parcel-post mail between the nations of Germany, Austria-Hungary, and the United States, which was referred to the Committee on Post Offices and Post Roads.

He also presented a memorial of the Pharmaceutical Association of North Dakota, of Fargo, N. Dak., remonstrating against the taxation of the drug trade imposed in the so-called emergency war-tax law, which was referred to the Committee on Finance.

He also presented a petition of sundry citizens of North Dakota, praying for the enactment of legislation to impose a prohibitive tax on intoxicating liquors, which was referred to the Committee on Finance.

Mr. TOWNSEND. I have received numerous letters from citizens of my State relative to the change that has been made in the Rural Free Delivery Service. I have here numerously signed petitions protesting against these proposed changes, which I ask may receive proper reference.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The petitions will be received and referred to the Committee on Post Offices and Post Roads.

Mr. TOWNSEND presented petitions of sundry citizens of Michigan, praying for national prohibition, which were referred to the Committee on the Judiciary.

TARIFF ON SUGAR.

Mr. TILLMAN. I present a communication addressed to me from John T. Leonard, of Charleston, S. C., relative to the restoration of the tariff on sugar. I ask that the communication be printed in the RECORD and referred to the Committee on Finance.

There being no objection, the communication was referred to the Committee on Finance and ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

CHARLESTON, S. C., December 3, 1915.

Hon. B. R. TILLMAN,
Senate Chamber, Washington, D. C.

MY DEAR SENATOR TILLMAN: In a formal statement, issued by Secretary McAdoo of the Treasury last week, it is estimated that $112,806,394 will be required for 1917, including $93,800,000 for new measures for national defense. This is upon the assumption that the present duty on sugar and the present emergency-revenue taxes shall be continued.

If the existing law, under which the present duty of 1 cent per pound on raw sugar ceases May 1, 1916, is amended, and the present duty continued, it means that the Democratic Party has failed to keep its preelection pledge to the American people for the elimination of tariff subsidies to special interests.

A little less than half of the sugar consumed in the United States does not produce any revenue for the Government; but, on the other hand, shares with the Government the benefit of the tariff, but at the expense of the consumers. In other words, 1 cent per pound tax is added to the cost of a little more than half the sugar consumed, which is imported, consumers paying this additional 1 cent per pound, which goes into the Treasury of the Government. One cent per pound is also added to the cost of the other little less than half of the sugar consumed, which is produced within our borders, the consumers paying this additional 1 cent also which goes not into the Treasury of the Government but into the treasury of the domestic producers.

Here are the figures approximately: The Government will collect duties on imported sugars—$46,000,000; of this, $8,000,000 will be refunded as drawback on imported sugars which are exported after being refined, leaving a net revenue of $38,000,000. The additional cost of 1 cent per pound to consumers of the little less than half of domestic sugars consumed, which will be paid to domestic producers, will amount to about $38,000,000. This is in reality an indirect subsidy to domestic producers, and is in opposition to the principles of the Democratic Party.

The statement says that the "amount can easily be raised by internal taxation without appreciable burdens upon the American people." Sugar is not mentioned as one of the products upon which such tax could be imposed; but why not let the present law go into effect May 1, 1916, removing the tax on sugar imported? Enact a new law taxing all sugar consumed, domestic and imported, 1 cent per pound? This would not increase the cost to consumers over the present plan, but would give the Government the $38,000,000 which it now receives and the $38,000,000 which the domestic producers now receive, or a total of $76,000,000 in revenue. If the Government is satisfied with $38,000,000 revenue on sugar make the tax only one-half cent per pound on all consumed, giving the consumers the benefit of the other $38,000,000.

The sugar interests have been very prosperous recently, and do not need any tariff protection now, if they ever needed it; and in consideration of the benefits they have received in the past under the protective tariff could not reasonably object to lending their assistance to the Government in collecting the needed revenue on sugar consumed. There is probably no revenue the Government could collect at so little expense, as it could be collected in lump sums from the comparatively small number of producers and refiners. The $38,000,000 divided among the 100,000,000 people of the United States, if the tax were made only one-half cent per pound, would be so little to each that, if left to a popular vote, it would probably be decided to let the Government have the full amount to be used for preparedness. And this $76,000,000 would take care of a large part of the $93,800,000 required for preparedness. The "protection" feature would likewise be eliminated. The internal tax on sugar could be imposed as an emergency measure, subject to repeal whenever expedient.

The above is respectfully submitted for your consideration.

With best wishes for your good health, I am,

Yours, very truly, JNO. T. LEONARD.

FRAUDULENT USE OF THE MAILS.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The introduction of bills and joint resolutions is now in order. Objection having been made by the Senator from Nebraska [Mr. HITCHCOCK] on Tuesday last to the introduction of a bill by the Senator from Oklahoma [Mr. OWEN], that bill comes up automatically to-day for a first reading. The bill will be read the first time by its title.

The SECRETARY. A bill to prevent the use of the mails and of the telegraph and telephone in furtherance of fraudulent and harmful transactions on stock exchanges.

Mr. HITCHCOCK. I should like to inquire whether it is in order at this time to move a proper reference of the bill?

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Not at this time. If the Senator objects to a second reading, the bill will lie on the table until to-morrow. Otherwise, under the rule, it will be read a second time by title, and then the Senator can make his motion for a reference.

Mr. HITCHCOCK. After it has been read the second time?

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. After it has been read the second time. Does the Senator desire to object to the second reading of the bill at this time?

Mr. HITCHCOCK. I desire to move its reference. Did I understand the Chair to say that that is not now in order?

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Not until the bill has been read the second time. If the Senator objects, the bill will not now be read a second time. Unless there is objection, it will be read a second time. Then the question of reference will be open to the Senate. Does the Senator object to the second reading of the bill?

Mr. HITCHCOCK. I object.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Then the bill goes over.

MANUFACTURE OF ARMOR.

Mr. TILLMAN. I introduce a bill and ask that it lie on the table for the present. I also ask that it be printed in the RECORD.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Without objection, the request of the Senator from South Carolina will be granted.

The bill (S. 1417) to erect a factory for the manufacture of armor, was read twice by its title, ordered to lie on the table, and to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

Be it enacted, etc., That the Secretary of the Navy is hereby authorized and directed to erect a factory for the manufacture of armor for vessels of the Navy; said factory to have an annual capacity of 20,000 tons of armor: Provided, That the cost of said factory, when completed, shall not exceed $11,000,000; which sum is hereby appropriated out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, to be immediately available, for the purposes of this act and toward the purchase of a site for said factory unless there is an available site already owned by the Government; in that case the full sum of $11,000,000 is hereby appropriated for the erection of said factory to make armor plate and any other material for the Navy that may be profitably produced therein, including all necessary drafting and clerical assistance, and to be available until expended.

Mr. TILLMAN. Mr. President, I desire to give notice that on Monday next, immediately after the conclusion of the routine morning business, I shall address the Senate on the subject of the bill.

SALE OF FUR SEALS.

Mr. FLETCHER. I introduce a joint resolution authorizing the Secretary of Commerce to sell skins taken from fur seals killed on the Pribilof Islands for food purposes.

The joint resolution (S. J. Res. 47) authorizing the Secretary of Commerce to sell skins taken from fur seals killed on the Pribilof Islands for food purposes was read twice by its title.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The joint resolution will be referred to the Committee on Foreign Relations, which has charge of that general subject.

Mr. FLETCHER. It should be referred to the Committee on Commerce, I think.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. If the Senator prefers that it should go elsewhere than to the Committee on Foreign Relations, the Chair will entertain a motion to that effect.

Mr. FLETCHER. I intended that the joint resolution should go to the Committee on Commerce.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Committee on Commerce has never had anything to do with the fur-seal question, which has always been considered by the Committee on Foreign Relations; but if the Senator makes that motion——

Mr. STONE. The Chair is right about that.

Mr. FLETCHER. I have no objection to the joint resolution going to the Committee on Foreign Relations.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The joint resolution will be referred to the Committee on Foreign Relations.

CLERKS TO SENATORS.

Mr. JONES. I introduce a joint resolution relative to a proposed amendment of the rules; and instead of taking the time to have it read I ask that it may be printed in the RECORD and referred to the Committee on Rules.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. That will be done, unless there is objection.

The joint resolution (S. J. Res. 35) providing for employees to Senators and Senate committees, and fixing their compensation, commencing with the beginning of the Sixty-fifth Congress was read twice by its title, referred to the Committee on Rules, and ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

Joint resolution providing for employees to Senators and Senate committees, and fixing their compensation, commencing with the beginning of the Sixty-fifth Congress.

Resolved, etc., That, commencing with the beginning of the Sixty-fifth Congress, each chairman of a first-class committee shall have a secretary, who shall receive an annual salary of $3,000, and who shall also act as clerk of his committee; an assistant secretary, who shall receive an annual salary of $2,500, and who shall also act as assistant clerk to his committee; and, during the sessions of the Senate, a stenographer, to be paid at the rate of $1,440 per annum; and a messenger, to be paid at the rate of $1,200 per annum; each chairman of a second-class committee shall have a secretary, who shall receive an annual salary of $2,750, and who shall act as clerk of his committee; an assistant secretary, who shall receive an annual salary of $2,000, and who shall also act as assistant clerk of his committee; and, during the sessions of the Senate, a stenographer, to be paid at the rate of $1,440 per annum; and a messenger, to be paid at the rate of $1,200 per annum; and each Senator not the chairman of a committee shall have a secretary, who shall receive an annual salary of $2,500; an assistant secretary, who shall receive an annual salary of $1,800; and, during the sessions of the Senate, a stenographer, who shall be paid at the rate of $1,440 per annum; and any additional assistance that may be necessary in connection with committee or official senatorial work while the Senate is in session shall be paid out of the contingent fund of the Senate only after due provision has been made therefor by appropriate resolution.

GOVERNMENT OF THE PHILIPPINES.

Mr. GRONNA submitted an amendment to the bill (S. 381) to declare the purpose of the people of the United States as to the future political status of the people of the Philippine Islands, and to provide a more autonomous government for those islands, which was referred to the Committee on the Philippines and ordered to be printed.

AMERICAN MERCANTILE MARINE (S. DOC. NO. 10).

Mr. OWEN. Mr. President, I ask to have printed as a document an address by the senior Senator from Florida [Mr. FLETCHER], delivered before the Academy of Political Sciences, New York, November 12, 1915, on "What Congress has done to build up an American mercantile marine."

Mr. SMOOT. I should like to ask the Senator from Oklahoma whether the remarks to which he refers were made in the Senate?

Mr. OWEN. They were not made in the Senate; they were made in New York, before the Academy of Political Sciences.

Mr. SMOOT. Then I have no objection.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Unless there is objection, the request of the Senator from Oklahoma will be granted. The Chair hears none.

RURAL CREDITS (S. DOC. NO. 9).

Mr. THOMAS. On the 3d of August last the junior Senator from Texas [Mr. SHEPPARD] delivered an address on rural credits before the Texas Farmers' Congress, at College Station, Tex. This address is one of the most illuminating discourses upon that very important subject which it has been my pleasure to read. The address was evidently prepared with the Senator's usual exhaustive care, and to my mind it is so important that I feel justified in asking unanimous consent that it be printed as a Senate document.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The request of the Senator from Colorado will be granted, unless there is objection.

PREPAREDNESS FOR NATIONAL DEFENSE.

Mr. WORKS. Mr. President, I desire to give notice that on next Friday, immediately after the conclusion of the routine morning business, I shall address the Senate on the subject of preparedness for national defense.

MUNITIONS OF WAR.

Mr. CUMMINS. Mr. President, I submit a resolution concerning which it is my purpose to address the Senate immediately after the holiday recess. It is very brief, and I ask unanimous consent that it may be read and that it lie on the table for the present.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Such will be the order, unless there is objection. The Chair hears none, and the Secretary will read as requested.

The Secretary read the resolution (S. Res. 20), as follows:

Resolved, That, inasmuch as the profit incident to the manufacture and sale of arms, armament, and munitions of war has a tendency to corrupt public opinion, disturb international peace, and prevent a peaceful settlement of disputes between nations, and, inasmuch as it ought to be made impossible for any person or corporation to make money out of war, and, inasmuch as the Government should, for its own safety and protection, manufacture all arms, armament, and munitions of war for the equipment, construction, and use of the Army and Navy, to the end that it may be independent of individual or corporate interests.

Therefore there shall be appointed by the President of the Senate a committee of five Senators to examine the following matters, to wit:

First. The most feasible plan of acquiring or constructing manufacturing plants of sufficient capacity to supply the Army and Navy with all arms, armament, and munitions of war, including ships and their equipment.

Second. The probable cost of such manufacturing plants, taking into account both present and future military needs.

Third. The proper locations for such manufacturing plants.

Fourth. The necessary legislation to prevent either persons or corporations from engaging or continuing in such manufacture and when such legislation should take effect.

The committee shall take testimony and have the power to administer oaths and to send for persons and papers. The hearings shall be open to the public, and all oral evidence submitted shall be taken down in shorthand and the notes transcribed and made a part of the record of the committee. The expenses of such hearings shall be paid from the contingent fund of the Senate.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. At the request of the Senator from Iowa, the resolution will lie on the table, subject to the further order of the Senate.

OCCUPATION OF VERA CRUZ.

Mr. CUMMINS. I submit a resolution and ask that it be read.

The resolution (S. Res. 15) was read, as follows:

Resolved, That the President is requested to inform the Senate, if compatible with the public interest, with respect to the following matters, to wit:

First. As to the amount of money collected by the United States at the port of Vera Cruz, Mexico, during the occupation of that city by our military forces as import duties or other taxes or imposts laid under the laws of Mexico.

Second. Whether the duties, imposts, or taxes so collected by the United States had been pledged in any form to secure or insure the payment of obligations issued by any Government or alleged Government, of the Republic of Mexico, or one of the States thereof.

Third. As to the ownership of such obligations at the time the military forces of the United States occupied Vera Cruz, and such ownership at the present time.

Fourth. As to any claims which have been made upon the United States for the payment or transfer of the money so collected, and the names of the persons making such demands.

Fifth. As to the deposit of the money so collected in the Treasury of the United States and the account to which it was deposited.

Sixth. Whether it is the intention of the executive department of the Government to pay out or otherwise dispose of the money so collected without action or authority on the part of Congress.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The resolution will lie over and be printed.

MARY A. REILY.

Mr. CUMMINS submitted the following resolution (S. Res. 19), which was read and referred to the Committee to Audit and Control the Contingent Expenses of the Senate:

Resolved, That the Secretary of the Senate be, and he hereby is, authorized and directed to pay from the miscellaneous items of the contingent fund of the Senate to Mary A. Reily, widow of Peter Reily, late a messenger of the United States Senate, a sum equal to six months' salary at the rate he was receiving by law at the time of his death. Said sum to be considered as including funeral expenses and all other allowances.

PROPOSED INLAND WATERWAY.

Mr. GORE submitted the following resolution (S. Res. 13), which was considered by unanimous consent and agreed to:

Resolved, That the Secretary of War be directed to inform the Senate:

First. As to the estimated time, work, and expenditures necessary to the completion of an inland waterway beginning with New York Bay and comprising the Hudson River, the Erie Canal, the Great Lakes, the Illinois and Michigan Canal, the Hennepin Canal, the Illinois River, and the Mississippi River from St. Paul to the Gulf of Mexico.

Second. The extent and location of such work and amount of such expenditures devolving upon the United States, and the provisions heretofore made for the same.

Third. The extent of such work and amount of such expenditures devolving on the States of New York and Illinois, and the provisions heretofore made for the same, so far as this information may be disclosed by the records or other authenticated data in the Department of War.

AMENDMENT OF THE RULES.

Mr. GORE. I offer sundry proposed amendments to the Standing Rules of the Senate, and ask that they be referred to the Committee on Rules without reading.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. They will be printed in the RECORD and lie over for a day. The rules of the Senate provide that all resolutions must lie over for a day, unless, by unanimous consent, they are otherwise disposed of.

Mr. GORE. Then, I ask unanimous consent that they may be referred to the Committee on Rules at this time.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from Oklahoma asks unanimous consent that the resolutions introduced by him may be referred to the Committee on Rules at this time. Is there objection?

Mr. SMOOT. Yes, Mr. President; I object.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Objection is made, and the proposed amendments to the rules will lie over and be printed in the RECORD.

The proposed amendments are as follows:

Resolved, That the Standing Rules of the Senate be amended by amending paragraph 2 of Rule III to read as follows:

"2. A quorum shall consist of a majority of the Senators duly chosen and sworn, except when the Senate is sitting as in Committee of the Whole, in which case 30 Senators shall constitute a quorum."

Resolved, That Rule XII of the Standing Rules of the Senate be amended as follows: Insert after the words "unless excused by the Senate" the following: "and every Senator not voting shall answer 'present.'"

Resolved, That Rule XII of the Standing Rules of the Senate be amended as follows: At the end of said rule add the following:

"3. Whenever upon any such roll call the number of Senators voting and answering 'present' shall not constitute a quorum, the Presiding Officer shall announce that a quorum of the Senate is not present, and unless the Senate shall adjourn a call of the Senate shall be considered as ordered and the Sergeant at Arms shall forthwith proceed to bring in absent Members; and each Member so arrested shall be brought by the Sergeant at Arms before the Senate, whereupon he shall be noted as present, discharged from arrest, and given an opportunity to vote, and his vote shall be recorded. Whenever those voting on the question and those who are present and decline to vote shall together make a majority of the Senate the Presiding Officer shall declare that a quorum is constituted, and the pending question shall be decided as the majority of those voting shall appear. And thereupon further proceedings under the call shall be considered as dispensed with."

Resolved, That the Standing Rules of the Senate be amended by adding the following at the close of paragraph 1, Rule XV, as a part thereof:

"When any such bill or resolution has been so considered and reported to the Senate, with or without amendment, the same shall be voted on on the third day thereafter, unless previously disposed of, or unless a later day shall have been fixed for such vote."

Resolved, That the Standing Rules of the Senate be amended by adding the following paragraph to Rule XVI:

"The Senate may at any time on motion and without debate fix a day certain, to be not less than two whole days thereafter, if there be as many as seven days of the session remaining, on which a vote shall be taken on any pending general appropriation bill: Provided, That this paragraph shall not apply when such bill contains general legislation or when such conference report involves general legislation not agreed to on the original passage of the bill. When the question as to whether such bill or report contains general legislation which has not been previously agreed to by the Senate shall be raised by motion, point of order, or otherwise, it shall require a majority of all the Senators elected and sworn to decide such question in the negative."

Resolved, That Rule XVI of the standing rules of the Senate be amended as follows: Insert, after the words "No amendment which proposes general legislation shall be received to any general appropriation bill," in the third paragraph of said rule, the following: "unless such amendment being germane to the subject matter of the bill shall propose to retrench expenditures by the reduction of the number and salary of the officers of the United States, by the reduction of the compensation of any person paid out of the Treasury of the United States, or by the reduction of amounts of money covered by the bill."

HEARINGS BEFORE THE COMMITTEE ON MILITARY AFFAIRS.

Mr. CHAMBERLAIN submitted the following resolution (S. Res. 18), which was referred to the Committee to Audit and Control the Contingent Expenses of the Senate:

Resolved, That the Committee on Military Affairs, or any subcommittee thereof, be authorized to send for persons and papers and to administer oaths, and to employ a stenographer, at a cost not to exceed $1 per printed page, to report such hearings as may be had in connection with any subject which may be pending before said committee; that the committee may sit during the sessions or recesses of the Senate, and that expenses contracted hereunder shall be paid out of the contingent fund of the Senate.

AMENDMENT OF THE RULES.

Mr. NORRIS. Pursuant to the notice I gave at the last session of the Senate, I submit the resolution included in that notice, and ask that it may be referred to the Committee on Rules.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Such will be the order, unless there is objection. The Chair hears none.

The Secretary read the resolution (S. Res. 17), as follows:

Resolved, That the standing rules of the Senate be amended, as follows:

By adding thereto a new rule, to be known as Rule XLI, and to read as follows:

"Rule XLI. It shall be in order during the morning hour to make a motion that any bill or resolution then on the calendar shall be considered under the terms of this rule. Such motion, when made, shall lie over one day and shall then be decided without debate. No Senator shall be allowed to vote on a motion to consider a bill or resolution under this rule who is bound by any caucus or conference of Senators to vote in any particular way on said bill or resolution, or any amendment thereto, but when any Senator's right to vote upon such motion is challenged, such Senator shall be allowed to determine for himself whether he is disqualified from voting on said motion. When it has been decided to consider a bill or resolution under this rule, the same shall first be considered in general debate, during which time no Senator, except by unanimous consent, shall be allowed to speak more than three hours. At the close of general debate the bill or resolution shall be read for amendments, and on any amendment that may be offered no Senator, except by unanimous consent, shall speak for more than 15 minutes: Provided, That any Senator who has not spoken for three hours in general debate shall, in addition to said 15 minutes, be allowed additional time, but in no case shall such additional time or times, including the time used by such Senator in general debate, exceed in the aggregate three hours: Provided further, That if unanimous consent for additional time is asked in behalf of any Senator, either during general debate or when the bill or resolution is being considered for amendment, and the same is refused, it shall be in order by motion to extend the time of such Senator for a time to be named in said motion, which motion shall be decided without debate. When the bill or resolution is being read for amendment all debate shall be confined to the amendment which is then pending."

COMMITTEE ON REVISION OF THE LAWS.

Mr. ROBINSON submitted the following resolution (S. Res. 16), which was read and referred to the Committee on Rules:

Resolved, That there shall be a standing committee of the Senate known as the Committee on Revision of the Laws, to be composed of five Senators, elected in the same manner as the members of other standing committees, which shall have power to act jointly with the same committee of the House of Representatives, and to which shall be referred all matters relating to the revision and codification of the statutes of the United States.

AMENDMENT OF THE RULES.

Mr. THOMPSON. I desire to give notice of a proposed amendment of the rules and ask that it lie over and be printed in the RECORD.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The request of the Senator from Kansas will be complied with if there be no objection.

The proposed amendment is as follows:

Resolved, That Rule XXII of the standing rules of the Senate be amended as follows: After the last paragraph of Rule XXII add the following:

"Provided, however, That any Senator arising in his place and asserting that in his opinion an attempt is being made on the floor of the Senate to obstruct, hinder, or delay the right of the Senate to proceed to a vote, the Chair shall, without permitting any debate thereon, put the question to the Senate, 'Is it the sense of the Senate that an attempt is being made to obstruct, hinder, or delay a vote?' And if that question shall be decided in the affirmative, then it shall be in order, to the exclusion of all other questions, for any Senator to move to limit debate on the pending bill or resolution and all amendments thereto, and the said motion shall be decided without debate. And thereafter the motion being carried each Senator shall be entitled to speak not to exceed one hour in all on the bill, including all amendments offered thereto and all motions and other proceedings in any way affecting the same."

FEDERAL ANTITRUST DECISIONS.

Mr. McLEAN submitted the following concurrent resolution (No. 3), which was read and referred to the Committee on Printing:

Resolved by the Senate (the House of Representatives concurring), That there be printed and bound 3,000 copies of the Federal antitrust decisions, 1911 to 1915, to be compiled by the direction of the Department of Justice, 1,000 copies for the use of the Senate and 2,000 copies for the use of the House of Representatives.

AMENDMENT OF THE RULES.

Mr. OWEN. In pursuance of the notice I gave on Tuesday last relative to certain proposed changes in the standing rules of the Senate, I desire to submit a resolution and ask that it be referred to the Committee on Rules.

The resolution (S. Res. 14) was read and referred to the Committee on Rules, as follows:

Senate resolution 14.

Resolved, That Rules 1, 3, 4, 5, 6, 7, 8, 9, 10, 12, 16, 18, 19, 20, 22, 28, 29, 36, and 40 be amended to read as follows:

"RULE I.

"APPOINTMENT OF A SENATOR TO THE CHAIR.

"1. In the absence of the Vice President the Senate shall choose a President pro tempore. (Jefferson's Manual, Sec. IX.)

"2. In the absence of the Vice President, and pending the election of a President pro tempore, the Secretary of the Senate, or in his absence the Chief Clerk, shall perform the duties of the Chair. (Jefferson's Manual, Sec. IX.)

"That it is competent for the Senate to elect a President pro tempore, who shall hold the office during the pleasure of the Senate and until another is elected, and shall execute the duties thereof during all future absences of the Vice President until the Senate otherwise order.

"3. The President pro tempore shall have the right to name in open Senate, or, if absent, in writing, a Senator to perform the duties of the Chair; but such substitution shall not extend beyond an adjournment, except by unanimous consent. (Jefferson's Manual, Sec. IX.)

"4. In event of a vacancy in the office of the Vice President, or whenever the powers and duties of the President shall devolve on the Vice President, the President pro tempore shall have the right to name, in writing, a Senator to perform the duties of the Chair during his absence; and the Senator so named shall have the right to name in open session, or in writing, if absent, a Senator to perform the duties of the Chair, but such substitution shall not extend beyond adjournment, except by unanimous consent. (Jefferson's Manual, Sec. IX.)

"5. That whenever a Senator shall be designated by the President pro tempore to perform the duties of the Chair during his temporary absence he shall be empowered to sign, as Acting President pro tempore, the enrolled bills and joint resolutions coming from the House of Representatives for presentation to the President of the United States.

"A Senator occupying the chair temporarily in the absence of those Presiding Officers who may occupy it under the rule, is authorized to sign bills and joint resolutions as set forth in this clause.

"RULE III.

"COMMENCEMENT OF DAILY SESSIONS.

"1. The Presiding Officer having taken the chair, and a quorum being present, the Journal of the preceding day shall be read and any mistake made in the entries corrected. The reading of the Journal shall not be suspended unless by unanimous consent; and when any motion shall be made to amend or correct the same it shall be deemed a privileged question and proceeded with until disposed of. (Jefferson's Manual, Secs. VI, XLIX.)

"QUORUM.

"2. A quorum shall consist of a majority of the Senators duly chosen and sworn. (Jefferson's Manual, Sec. VI.)

"RULE IV.

"1. The proceedings of the Senate shall be briefly and accurately stated on the Journal. Messages of the President in full; titles of bills and joint resolutions and such parts as shall be affected by proposed amendments; every vote and a brief statement of the contents of each petition, memorial, or paper presented to the Senate shall be entered. (Jefferson's Manual, Sec. XLIX.)

"2. The legislative, the executive, the confidential legislative proceedings, and the proceedings when sitting as a Court of Impeachment, shall each be recorded in a separate book. (Jefferson's Manual, Sec. XLIX.)

"RULE V.

"QUORUM—ABSENT SENATORS MAY BE SENT FOR.

"1. No Senator shall absent himself from the service of the Senate without leave. (Jefferson's Manual, Sec. VIII.)

"2. If at any time during the daily sessions of the Senate a question shall be raised by any Senator as to the presence of a quorum, the Presiding Officer shall forthwith direct the Secretary to call the roll and shall announce the result, and these proceedings shall be without debate; but a second call for a quorum shall not be had until business other than debate has been presented or has intervened. A Senator shall not be required to yield the floor to another Senator for the purpose of suggesting the absence of a quorum without his consent.

"3. Whenever upon such roll call it shall be ascertained that a quorum is not present, a majority of the Senators present may direct the Sergeant at Arms to request, and, when necessary, to compel the attendance of the absent Senators by issuing a warrant signed by the temporary occupant of the chair in the absence of the Vice President, the President pro tempore, or the Senator designated to preside during the day by the foregoing officers, and who is also hereby authorized to sign said warrant, which shall be attested by the Secretary, with the seal of the Senate attached, which order shall be determined without debate; and pending its execution, and until a quorum shall be present, no debate nor motion, except to adjourn, shall be in order. The same powers are given to the majority of Senators present to request, and when necessary to compel, the attendance of absent Senators when a quorum is present without debate.

"4. If necessary, when a Senator is present, even if paired, and does not answer to the roll call, he shall be counted as present to make a quorum.

"RULE VI.

"PRESENTATION OF CREDENTIALS.

"1. The presentation of the credentials of Senators elect or appointed, and other questions of privilege, shall always be in order, except during the reading and correction of the Journal, while a question of order or a motion to adjourn is pending, or while the Senate is dividing; and all questions and motions arising or made upon the presentation of such credentials shall be proceeded with until disposed of.

"2. The Secretary shall keep a record of the certificates of election or appointment of Senators by entering in a well-bound book kept for that purpose the date of the election, the name of the person elected, and the vote given at the election, the date of the certificate, the name of the governor and the secretary of state signing and countersigning the same, and the State from which such Senator is elected.

"RULE VII.

"MORNING BUSINESS.

"1. After the Journal is read the Presiding Officer shall lay before the Senate messages from the President, reports and communications from the heads of departments and other communications addressed to the Senate, and such bills, joint resolutions, and other messages from the House of Representatives as may remain upon his table from any previous day's session undisposed of. The Presiding Officer shall then call for, in the following order—

"The presentation of petitions and memorials.

"Reports of standing and select committees.

"The introduction of bills and joint resolutions.

"Concurrent and other resolutions.

"Resolutions coming over from a previous day.

All of which shall be received and disposed of in such order, unless unanimous consent shall be otherwise given, except resolutions coming over from a previous day, which may be considered until disposed of on that day or until the expiration of the morning hour, and if not disposed of shall go to the calendar.

"2. Senators having petitions, memorials, or bills during or after the morning hour may deliver them to the Secretary of the Senate, indorsing upon them their names and the reference or disposition to be made thereof; and said petitions, memorials, and bills shall, with the approval of the Presiding Officer, be entered on the Journal with the names of the Senators presenting them as having been read twice and referred to the appropriate committees, and the Secretary of the Senate shall furnish a transcript of such entries to the official reporter of debates for publication in the RECORD.

"It shall not be in order to interrupt a Senator having the floor for the purpose of introducing any memorial, petition, report of a committee, resolution, or bill. It shall be the duty of the Chair to enforce this rule without any point of order hereunder being made by a Senator.

"3. Until the morning business shall have been concluded, and so announced from the Chair, which may be before the hour of 1 o'clock, but if not concluded until the hour of 1 o'clock has arrived, no motion to proceed to the consideration of any bill, resolution, report of a committee, or other subject upon the calendar shall be entertained by the Presiding Officer, unless by unanimous consent; and if such consent be given, the motion shall not be subject to amendment, and shall be decided without debate upon the merits of the subject proposed to be taken up. (Jefferson's Manual, sec. 14.)

"4. Every petition or memorial shall be referred, without putting the question, unless objection to such reference is made, in which case all motions for the reception or reference of such petition, memorial, or other paper shall be put in the order in which the same shall be made, and shall not be open to amendment, except to add instructions. (Jefferson's Manual, Sec. XIX.)

"Every petition or memorial shall be signed by the petitioner or memorialist and have indorsed thereon a brief statement of its contents, and shall be presented and referred without debate. But no petition or memorial or other paper signed by citizens or subjects of a foreign power shall be received, unless the same be transmitted to the Senate by the President. (Jefferson's Manual, Sec. XIX.)

"6. That when petitions and memorials are ordered printed in the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD the order shall be deemed to apply to the body of the petition only, and the names attached to said petition or memorial shall not be printed unless specially ordered by the Senate.

"7. The presiding officer may at any time lay, and it shall be in order at any time for a Senator to move to lay, before the Senate any bill or other matter sent to the Senate by the President or the House of Representatives, and any question pending at that time shall be suspended for this purpose. Any motion so made shall be determined without debate. (Jefferson's Manual, Sec. XIV.)

"RULE VIII.

"ORDER OF BUSINESS.

"At the conclusion of the morning business for each day, unless upon motion the Senate shall at any time otherwise order, the Senate will proceed to the consideration of the Calendar of Bills and Resolutions, and continue such consideration until 2 o'clock; and bills and resolutions that are not objected to shall be taken up in their order, and each Senator shall be entitled to speak once, and for five minutes only, upon any question; and the objection may be interposed at any stage of the proceedings, but upon motion the Senate may continue such consideration; and this order shall commence immediately after the call for "Concurrent and other resolutions," and shall take precedence of the unfinished business and other special orders. But if the Senate shall proceed with the consideration of any matter notwithstanding an objection, the foregoing provisions touching debate shall not apply. (Jefferson's Manual, Sec. XIV.)

"Unless otherwise ordered, the morning hour shall terminate at the expiration of two hours after the meeting of the Senate.

"All motions made before 2 o'clock to proceed to the consideration of any matter shall be determined without debate. (Jefferson's Manual, Sec. XIV.)

"RULE IX.

"Immediately after the consideration of cases not objected to upon the calendar is completed, and not later than 2 o'clock, if there shall be no special orders for that time, the Calendar of General Orders shall be taken up and proceeded with in its order, beginning with the first subject on the calendar which has been objected to in proceeding with the calendar; and in such case the following motions shall be in order at any time as privileged motions, save as against a motion to adjourn or to proceed to the consideration of executive business, or questions of privilege, to wit:

"First. A motion to proceed to the consideration of an appropriation or revenue bill.

"Second. A motion to proceed to the consideration of any other bill on the calendar, which motion shall not be open to amendment.

"Third. A motion to pass over the pending subject, which, if carried, shall have the effect to leave such subject without prejudice in its place on the calendar.

"Fourth. A motion to place such subject at the foot of the calendar.

"Each of the foregoing motions shall be decided without debate and shall have precedence in the order above named, and may be submitted as in the nature and with all the rights of questions of order. (Jefferson's Manual, Secs. XIV, XXXIII.)

"RULE X.

"SPECIAL ORDERS.

"1. Any subject may, by a vote of a majority of the Senators present, be made a special order; and when the time so fixed for its consideration arrives the Presiding Officer shall lay it before the Senate, unless there be unfinished business of the preceding day, and if it is not finally disposed of on that day it shall take its place on the Calendar of Special Orders in the order of time at which it was made special, and shall, at 1 o'clock each day, be laid before the Senate until disposed of, unless it shall become by adjournment the unfinished business. (Jefferson's Manual, Secs. XVIII, XXXIII.)

"2. When two or more special orders have been made for the same time they shall have precedence according to the order in which they were severally assigned, and that order shall only be changed by direction of the Senate.

"And all motions to change such order or to proceed to the consideration of other business shall be decided without debate. (Jefferson's Manual, Secs. XVIII, XXXIII.)

"RULE XII.

"VOTING, ETC.

"1. When the yeas and nays are ordered, the names of Senators shall be called alphabetically; and each Senator shall, without debate, declare his assent or dissent to the question, unless excused by the Senate; and no Senator shall be permitted to vote after the decision shall have been announced by the Presiding Officer, but may for sufficient reasons, after the roll call and before announcement of the result with unanimous consent, change or withdraw his vote. No motion to suspend this rule shall be in order, nor shall the Presiding Officer entertain any request to suspend it by unanimous consent. (Jefferson's Manual, Sec. XLI.)

"2. When a Senator declines to vote on call of his name he shall be required to assign his reasons therefor, and having assigned them, the Presiding Officer shall submit the question to the Senate: "Shall the Senator, for the reasons assigned by him, be excused from voting?" which shall be decided without debate; and these proceedings shall be had after the roll call and before the result is announced; and any further proceedings in reference thereto shall be after such announcement. (Jefferson's Manual, Secs. XVII, XLI.)

"3. No request by a Senator for unanimous consent for the taking of a final vote on a specified date upon the passage of a bill or joint resolution shall be submitted to the Senate for agreement thereto until, upon a roll call ordered for the purpose by the Presiding Officer, it shall be disclosed that a quorum of the Senate is present; and when a unanimous consent is thus given the same shall operate as the order of the Senate, but any unanimous consent may be revoked by another unanimous consent granted in the manner prescribed above upon one day's notice.

"RULE XVI.

"AMENDMENTS TO APPROPRIATION BILLS.

"1. All general appropriation bills shall be referred to the Committee on Appropriations, except the following bills, which shall be severally referred as herein indicated, namely: The bill making appropriations for rivers and harbors, to the Committee on Commerce; the agricultural bill, to the Committee on Agriculture and Forestry; the Army and Military Academy bills, to the Committee on Military Affairs; the Indian bill, to the Committee on Indian Affairs; the naval bill, to the Committee on Naval Affairs; the pension bill, to the Committee on Pensions; the Post Office bill, to the Committee on Post Offices and Post Roads; and no amendments shall be received to any general appropriation bill the effect of which will be to increase an appropriation already contained in the bill, or to add a new item of appropriation, unless it be made to carry out the provisions of some existing law, or treaty stipulation, or act, or resolution previously passed by the Senate during that session; or unless the same be moved by direction of a standing or select committee of the Senate, or proposed in pursuance of an estimate of the head of some one of the departments. (Jefferson's Manual, Sec. XXXV.)

"2. All amendments to general appropriation bills moved by direction of a standing or select committee of the Senate, proposing to increase an appropriation already contained in the bill, or to add new items of appropriation, shall, at least one day before they are considered, be referred to the committee having jurisdiction thereof, and when actually proposed to the bill no amendment proposing to increase the amount stated in such amendment shall be received; in like manner amendments proposing new items of appropriation to river and harbor bills shall, before being considered, be referred to the Committee on Commerce. (Jefferson's Manual, Sec. XXXV.)

"3. No amendment which proposes general legislation shall be received to any general appropriation bill, nor shall any amendment not germane or relevant to the subject matter contained in the bill be received; nor shall any amendment to any item or clause of such bill be received which does not directly relate thereto; and all questions of relevancy of amendments under this rule, when raised, shall be submitted to the Senate and be decided without debate; and any amendment to a general appropriation bill may be laid on the table without prejudice to the bill. (Jeffersons' Manual, Sec. XXXV.)

"4. No amendment, the object of which is to provide for a private claim, shall be received to any general appropriation bill, unless it be to carry out the provisions of an existing law or a treaty stipulation, which shall be cited on the face of the amendment. (Jefferson's Manual, Sec. XXXV.)

"RULE XVIII.

"AMENDMENTS—DIVISION OF A QUESTION.

"If the question in debate contains several propositions, any Senator may have the same divided, except a motion to strike out and insert, which shall not be divided; but the rejection of a motion to strike out and insert one proposition shall not prevent a motion to strike out and insert a different proposition; nor shall it prevent a motion simply to strike out; nor shall the rejection of a motion to strike out prevent a motion to strike out and insert. But pending a motion to strike out and insert, the part to be stricken out and the part to be inserted shall each be regarded for the purpose of amendment as an original question and not an amendment in the first degree; and motions to amend the part to be stricken out shall have precedence. (Jefferson's Manual, Secs. XXXV, XXXVI.)

"RULE XIX.

"DEBATE.

"1. When a Senator desires to speak, he shall rise and address the Presiding Officer, and shall not proceed until he is recognized, and the Presiding Officer shall recognize the Senator who shall first address him. No Senator shall interrupt another Senator in debate without his consent, except for a question, unless by unanimous consent, and to obtain such consent he shall first address the Presiding Officer; and no Senator shall speak more than twice nor for more than one hour upon any one question in debate on the same day without leave of the Senate, which shall be determined without debate. (Jefferson's Manual, Secs. XVII, XXXIX.)

"2. No Senator in debate shall, directly or indirectly, by any form of words impute to another Senator or to other Senators any conduct or motive unworthy or unbecoming a Senator. (Jefferson's Manual, Sec. XVII.)

"3. No Senator in debate shall refer offensively to any State of the Union.

"4. If any Senator, in speaking or otherwise, transgress the rules of the Senate, the Presiding Officer shall, or any Senator may, call him to order; and when a Senator shall be called to order he shall sit down and not proceed without leave of the Senate, which, if granted, shall be upon motion that he be allowed to proceed in order, which motion shall be determined without debate. (Jefferson's Manual, Sec. XVII.)

"5. If a Senator be called to order for words spoken in debate, upon the demand of the Senator, or of any other Senator, the exceptionable words shall be taken down in writing and read at the table for the information of the Senate. (Jefferson's Manual, Sec. XVII.)

"6. Whenever confusion arises in the Chamber or the galleries, or demonstrations of approval or disapproval are indulged in by the occupants of the galleries, it shall be the duty of the Chair to enforce order on his own initiative and without any point of order being made by a Senator.

"RULE XX.

"QUESTIONS OF ORDER.

"1. A question of order may be raised at any stage of the proceedings, except when the Senate is dividing, and, unless submitted to the Senate, shall be decided by the Presiding Officer without debate, subject to an appeal to the Senate. The Chair may permit debate for his own information and each Senator may be entitled to speak once and for not exceeding five minutes on the question of order until the Presiding Officer announces that he is ready to rule on the point of order. When an appeal is taken, any subsequent question of order which may arise before the decision of such appeal shall be decided by the Presiding Officer without debate; and every appeal therefrom shall be decided at once, and without debate; and any appeal may be laid on the table without prejudice to the pending proposition, and thereupon shall be held as affirming the decision of the Presiding Officer. (Jefferson's Manual, Sec. XXXIII.)

"2. The Presiding Officer may submit any question of order for the decision of the Senate. (Jefferson's Manual, Sec. XXXIII.)

"RULE XXII.

"PRECEDENCE OF MOTIONS.

"When a question is pending, no motion shall be received but—
"To adjourn.
"To adjourn to a day certain, or that when the Senate adjourn it shall be to a day certain.
"To take a recess.
"To proceed to the consideration of executive business.
"To lay on the table.
"To postpone indefinitely.
"To postpone to a day certain.
"To commit.
"To amend.
"Which several motions shall have precedence as they stand arranged; and the motions relating to adjournment, to take a recess, to proceed to the consideration of executive business, to lay on the table, shall be decided without debate. (Jefferson's Manual, Sec. XXXIII.)

"Provided, however, that any Senator may move that the debate should be brought to a close, the Chair shall, without permitting any debate thereon, put the question to the Senate—

"'Is it the sense of the Senate that the debate should be brought to a close?'

"And if that question shall be decided in the affirmative, then it shall be in order to the exclusion of all other questions and business for any Senator to move to limit debate on the pending bill or resolution and all amendments thereto, and the said motion shall be decided without debate. And thereafter the motion being carried, no Senator shall be entitled to speak more than one hour in all on the bill, the amendments thereto, and any motion affecting the same.

"No dilatory motion shall be in order, and it shall be the duty of the Presiding Officer to declare such motion out of order when the question of order is raised by a Senator, or to immediately submit the question without debate to the Senate.

"RULE XXVIII.

"MESSAGES AND EXECUTIVE COMMUNICATIONS.

"1. Messages from the President of the United States or from the House of Representatives may be received at any stage of proceedings, except while the Senate is dividing, or while the Journal is being read, or while a question of order or a motion to adjourn is pending. (Jefferson's Manual, Sec. XLVII.)

"2. Messages shall be sent to the House of Representatives by the Secretary, who shall previously certify the determination of the Senate upon all bills, joint resolutions, and other resolutions which may be communicated to the House, or in which its concurrence may be requested; and the Secretary shall also certify and deliver to the President of the United States all resolutions and other communications which may be directed to him by the Senate. (Jefferson's Manual, Sec. XLVII.)

"No communications from heads of departments, commissioners, chiefs of bureaus, or other executive officers, except when authorized or required by law, or when made in response to a resolution of the Senate, will be received by the Senate unless such communications shall be transmitted to the Senate by the President.

"RULE XXIX.

"PRINTING OF PAPERS, ETC.

"1. Every motion to print documents, reports, and other matter transmitted by either of the executive departments, or to print memorials, petitions, accompanying documents, or any other paper, except bills of the Senate or House of Representatives, resolutions submitted by a Senator, communications from the legislatures or conventions, lawfully called, of the respective States, and motions to print by order of the standing or select committees of the Senate, shall, unless the Senate otherwise order, be referred to the Committee on Printing. When a motion is made to commit with instructions, it shall be in order to add thereto a motion to print.

"2. Motions to print additional numbers shall also be referred to the Committee on Printing; and when the committee shall report favorably the report shall be accompanied by an estimate of the probable cost thereof; and when the cost of printing such additional numbers shall exceed the sum of $500, the concurrence of the House of Representatives shall be necessary for an order to print the same.

"RULE XXXVI.

"EXECUTIVE SESSIONS.

"1. When the President of the United States shall meet the Senate in the Senate Chamber for the consideration of executive business, he shall have a seat on the right of the Presiding Officer. When the Senate shall be convened by the President of the United States to any other place, the Presiding Officer of the Senate and the Senators shall attend at the place appointed, with the necessary officers of the Senate.

"2. When acting upon confidential or executive business, unless the same shall be considered in open executive session, the Senate Chamber shall be cleared of all persons except the Secretary, the Chief Clerk, the principal legislative clerk, the executive clerk, the minute and Journal clerk, the Sergeant at Arms, the Assistant Doorkeeper, and such other officers as the Presiding Officer shall think necessary; and all such officers shall be sworn to secrecy.

"3. All confidential communications made by the President of the United States to the Senate shall be by the Senators and the officers of the Senate kept secret; and all treaties which may be laid before the Senate, and all remarks, votes, and proceedings thereon shall also be kept secret, until the Senate shall, by their resolution, take off the injunction of secrecy, or unless the same shall be considered in open executive session.

"The injunction of secrecy is extended to each step in the consideration of treaties, including the fact of ratifications. (Senate Jour., p. 571. Appendix.)

"4. Whenever the injunction of secrecy shall be removed from any part of the proceedings of the Senate in executive session, or secret legislative session, the order of the Senate removing the same shall be entered by the Secretary in the Legislative Journal as well as in the Executive Journal, and shall be published in the RECORD. (Jefferson's Manual, Sec. LII.)

"RULE XL.

"SUSPENSION AND AMENDMENT OF THE RULES.

"No motion to suspend, modify, or amend any rule, or any part thereof, shall be in order, except on one day's notice in writing, specifying precisely the rule or part proposed to be suspended, modified, or amended, and the purpose thereof. Any rule may be suspended without notice by the unanimous consent of the Senate, except as otherwise provided in clause 1, Rule XII, or by a two-thirds vote, without debate."

ADJOURNMENT TO MONDAY.

Mr. CHILTON. Mr. President, I move that when the Senate adjourns to-day it adjourn to meet on Monday next at 12 o'clock noon.

The motion was agreed to.

COMMERCIAL RIGHTS OF CITIZENS.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Are there further resolutions? If not, under the notice heretofore given, the Chair lays before the Senate a resolution coming over from a previous day, and calls the attention of the Senator from Georgia [Mr. SMITH] to the resolution. The Secretary will read the resolution.

The Secretary read Senate resolution No. 12, submitted by Mr. SMITH of Georgia on the 7th instant, as follows:

Whereas the Executive department, through the Secretary of State, has protested the legality of the orders of Great Britain virtually blockading the neutral ports of northern Europe; and

Whereas the responsibility for the preservation of the commercial rights of citizens of the United States rests upon the Congress as well as upon the Executive department: Therefore be it

Resolved, That the Committee on Foreign Relations be requested to investigate the subject and to suggest to the Senate the action, if any, they may deem advisable.

Mr. SMITH of Georgia. Mr. President, before proceeding to the discussion of the resolution I desire to send to the desk a letter which I received yesterday from a firm of manufacturers. It is in line with a number of other similar letters which I have received during the past two or three days, calling attention to the distressed condition of their business due to the lack of dyestuffs essential to their products.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Chair wil' state that the morning business is closed and that the Senator from Georgia is proceeding by unanimous consent. The Secretary will read the letter.

The Secretary read as follows:

NORRISTOWN, PA., December 8, 1915.

Hon. HOKE SMITH,
United States Senate, Washington, D. C.

DEAR SIR: Referring to the conversation which the writer had with you yesterday, regarding our supply of dyestuffs and the handicaps under which we have been running our mill for the past year because of our inability to obtain same, we would say that there have been times when our entire plant was practically at a standstill because of being unable to obtain dyestuffs with which to dye our goods, seriously interfering with our supplying our trade, as well as causing loss in wages to our employees.

We have used every effort to obtain dyestuffs, paying abnormally high prices for them from those who happened to have some on hand. We have been continually corresponding with the general agents in this country from whom we have received our supplies in the past, and they inform us that they are absolutely out of all kinds of dyestuffs.

We are also creditably informed that England is receiving dyestuffs from Germany, and surely this country should be able to get dyestuffs under existing conditions much more easily than should England.

This is a very serious question, as the want of dyestuffs is crippling our industries, forcing people out of employment, and placing the manufacturer in a position where he is unable to fill his orders and obligations.

Yours, respectfully,

RAMBO & REGAR, INCORPORATED,
Per JOS. S. RAMBO.

Mr. GALLINGER. Will the Senator permit me to say just a word on that point?

Mr. SMITH of Georgia. I would appreciate it if the Senator will wait until I have finished what I have to say to-day.

Mr. GALLINGER. All right.

Mr. SMITH of Georgia. I hesitated about sending the letter to the desk for fear that it might provoke discussion.

Mr. GALLINGER. I had no purpose of discussing it. I simply wanted to fortify what the Senator has just had read by saying that at least four great mills in my own State, the Amoskeag Corporation among them, have appealed to me to try to do something to ameliorate the condition. That was all.

Mr. SMITH of Georgia. I wish also to have read by the Secretary a letter I received yesterday from the American Transatlantic Co., signed "R. G. Wagner, president."

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. HARDWICK in the chair). Without objection, the Secretary will read as requested.

The Secretary read as follows:

AMERICAN TRANSATLANTIC CO.,
17 Battery Place, New York, U. S. A., December 7, 1915.

Hon. HOKE SMITH,
United States Senator, Washington, D. C.

DEAR SIR: Noting that you are interested in putting an end to the interference, by belligerent nations, with our commerce with neutral countries we take the liberty to present you facts pertaining to the recent seizures of ships belonging to the American Transatlantic Co., and appeal for aid to induce this Government to secure the release of the seized ships and assurance that other ships of this company will not be molested while trading between neutral countries.

Briefly, the situation is as follows:

The American Transatlantic Co. was incorporated in March, 1915, under the laws of the State of Delaware for the purpose of purchasing, owning, and operating ocean freight steamships under the American flag.

The inducements were prevailing attractive ocean freight rates, the general desire for a larger American merchant marine, and the belief that the Government would provide legislation that will insure future fair profits for ships under the American flag.

The officers and directors are American citizens. All of the $2,500,000 outstanding capital stock was issued to American citizens and always was and is now held beneficially and in fact by them and there is no foreign interest, directly or indirectly, involved in the ownership of the company in any of its steamships.

Sworn affidavit covering the above statements has been submitted to the State Department.

Under the act of August 18, 1914, the company purchased 11 foreign-built steamships, all from citizens of neutral countries, and only steamships that were always under neutral flags and never owned by citizens of the central powers of Europe.

After purchasing these ships they were placed under the American flag and have always been employed only in strictly neutral trade, principally between North and South America.

Under "Orders in Council," abrogating the provision of the Declaration of London that the character of a ship shall be determined by the flag it rightfully flies, Great Britain seized three of our ships, all while carrying coal cargoes for American shippers between North and South America.

The first ship was seized on October 28, and the others since, and are held without any charges filed, pending prize-court proceedings. We are now advised that within the last few days they have been requisitioned for use by the British Government.

Because of the fear of seizure, we feel compelled to hold the remaining ships of our fleet in port and, of course, are losing their earnings. The income of our entire fleet under present conditions will approximate $10,000 a day. This is a total loss, as most of the operating expenses continue to accumulate.

We have protested to the State Department that we should not be compelled to defend these ships in a British prize court for the following reasons:

There can be no question as to the American ownership.

There can be no question about the ships having always been neutral owned and under neutral flags.

That the ships were only employed in strictly neutral trade.

That we have in no manner committed acts contrary to the laws of the United States or international law.

The seizures are an arbitrary act by Great Britain based on "Orders in Council" that violate international law.

All of this is a matter of record and can be easily verified.

Prize-court proceedings mean long drawn out litigation, and in the present situation may eventually only result in a judgment against a bankrupt nation. With our ships seized and with no other property, we are without income and without credit or means to defend in prize-court proceedings, and unless we receive early relief through the assistance of this Government, this company will be forced into bankruptcy.

Yours, very respectfully,

R. G. WAGNER, President.

THE RIGHTS OF NEUTRALS.

Mr. SMITH of Georgia. Mr. President, more than 12 months ago the British privy council began passing orders to govern their naval and prize courts providing for the seizure and disposal of cargoes of merchandise belonging to citizens of neutral countries. They ceased to rely upon established customs permitting belligerents to interfere with neutral commerce and presumed to direct at pleasure the seizure and disposition of goods belonging to citizens of the United States, and of other neutral nations.

Step by step the rights of neutrals have been disregarded, until finally, on March 1 and March 11, came the two orders from Great Britain virtually suspending the business of neutrals in the neutral ports of Holland, Denmark, Norway, and Sweden. These two orders prevented shipments to or from those ports without regard to the character of the goods to be shipped. They were based upon no contraband classification. They amounted simply to a blockade of neutral ports against the trade of citizens of neutral nations.

The Executive Department, through the Secretary of State, has three times protested to Great Britain that these orders were illegal, but no response has come from Great Britain yielding to neutrals their rights. The responsibility now rests upon the Congress, at least equally with the Executive, to determine what are the rights of citizens of neutral nations and what should be done to maintain those rights.

I propose, Mr. President, to submit authorities from Great Britain—the views of her ablest writers upon international law and decisions of the courts of Great Britain—showing that for a hundred years the British courts and the British text writers recognized rules of international law fixing the rights of neutrals that Great Britain to-day is recklessly disregarding. If the rights of citizens of the United States are being lawlessly disregarded by Great Britain, if their merchandise is being piled up illegally in British ports, if their trade with northern Europe is illegally suppressed, it is for the Congress to say what should be done to induce Great Britain to respect the rights of neutrals.

MR. JEFFERSON ON RIGHTS OF NEUTRALS.

As early as September 7, 1793, the right of the commerce of our citizens to freedom from interference by belligerents was discussed by Mr. Jefferson, Secretary of State, in a letter to Mr. Pinckney, United States minister to England.

Great Britain had passed an order in council providing for the seizure of neutral vessels loaded with foodstuffs destined to the ports of France, and providing that these vessels, when seized, should only be discharged upon giving security that they would go alone to ports in amity with His Majesty. Secretary Jefferson condemned the order vigorously. He declared:

This article is so manifestly contrary to the law of nations that nothing more would seem necessary than to observe that it is so.

He pointed out that the only restriction on their natural rights submitted to by nations at peace were that they should—not furnish to either party implements merely of war for the annoyance of the other, nor anything whatever to a place blockaded by its enemy.

He denied that foodstuffs were considered contraband, and said:

It suffices for the present action to say that corn, flour, and meal are not of the class of contraband, and consequently remain articles of free commerce. * * * We see, then, a practice begun which strikes at the root of our agriculture, that branch of industry which gives food, clothing, and comfort to the great mass of the inhabitants of the States. * * * If we permit corn to be sent to Great Britain and her friends, we are clearly bound to permit it to France. To restrain it would be a partiality which might lead to a war with France, and between restraining it ourselves, and permitting her enemies to restrain it unrightfully, is not different. * * * This is a dilemma which Great Britain has no right to force upon us. She may indeed feel the desire of starving an enemy nation, but she can have no right of doing it at our loss, or of making us the instrument of it.

RIGHTS OF NEUTRALS.

The sovereignty of a nation extends to its citizens and their property upon the ocean.

Nations at war have no natural right to interfere with citizens or the commerce of citizens of nations at peace. The customs of nations have given to belligerents certain well-defined privileges of interference with the commerce of neutrals. When interference takes place not authorized by the well-defined customs of nations the act of the belligerent nation so interfering with the commerce of a citizen of a neutral nation is lawless and violates the sovereign rights of the neutral nation.

BELLIGERENT RIGHT OF SEIZURE.

The customs of nations have given to belligerent nations the privilege of interfering with neutral commerce only on account of the existence of a blockade or on account of the character of the goods. A blockade, meeting recognized requirements, having been established by a belligerent against one or more enemy ports, the belligerent may seize the ships or merchandise of neutrals when engaged in the act of endeavoring to run the blockade. This privilege of seizure extends to goods of all character, but is limited to those endeavoring to enter a blockaded port.

To determine the privilege of interference on account of the character of the goods, goods have been divided into three classes, termed, first, absolute contraband; second, conditional contraband; and, third, absolutely free.

The privilege of seizure on account of the character of goods is entirely independent of the question of blockade, and classification of goods under either one of these three heads has been going on for many years, so that the proper status of goods under any particular head has been substantially established. To absolute contraband have been assigned goods peculiarly suited to war; to conditional contraband, goods suited to war and to peace; and to the free list those especially useful for purposes of peace.

The absolute contraband are subject to seizure if being sent directly or through neutral ports to an enemy country. The conditional contraband are subject to seizure if being sent to the army and the navy of the enemy. Neither is subject to seizure if going to a neutral country to enter there the general stock of trade. The weight of authority, and the usual custom, frees conditional contraband from seizure when sailing to a neutral country. Goods on the free list, of course, are not to be seized under any circumstances except where seeking entrance to a blockaded port.

BRITISH ORDERS OF MARCH.

On March 1 Great Britain passed an order declaring—

The British and French Governments will hold themselves free to detain and take into port ships carrying goods of presumed enemy destination, ownership, or origin.

On March 1 came the further order in council passed by Great Britain which declared a blockade of all German ports.

The first and second provisions of the order of March 11 declare a blockade of all the ports of Germany. Of course, Great Britain could not blockade the Baltic. She had no vessels in it. It was entirely free to the commerce of Norway, Sweden, and Denmark. Yet she assumed to seize the vessels and merchandise of citizens of neutral countries other than Norway, Denmark, and Sweden, and carry them into her harbors before they reached the straits which separate Denmark, Norway, and Sweden.

There is no principle of international law more completely recognized than that a blockade must apply equally to all countries. There is no English student of international law who for one moment would approve as legal the seizure of neutral vessels by Great Britain, before they reached the straits separating Denmark, Norway, and Sweden, when the Baltic Sea was free to the vessels of Denmark, Norway, and Sweden.

The third and fourth provisions of the order provided:

Third. Every merchant vessel which sails from a port of departure after the 1st of March, 1915, on her way to a port other than a German port, carrying goods with an enemy destination or which are enemy property may be required to discharge such goods in a British or allied port. Any goods so discharged in a British port shall be placed in the custody of the marshal of the prize court and unless they are contraband of war shall, if not requisitioned for the use of His Majesty, be restored by order of the court upon such terms as the court may in the circumstances deem to be just to the person entitled thereto.

Fourth. Every merchant vessel which sails from a port other than a German port after the 1st of March, 1915, having on board goods which are of enemy origin or are enemy property, may be required to discharge such goods in a British or allied port. Goods so discharged in a British port shall be placed in the custody of the marshal of the prize court and if not requisitioned for the use of His Majesty shall be detained or sold in the discretion of the prize court. The proceeds of goods so sold shall be paid into court and dealt with in such manner as the court may in the circumstances deem to be just.

It will be observed that, under paragraph third, Great Britain directed the seizure of every merchant vessel sailing from a neutral port after March 1, on her way to a neutral port of northern Europe, if goods upon the vessel were to be sent to an enemy country, that is to say, into Germany or Austria. The goods when seized were to be discharged in British ports and placed in the custody of marshals of the prize court. If contraband they were to be condemned for that reason; but if not contraband, if innocent goods which Great Britain has no right to touch except through the creation of a legal blockade, the goods were then only to be restored to their owners upon such terms as the prize court might under the circumstances deem to be just.

Enforcing this order, Great Britain has sold in English ports cargo after cargo of merchandise belonging to citizens of the United States when the merchandise was in no sense claimed to be contraband, and settlements for the goods are still being held up, citizens of the United States having been deprived of their trade privileges, of their goods, and of the value of their goods.

In aggravation it can be shown that the same character of goods sailing from ports of the United States, destined to neutral ports of northern Europe, which were seized and carried into British ports were permitted to be sent from British ports by British owners to the same neutral ports of northern Europe from which American owners were excluded. The trade by citizens of Great Britain was greatly increased to the ports from which neutrals were excluded.

I will not discuss this aggravation of the wrong done to neutrals. I protest the illegal interference with neutral trade, even though subjects of Great Britain be not beneficiaries.

Mr. SMOOT. Will the Senator yield to me a moment for a question only?

Mr. SMITH of Georgia. Yes; but after this I would prefer to proceed without interruption.

Mr. SMOOT. All I wish to ask the Senator is as to those goods which have been seized by the British and sold to the English people. Have the American shippers or owners received compensation for the goods so seized?

Mr. SMITH of Georgia. Some have and some have not.

Mr. President, ordinarily I would be gratified to be interrupted by Senators, but I intend to endeavor to present a legal argument to the Senate, and I believe I will consume less time, and do it more satisfactorily, if I undertake to present the line of thought which is in my mind in the order in which I had contemplated presenting it.

The fourth provision of the order directs the seizure of all goods sailing from neutral ports if the goods were of origin in a country hostile to Great Britain; that is to say, in Germany or Austria. It provides that these goods are to be turned over to the prize courts of Great Britain, to be by the prize courts sold and the proceeds handled as the court may direct.

Citizens of the United States had purchased prior to March 1 large quantities of goods in Germany. Merchandise of great value had been shipped by them into Holland. It is estimated that merchandise of the value of over $100,000,000 belonging to citizens of the United States was arbitrarily stopped from sailing from the neutral ports of northern Europe.

Among other merchandise, shipments of dyestuffs, so essential to our factories, were stopped. Shipments of potash, necessary in many sections for the fertilization of the soil, were stopped. German products used for medicinal purposes were stopped.

It is true that occasionally we beg through a vessel or beg some goods through. Senators, I resent such conduct; I resent any effort to beg through a little dyestuff, or a little medicine, or a little potash, when our citizens have the absolute right to bring here all they please, and the interference is a lawless disregard of their rights.

I have termed the treatment by Great Britain of neutral commerce through the ports of Holland, Denmark, Norway, and Sweden a blockade. We must keep in mind the fact that interference with the commerce of neutrals by belligerents is permitted upon only two grounds—blockade or the unneutral character of the goods. Seizure on account of the character of the goods is limited to contraband going to the military or naval forces of the enemy. It does not apply to goods coming from an enemy country. It applies only to a limited character of goods going into an enemy country. Yet Great Britain has ordered the seizure of all goods of enemy origin or destination. In carrying this order into effect Great Britain has restrained all shipments to and from the ports of Holland, Denmark, Norway, and Sweden. The question of the character of the goods does not limit British seizures. The course of Great Britain is a blockade of these ports, and it is covered by no belligerent right unless it falls under the head of blockade.

The blockade of neutral ports by Great Britain and the claim by Great Britain of the right to seize goods upon the sole ground that they were of enemy origin or destination violate the sovereign rights of all neutral countries.

NEUTRAL RIGHTS OF TRADE SUPPORTED BY TEXT WRITERS AND DECISIONS.

The citizens of the United States and of other neutral nations have the right to ship goods to and from Germany and Austria through the neutral ports of northern Europe. In support of these propositions I ask attention to text writers and decisions, English as well as American.

NEUTRAL PORT CAN NOT BE BLOCKADED.

Atherley Jones, in his work Commerce in War, page 92, calls attention to the fact that the right of a belligerent to conduct a blockade is a development of the rules of international law growing out of the right of siege of an enemy's port or enemy's cities. It is treated by the English writers and decisions as an act of war directed at an enemy through the port of the enemy.

In Oppenheim's International Law, volume 2, page 401, it is stated:

A blockade can extend to a portion or all of the enemy's country.

In Hall's International Law, page 713, it is stated:

If one bank of a river is within a neutral state, or if the upper portion of its navigable course is beyond the frontier of a hostile country, the belligerent can only maintain a blockade so far as is consistent with the right of the neutral to preserve free access to his own ports or territory, and with the right of other neutrals to communicate freely with him.

It will thus be observed that these authorities recognize a blockade as an act of war to be directed solely to an enemy's port. It can be extended to a portion or all of an enemy's country. Where a river separates an enemy and neutral country, so strict is the rule that the blockade must not extend to a neutral country that the blockade of the enemy port on the river must be conducted in a way to avoid interference with the neutral rights on the other side of the stream.

In the early part of 1908 Great Britain invited nine other great commercial nations to send delegates to a conference to be held at London, to meet with delegates representing Great Britain, the object of the conference being that the delegates should codify the rules of international law applicable to naval warfare. Each of the ten nations furnished each of the others a memoranda giving its view of the law on the questions to be considered.

The English memoranda stated that it presented the views of the British Government, founded upon the decisions in the British courts, as to the rules of international law on the points enumerated in the program of the Conference of London. The British memoranda will be found in "Correspondence and Documents Respecting the International Naval Conference, Papers of Command, Miscellaneous No. 4, 1909."

Hereafter, this memoranda will be cited simply as "British memoranda."

On page 5, British memoranda, is found the following statement:

A blockade must be confined to the ports and coasts of the enemy. * * * The blockading forces may be disposed of at any distance from the ports or coasts blockaded that the naval authorities think fit, provided they are not so placed as to obstruct access to a neutral seaboard.

In the Peterhoff case (5 Wallace, p. 52) the question was whether where a river separated an enemy country from a neutral country a blockade could be extended across the river to a port of the neutral country. After reviewing the cases on the subject the Supreme Court of the United States declared:

We are not aware of any instance in which a belligerent has attempted to blockade the mouth of a river or harbor occupied on one side by neutrals, or in which such a blockade has been recognized as valid by any court administering the laws of nations. * * * It is unnecessary to examine other cases referred to by counsel. It is sufficient to say that none of them support the doctrine that a belligerent can blockade the mouth of a river occupied on one bank by neutrals with complete rights of navigation.

NEUTRAL TRADE WITH BELLIGERENTS FREE EXCEPT WHERE STOPPED AS CONTRABAND OR BY A LEGAL BLOCKADE.

It has been thought by some, without examination of the rules of international law or the customs of nations, that Great Britain was excusable for interfering with neutral commerce because the goods were eventually to go to the country of her enemies, or because the goods came from the country of her enemies.

There is no custom or rule of international law to sustain such an excuse. Neutrals have the right to trade with belligerents. Belligerents can only interfere with neutral trade on account of the character of the goods, or on account of a legally conducted blockade. The fact that goods not subject to seizure on account of their contraband nature, shipped to neutral ports, will ultimately reach the enemy of a belligerent gives no right of interference by the belligerent with those goods.

The following authorities and decisions sustain both the view that a neutral port can not be blockaded, and that through a neutral port neutrals have the right to ship to a belligerent country, and even to a blockaded port in a belligerent country.

In Hall's International Law, pages 693–695, it is stated:

At sea the rights of neutrals being equal to those of belligerents * * * the neutral has prima facie a right of access to the enemy country.

In Godfrey Lushington, Oxford, Manual of Naval Prize Law, page 37, it is stated:

If the destination (referring to the port of destination of a vessel) be neutral, then the destination of the goods on board should be considered neutral, notwithstanding it may appear from papers or otherwise that the goods themselves have an ulterior hostile destination to be attained by transshipment over land conveyance.

In Westlake International Law, second edition, Cambridge, volume 2, page 238, it is stated:

Where the mouth of a river divides a belligerent from a neutral State, the enemy of the former does not lose his right of blockade of the shore belonging to it, but he can not interfere with the trade of the other shore. * * * A blockade can not affect the commerce which the blockaded port carries on through a neutral port with which it has inland communication.

The Ocean (3 C. Rob., 297): In this case goods were shipped from Amsterdam, an enemy blockaded port, to Rotterdam; Rotterdam was not subject to blockade. The goods were for export from Rotterdam to the United States. Sir William Scott, delivering the judgment, said:

I am inclined to consider this matter favorably as an exportation from Rotterdam only—the place in which the cargo becomes first connected with the ship. In what course it had traveled before that time, whether from Amsterdam at all, and if from Amsterdam whether by land carriers or one of their inland navigations, Rotterdam being the port of actual shipment, I do not think it material to inquire. * * * On the land side Amsterdam neither was nor could be affected by blockade of naval forces. It could be applied only externally. The internal communications of the country were out of its reach and in no way subject to its operation. If the exportation of goods from Rotterdam was at this time permitted it could in no degree be vitiated by a previous inland transmission of them from the city of Amsterdam.

The Stert (4 C. Rob., 65): The British Courts of Admiralty in this case ruled that a blockade did not affect the trade carried on with neutrals by means of inland navigation. "It was," Sir William Scott said, "a mere maritime blockade effected by force operating only at sea." He admitted that such trade would defeat, partially at least, the object of the blockade, but observed:

If that is the consequence, all that can be said is that it is an unavoidable consequence. The court can not on that ground take upon itself to say that a legal blockade exists where no actual blockade can be applied.

The John Pieter, 4 C. Rob. 79, was a shipment from England to Emden. The goods were shipped with a final destination to Holland which was under blockade. There was a question as to who really owned the goods; an American claimed them, and America was a neutral country. Sir William Scott, delivering the judgment, said:

Supposing the cargo to be American property, I am not inclined to think it would be affected by a blockade on the present voyage. The blockade of Amsterdam is from the nature of things a partial blockade, a blockade by sea, and if the goods were going to Emden with an ulterior destination by land to Amsterdam, or by an interior canal to destination it is not according to my conception a breach of the blockade.

The British memoranda before referred to, page 8, states:

Where the ship does not intend to proceed to the blockaded port, the fact that goods on board are to be sent on by sea or inland transportation is no ground for condemnation.

Lord Russell, representing the British Government during the Civil War, referring to the trade to Matamoras, and from Matamoras into the Confederate States, said:

To pretend that some goods carried to Matamoras may afterwards be transported across the frontier to Texas does not vitiate the legitimate character of that trade.

The French Government in the French memoranda furnished in connection with the conference at London, used the following language:

Ships bound for a blockaded port may be captured only when they try to pass the blockaded spot. Until then their being bound for a blockaded port or for a neighboring port with goods for a blockaded port does not constitute a breach of neutrality. (P. 30 translation.)

In Lushington's Naval Prize Law, pages 16 and 17, it is stated:

It is true that a breach of blockade is not committed by a vessel which, herself beyond the blockade line, takes on board goods exported overland from the blockaded port or by a vessel which carries goods to an open port to be forwarded thence overland into a blockaded one, but in each of these cases the blockade line is not crossed by the goods. In other words, the blockade has not been broken.

The Supreme Court of the United States in the Peterhoff case, reviewed the English decisions in connection with the question of ulterior destination to the Confederate States by inland conveyances of goods shipped to Matamoras, a neutral port, and the court stated:

Upon this question the authorities seem quite clear.

Calling attention to the facts and decisions in a number of cases in which it was held that the goods of neutrals could not be seized, the Chief Justice delivering the opinion of the court, said:

These were cases of trade from a blockaded to a neutral country by means of inland navigation to the neutral port or a port not blockaded. The same principle was applied to trade from a neutral to a blockaded country by inland conveyance from the neutral port of primary destination to the blockaded port of ulterior destination. Goods belonging to neutrals * * * were held not liable to seizure. * * * These cases fully recognize the lawfulness of neutral trade to or from a blockaded country by inland navigation or transportation, * * * and the doctrines of international law lead irresistibly to the same conclusion. We know of but two exceptions to the rule of free trade by neutrals with belligerents; the first is that there must be no violation of blockade or siege; and the second, that there must be no conveyance of contraband to either belligerent. * * * The trade of neutrals with belligerents in articles not contraband is absolutely free unless interrupted by blockade.

DECLARATION OF LONDON.

The highest authority upon the law of naval warfare is found in the Declaration of the International Naval Conference, held in London during the winter of 1908–9, commonly called the "Declaration of London."

The Governments of Great Britain, Austria-Hungary, France, Germany, Italy, Japan, Russia, Spain, the United States of America, and Holland were represented at this conference. The conference was held as the result of a letter sent by the British Government through Sir Edward Grey to the representatives of Great Britain in each one of these countries, tendering an invitation to them to hold the conference. The conference was invited to consider the rules of naval warfare, "including the circumstances under which particular articles can be considered as contraband; * * * blockade, including the questions as to the locality where seizure can be effected; * * * the doctrine of continuous voyage in respect both of contraband and of blockade." The letter stated that the conference was to be held "with the object of arriving at an agreement as to what are the generally recognized principles of international law" upon the subjects to be considered.

TO EXPRESS GENERALLY RECOGNIZED RULES OF INTERNATIONAL LAW.

In an official letter of November 1, 1908, Sir Edward Grey describes the work of the proposed conference as follows:

The proposed declaration should, in the opinion of His Majesty's Government, place on record that those powers * * * recognize that there exists in fact a common law of nations of which it is the purport of the declaration in common interest to set out the principles, that in thus defining the generally recognized rules of international law the conference will put an end to many uncertainties and doubts which are a danger both to peaceful commerce and to good political relations.

Other quotations from the correspondence equally important could be made, but these are sufficient to establish the fact that Great Britain regarded the conference as authorized to make a declaration which would amount in fact to the common law of nations upon the subject of naval warfare, and that the agreement of the delegates upon the questions submitted for their consideration was to become an official declaration of the international law upon the subjects considered.

Great Britain designated Lord Desart to be His Majesty's plenipotentiary. His commission gave him full power "to sign an international agreement which may result from the deliberations of the conference." With Lord Desart were associated, representing Great Britain, Rear Admiral Sir Charles Otley, secretary of the imperial defense; Rear Admiral Slade, director of naval intelligence, and Messrs. Crow and Hearst, counsel of His Majesty's Foreign Office.

At the head of the French delegates was Monsieur Louis Renault, professor of law at Paris, legal adviser to the Minister of Foreign Affairs, principal of the University of France, and member of the Permanent Court of Arbitration.

The nine other nations designated their ablest students of international law to represent them at this conference. The conference extended from early in December until late in February. At the suggestion of the British Government, each of the countries furnished in advance to each of the other countries a memoranda of its views as to the rules of international law upon the points to be considered by the conference.

The conference, comprised of about 40 members, reached a unanimous agreement and embodied it in 64 articles, which they prefaced with the following statement:

The signatory powers are agreed that the rules contained in the following chapters correspond in substance with the generally recognized principles of international law.

If the agreement of the conference, called the Declaration of London, had been ratified by the respective nations, it would have become binding upon all of them as a treaty agreement. Unratified it furnishes the world authority upon the rules of international law, considered by the conference far higher than that to be found elsewhere.

What matters it whether, by treaty agreement, some country said: "We will agree to obey the law"? Here was the solemn decision of the chosen men of 10 great nations that these articles embodied the law. A treaty agreement with reference to it would have been simply an agreement between two or more nations that they would abide the law. Where will you find what are the correct rules of international law on these subjects if you do not find them in this declaration?

Admiral Charles H. Stockton, the leading representative of the United States in the conference, in his work on Outlines of International Law, page 58, referring to the Declaration of London, declares:

Whether formally ratified or not by the signatory and other powers, it has the authoritative weight due to the unanimous vote of the representatives of the great maritime powers and to their declaration that it represents the actual principles of international law upon the subjects dealt with.

In a letter of March 30 to the British Government the representatives of Great Britain in this conference reported, with reference to the effect of the rules upon which they agreed, as follows:

These rules do amount practically to a statement of what is the essence of the law of nations properly applicable to the questions at issue under present conditions of maritime commerce and warfare. We believe we have clearly vindicated this principle by securing the insertion at the head of the declaration of the preliminary provision which dominates the whole series of articles. This provision declared that in the opinion of the signatory powers the rules contained in the declaration correspond in substance with the generally recognized principles of international law.

I think it unfortunate that the Declaration of London was not presented to the belligerent nations, and forcefully held before them, not as binding by treaty but as the law, backed by an authority far greater than a mere treaty would make it as being the law. I dwell upon the Declaration of London, and its weight, as authority, because at a later day I shall desire to discuss some questions, using the Declaration of London, to which I do not expect to refer at this time. I wish to present it to the thought of Senators. I wish to answer the trivial, light mode in which certain newspapers have sought to sweep it away, because it was not ratified through a treaty agreement.

The Declaration of London was approved by the British House of Commons during the summer of 1911.

In a debate upon the floor of the House of Commons Mr. McKinnon Wood, a member of the Government and representing the Government in the debate, declared that the Declaration of London contained the English view of the law of blockade "en bloc." No one questioned the correctness of his statement.

The opposition to approving the Declaration of London in the House of Commons was principally because foodstuffs had not been placed on the free list. Mr. McKinnon Wood, representing the Government, replied, in substance, "We tried to put foodstuffs upon the free list, but we could not do it. But," said he, "we have placed cotton on the free list."

Sir Arthur Balfour replied, in substance, "To be sure, but you have accomplished nothing. Through all time this commodity, so essential for the peaceful purposes of the peoples of the world, has been on the free list." "But," he said, again, "you claim that Russia in 1904, during the Japanese War, put it on her contraband list." "Yes; and we promptly protested the legality of Russia's conduct, and Russia yielded." And the one exception abandoned, Mr. Balfour said, emphasized the true rule that the custom of nations has put cotton on the free list, "and you have done nothing for commerce by putting it there in the Declaration of London."

Now let us turn to the Declaration of London and see what the representatives of the 10 great naval powers determined was the true rule of international law applicable to blockade, embodying, as it did, the English view of the law "en bloc." The declaration reads:

Article 1. A blockade must not extend beyond the ports and coasts belonging to or occupied by the enemy.

* * * * * * *

Article 18. The blockading forces must not bar access to neutral ports or coasts.

M. Renault prepared the explanation which accompanied the articles. In explaining article 18 he used the following language:

This rule has been thought necessary the better to protect the commercial interests of neutral countries. It completes article 1, according to which a blockade must not extend beyond the ports and coasts of the enemy, which implies that as it is an operation of war, it must not be directed against a neutral port, in spite of the importance to a belligerent of the part played by that neutral port in supplying its adversary.

The Declaration of London further provides:

Article 5. A blockade must be applied impartially to the ships of all nations.

The British memoranda of the law, paragraph 4, under the head of blockade, provides:

A blockade must be impartially enforced against the ships of all nations.

Great Britain simply seizes the vessels carrying cargoes owned by citizens of neutral countries, whether coming out of or going into the ports of the countries of northern Europe. That this blockade of neutral ports is illegal can not, and will not, be seriously questioned.

It has been and is a deliberate disregard of the rights of neutrals by Great Britain. There can be no pretense that this interference with neutral trade is sustained by the customs of nations. Indeed, there is no such pretense. It is a bold, reckless disregard of that freedom of the sea which is the right of neutrals by the customs of nations and rules of international law.

Yet, for more than eight months this disregard of the sovereign rights of all neutral countries has been permitted to continue to the serious injury of the commerce of their citizens.

A feeble effort has been made to excuse the course of Great Britain, not upon the ground that it is legal but upon the ground that the Government of the United States during the Civil War illegally and improperly acted in the same way.

Men even in the United States have sought to excuse Great Britain by stating that the United States, during the Civil War, blockaded neutral ports and furnished a precedent for what Great Britain is now doing. I do not know any law by which we can punish the men who circulate such injurious slanders against their Government. They at least ought to have our intense contempt.

The United States never blockaded a neutral port during the Civil War. That statement is as false as the statement that the United States declared cotton contraband during the Civil War. The last statement is stupidly false.

What is a contraband order? It is an order to prevent unneutral goods from going into an enemy country, where they will be used for purposes of war. Who would accuse Mr. Lincoln of being so foolish as to wish to keep cotton from going into the Southern States? That is where it was raised. There never was such an order; and to rest their case upon it is another piece of ignorance, or worse.

CIVIL WAR PRECEDENTS CONDEMN GREAT BRITAIN.

An examination of the decisions of the Supreme Court of the United States destroys this excuse and condemns Great Britain.

The cases used to sustain the contention are the Springbok and the Bermuda. In these cases the Supreme Court of the United States laid down the rule that where merchandise was shipped from neutral ports, in vessels with a nominal destination of Nassau but really intended to run the blockade of ports of the Southern States, or where the merchandise sailed upon vessels destined for Nassau but the shippers had arranged from the first to send the merchandise in other vessels to southern ports, running the blockade, the purpose of running the blockade attached to the goods through their entire journey, and rendered them subject to seizure.

It will be observed that in these cases the right of seizure was based, not upon a blockade of a neutral port but upon the fact that the shippers had arranged a continuous voyage for the goods by sea into a blockaded port, and the seizures were solely justified upon the ground that the goods were being carried by a continuous voyage into a blockaded port.

Nassau was not blockaded by the United States, but merchandise, the owners of which started it with the purpose of not stopping at Nassau but of continuing shipment by water into and through the blockaded ports of the Southern States, was seized upon the ground that the goods were really running the blockade into blockaded ports of the Southern States.

In the Bermuda case the court said:

We agree to this. Neutrals might convey in neutral ships from one neutral port to another any goods whether contraband of war or not if intended for actual delivery at the port of destination and to become part of the common stock of the country or of the port.

The cargo of this vessel consisted almost exclusively of goods belonging to Frazier Trenholm & Co., at Liverpool, a branch of the house of John Frazier & Co., at Charleston, and the fiscal agents of the Confederacy in Great Britain, in which capacity they were largely engaged in fitting out cruisers and blockade runners. It consisted in part of—lawns with figures of a youth bearing onward the Confederate flag, military decorations, epaulettes, stars for the shoulder straps of officers of rank, many military articles with designs appropriate for use in the Confederate States, case of cutlery stamped with the name of merchants in Confederate cities, several cases of double-barreled guns stamped as manufactured for a dealer at Charleston, a large amount of munitions of war, five finished Blakely cannon in cases, with carriages, six cannon without cases, a thousand shells, several hundred barrels of gunpowder, 72,000 cartridges, 2,500,000 percussion caps, 21 cases of swords, and in addition a large quantity of army blankets and other materials.

There were residents of Charleston on board listed as common sailors under disguised names. Of the ship's real company, the master, the first mate, the clerk, and three seamen were citizens of South Carolina. The second mate, carpenter, and cook belonged to other Confederate States.

The ostensible owner of the ship was a British subject, but the day after her registration he executed a power of attorney to two citizens of Charleston, S. C., to sell the ship for any sum they might deem sufficient.

At the time of the capture and after the vessel was boarded the captain's brother, by his order, threw overboard two small boxes and a package which he swore he understood contained postage stamps and a bag which he understood contained letters and which he was instructed to destroy in case of capture.

It was held that the nominal ownership of the Bermuda was a pretense and that the vessel was rightly condemned as enemy property. It was further held among other things that the consignment of the whole cargo "to order or assigns" meant, in fact, to the order of John Frazier & Co., of Charleston.

In the case of the Springbok it was found by the court that—

Upon the whole case we can not doubt that the cargo was originally shipped with intent to violate the blockade; that the owners of the cargo intended that it should be transshipped at Nassau into some vessel more likely to succeed in reaching safely a blockaded port than the Springbok, that the voyage from London to the blockaded port was, as to cargo, both in law and in the intent of the parties one voyage.

Both these cases were severely criticized by English law writers at the time. These cases were each based, however, upon the theory that the voyage was illegal because it was conducted for the purpose of entering a port in disregard of a blockade. They in no sense excuse the effort of Great Britain to blockade the neutral ports of northern Europe.

On the contrary the Supreme Court of the United States in the Peterhoff case considered the rights of ships and cargoes really destined to neutral ports. The Peterhoff sailed from England to Matamoras, Mexico. Chief Justice Chase delivered the opinion of the court. The Supreme Court held:

First. That the mouth of the Rio Grande was not included in the blockade of the ports of the rebel States, and neutral commerce with Matamoras, except in contraband, is entirely free.
Second. Neutral trade to and from a blockaded country by inland navigation or transportation is free.

After reviewing a number of English cases the court says:

These cases fully recognize the lawfulness of neutral trade to or from a blockaded country by inland navigation or transportation. * * * And the general doctrines of international law lead irresistibly to the same conclusion. * * * The doctrine of the Bermuda case, supposed by counsel to have an important application to that before us, has, in reality, no application at all. The Bermuda and her cargo were condemned because engaged in a voyage ostensibly for a neutral, but in reality either directly, or by substitution of another vessel, for a blockaded port. The Peterhoff was destined for a neutral port, with no ulterior destination for the ship, and none by sea for the cargo to any blockaded place. In the case of the Bermuda the cargo, destined primarily for Nassau, could not reach its ulterior destination without violating the blockade of the rebel ports; in the case before us the cargo, destined primarily for Matamoras, could reach an ulterior destination in Texas without violating any blockade at all.
We must say, therefore, that trade between London and Matamoras, even with intent to supply from Matamoras goods to Texas, violated no blockade and can not be declared unlawful. "Such trade," said the Court, "with unrestricted inland commerce between such a port and the enemy's territory, impairs, undoubtedly, and very seriously impairs, the value of the blockade of an enemy's coast. But in cases such as that now in judgment we administer the public laws of nations, and are not at liberty to inquire what is for the particular advantage or disadvantage of our nation or another country."

So, Mr. President, we make an overwhelming case—an irresistible case—against Great Britain for passing and enforcing these orders of March 1 and March 11. Great Britain has suppressed the trade of neutrals through neutral ports, assuming the right to control the trade in free goods with her enemies. A great loss has been brought upon citizens of the United States in consequence of this action. Are we simply to submit? Are we to continue to accord to Great Britain her neutral privileges while she tramples upon the neutral rights of citizens of the United States?

I will not at this time discuss in detail the illegal efforts of Great Britain to change the recognized status of goods based upon their character. While the blockade by Great Britain of the neutral ports of northern Europe continues, orders affecting the character of goods are immaterial, as all neutral goods are prevented from entering the neutral ports; discriminations as to the nature of the goods do not affect them.

It is, however, true that the British Government, through Sir Edward Grey, advised the British delegates to the London conference, referring to additions by belligerents to the list of absolute contraband, as follows:

It appears to be generally agreed that no such additions ought in any case to be admissible except in cases of articles which can not be utilized for other than warlike purposes.

The declaration of London, following this view of the English Government, declares:

Article 23. Articles exclusively used for war may be added to the list of absolute contraband.

In the Peterhoff case the Supreme Court of the United States held:

It is true that even these goods (referring to absolute contraband), if really intended for sale in the market of Matamoras, would be free of liability, for contraband may be transported by neutrals to a neutral port if intended to make part of its general stock in trade.

In the Peterhoff case the Supreme Court held that absolute and conditional contraband passing through a neutral port if shown to be for the army of an enemy could be held. Criticizing this opinion the Maritime Prize Commission of the Institute of International Law, composed of members of the various nationalities, and including W. E. Hall, of Oxford, Sir Travers Twist, an English writer upon international law, and M. Renault, professor of international law at the University of Paris, declared the cases to be—subversive of the established rule of the law of maritime warfare, according to which neutral property on board a vessel under a neutral flag, whilst on its way to another neutral port, is not liable to capture or confiscation by a belligerent. (Moore's Digest, vol. 7, pp. 731–732.)

Differences of opinion with reference to the treatment of contraband were solved by the London conference, which determined that the correct view of the rules of international law made absolute contraband passing through a neutral port subject to seizure where shown to be destined from the first to an enemy country, but as to conditional contraband the declaration declared, article 35:

Conditional contraband is not liable to capture except when found on board a vessel bound for territory belonging to or occupied by the enemy or for the armed forces of the enemy, and when it is not to be discharged in an intervening neutral port.

So that under the authorities, with the blockade raised in these neutral ports, the status of neutral trade would be about this:

A belligerent can not add to a list of absolute contraband any goods which can be used for other than warlike purposes.

Goods, properly upon a list of absolute contraband, can be seized though belonging to neutral citizens and sailing to neutral ports, if shown to be intended for an enemy country.

Conditional contraband sailing to neutral ports, belonging to neutral citizens, can not be seized by a belligerent.

Goods neither absolute nor conditional contraband can pass entirely free from interference.

Goods sailing to a neutral country, there to enter the general stock in trade, and really for sale in the markets of the country, would be free of liability to seizure.

I have presented so fully the rules of international law, applicable to the rights of neutrals, because it should be known that Members of Congress appreciate how recklessly the rights of citizens of this country are being disregarded.

For a hundred years the relations between the United States and Great Britain have been growing closer and closer. A most cordial regard has united the people of both countries. But we are not a dependency of Great Britain.

Germany has always been a friend of the United States, and many of our best citizens love their Fatherland only second to their love and loyalty for our own country.

We deplore the terrible war; but the United States owes it to her citizens and to her foreign friends to maintain a real neutrality.

Neutrals must maintain their neutral rights to maintain neutrality. Great Britain may desire to crush an enemy nation through the suppression of trade, "but she can have no right of doing it at our loss, or of making us the instrument of it."

The United States, with other neutral nations, should demand from Great Britain that disregard of their rights cease. It may be necessary for the United States and other neutrals to let Great Britain understand that no "word or act" will be omitted to enforce their rights.

We may hope Great Britain will comply, not alone because she must retain friendly relations with neutral nations to supply her own population with the necessaries of life, but because the people of that great nation, and those there in authority, must desire to obey the rules of international law they have contributed so much to establish and to which they are so thoroughly committed.

At the close of the last protest against the British orders of March 1 and 11, the Executive department, speaking through the Secretary of State, used the following language:

The task of championing the integrity of neutral rights, which have received the sanction of the civilized world, against the lawless conduct of belligerents arising out of the bitterness of the great conflict which is now wasting the countries of Europe, the United States unhesitatingly assumes, and to the accomplishment of that task it will devote its energies, exercising always that impartiality which from the outbreak of the war it has sought to exercise in its relations with the warring nations.

So far the protests of the Executive department against the lawless conduct of Great Britain have been answered by increased lawlessness. Step by step the rights of the citizens of neutral nations to buy and sell merchandise in foreign markets have been suppressed.

It is for Congress to determine what value it will be to the integrity of neutral rights for the United States to have become unhesitatingly their champion.

Mr. LODGE. Mr. President, I have no intention at this moment of discussing any of the many points raised by the Senator from Georgia in his very elaborate and able argument, but I desire to offer an amendment to his resolution extending the scope of the inquiry and investigation if it is to be ordered by the Senate and made by the Committee on Foreign Relations.

I think, Mr. President, that neutral rights possessed by us should be insisted upon and investigated in every place where it can be proved that they have been violated, but I think also that we are equally bound to fulfill our neutral duties rigidly and strictly, although I have observed in some quarters that our sense of our rights is a little more vivid than our sense of our duty.

I wish to extend the scope of the resolution by my amendment, because if we are to take up this question of the violation of our rights, I want to put it not on the lowest ground alone, but on the highest ground as well. I think it is of great importance that we should vindicate our rights as a neutral in trade if those rights have been violated, but I think it is far more important that we should extend protection and assure security to American citizens wherever they rightfully are, for I do not believe that any government can long retain the respect of its own people if it does not give them the protection to which they are entitled.

I think Americans should be protected in their lives and in their liberty everywhere. I do not think they ought to be murdered in detail and obscurely in Mexico or openly and wholesale on the high seas.

Although I am as anxious as anyone can be to care for our rights in trade if they are violated, to me American lives are more important than American dollars. The body of an innocent child floating dead on the water, the victim of the destruction of an unarmed vessel, is to me a more poignant and a more tragic spectacle than an unsold bale of cotton.

If this investigation is to go on, and especially if Congress is to take action, I want it to take in all the violations of our rights that may have occurred. The most important is the violation which has affected American lives or the security of an American citizen—man, woman or child—and the next most important are those pointed out by the President of the United States in his message the other day, when he referred to the destruction of property, accompanied by destruction of life, in the United States, and stated that conspiracies in alien interests are going on within our own borders.

I think if we are to investigate and inquire with a view to action such deeds as these should not be omitted. I am not willing to get into a passion over an infringement of our trade and then allow American citizens to lose their lives and pass it by in frigid silence.

I do not wish to see this country when it looks into the book of time close the pages on which are written the outrages that have been committed against American citizens in Mexico and on the high seas and be blind to what is written there and fix its whole attention on the pages where is reckoned up the profit and loss account in dollars. I think the United States stands for something higher in the world than mere trade and mere dollars. I do not want to see our citizens wronged in their property, but I think we should also stand, and above all, for morality and humanity in the dealings of nations with each other.

These are the reasons, Mr. President, why I desire to have the scope of this inquiry enlarged. I shall be very glad if the Senator will allow the resolution to go over so that my amendment may be printed and that the Senate before it votes may have an opportunity to read it.

Mr. SMITH of Georgia. Mr. President——

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Secretary will state the amendment.

Mr. LODGE. I should like to have it read so that the Senate may see it in print.

The SECRETARY. It is proposed to add to the resolution:

Resolved further, That the Committee on Foreign Relations be also requested to investigate and report upon the law and the facts involved in the attacks upon or the destruction by belligerents of the following vessels: The Gulflight, Falaba, Lusitania, Arabic, Ancona, Hesperian, and Petrolite. And also to investigate and report upon the law and the facts involved in the incidents referred to by the President of the United States in his annual message, when he said, referring to certain persons: "They have formed plots to destroy property; they have entered into conspiracies against the neutrality of the Government; they have sought to pry into every confidential transaction of the Government in order to serve interests alien to our own."

Mr. STONE rose.

Mr. SMITH of Georgia. Mr. President——

Mr. WORKS. Will the Senator from Georgia yield to me for just a moment?

Mr. SMITH of Georgia. I yield.

Mr. WORKS. I should like to ask the Senator from Massachusetts whether he understands the amendment he has now offered to call for an investigation of our own part in the shipment of goods contraband of war on the vessels that are named and which were destroyed, resulting in the loss of life?

Mr. LODGE. I think the facts which I have asked for will cover all those points.

Mr. SMITH of Georgia. Mr. President, I was not surprised either at the amendment or the speech of the Senator from Massachusetts. For months past there has been a class of people in the United States, some of them good people, who whenever you suggested the disregard of the commercial rights of citizens of this country by Great Britain have been able to divert attention from the consideration of that question by holding up the Lusitania and the horrors of certain losses of life. They have also frequently suggested that those who would enforce our commercial rights against Great Britain were simply considering sordid dollars. Yet, Mr. President, I have thought that some of those whole-hearted pleas came from a class of people who are interested in munition plants and who were furnishing munitions of war and who were perhaps just a little influenced by the dollars that they were themselves making, careless entirely of the deaths they were causing. I have found the most vigorous protest against any criticism of Great Britain and the expression that it is mercenary to question the misconduct of Great Britain came usually from those patriots who, to say the least, have not recently lost anything by the manufacture of munitions of war.

Mr. President, no one can feel more than I do the loss of an American life, whether in Mexico or whether upon the sea. Still I have sometimes thought that the course pursued by the British Government in the Japanese-Russian War, when it warned its citizens to keep off of belligerent vessels, would have been wise. But without such a course on the part of our Government, unquestionably the Government should protect the lives of its citizens at all times where their rights are invaded.

I have no objection to any investigations that the Senator desires to have made, but I do protest that this constant effort to prevent the consideration of the illegal course of Great Britain is hardly fair, and that it is hardly right to load it down with a sentimentalism which appeals to every man with a drop of blood in his veins. It has been that feature which has been used so frequently in the press—I do not mean by the Senator from Massachusetts—to divert attention from the lawlessness of Great Britain.

If the Senator insists on his amendment, I do not object. I had intended to suggest that the resolution itself, without action by the Senate, go to the Committee on Foreign Relations.

Mr. LODGE. That is perfectly satisfactory.

Mr. SMITH of Georgia. I have always felt, as the Senator from Massachusetts knows, that no affirmative action of any kind should be taken by the Senate on any question involving our foreign relations until the Foreign Relations Committee considers it, and I intended to suggest that the resolution I offered go to the Committee on Foreign Relations.

Mr. LODGE. That is perfectly satisfactory; and my amendment can be referred in the same way.

Mr. SMITH of Georgia. I have not the slightest objection.

Mr. STONE. Mr. President, I rose a moment ago to ask if the Senator from Georgia would be satisfied to have his resolution take the course which he has indicated.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The amendment of the Senator from Massachusetts will be printed, and the resolution and amendment will be referred to the Committee on Foreign Relations unless there is objection. The Chair hears none.

Mr. WALSH. Mr. President——

Mr. STONE. I rose to move an executive session.

Mr. WALSH. I would be very glad if the Senator would yield to me for a few moments.

Mr. STONE. I desire to say that there are a large number of nominations here, mostly, I believe, Army and Navy nominations, but a good many of a civil character, including that of the Secretary of State, and there is other important business which ought to be referred. I should like very much to have a short executive session that the references may be made. If the Senator from Montana desires to proceed, of course I shall not urge the motion now.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from Missouri withdraws the motion for an executive session. The Senator from Montana.

Mr. WALSH. I assure the Senator from Missouri that I shall take but a few minutes upon the matter which is before the Senate, but I want to say a word, however, pertinent to the general subject of discussion. I may preface by saying that the Senator from Georgia [Mr. SMITH] is entitled to the thanks of the country for the lucid exposition which he has made of the nature of the British orders in council of March 1 and March 11. There are many lawyers in this body of unusual attainments in their profession. I apprehend there is no Senator here who until now ever heard or read of a blockade of neutral ports. Contraband entering a port of Holland may be seized upon the ground that it is going to an enemy country, but the seizure of goods coming out of Holland and destined to our shores is a crime, the character of which it might be wise not to attempt to expatiate upon.

You will recall that shortly after the war broke out shipments of copper from this country to the neutral nations of Europe were indiscriminately seized and held for an indefinite period without any attempt to bring the matter to the determination of a prize court in order to ascertain the truth of the charge that they had in fact an enemy destination. In many, if not in most, of those cases the captors did not even deign to make an explanation of the cause of the detention. The seizures of copper have entirely ceased, as you may have observed. Why? Because shippers of copper in this country have been harassed into signing an undertaking under which they ship to such places and to such persons and in such quantities as the British Admiralty, being fully advised beforehand, graciously sees fit to permit. There is not a pound of copper leaves our shores except under such a humiliating agreement.

For the information of the Senate I send the form of the obligation to the desk and ask the Secretary to read it.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Unless there is objection, the Secretary will read as requested. The Chair hears none.

The Secretary read as follows:

COPPER AGREEMENT BETWEEN UNITED STATES EXPORTERS AND BRITISH ADMIRALTY—COPPER FROM UNITED STATES OF AMERICA TO NEUTRAL COUNTRIES.

Whilst His Majesty's Government are at present, so far as they are able, preventing any copper from reaching their enemies, they have no desire to interfere in any way with the sales of the United States copper producers to purchasers in neutral countries which are willing to guarantee that the copper which they import is for the consumption of those neutral countries.

If the United States producers would be willing to cooperate, His Majesty's Government will not interfere with their copper shipments to those neutral countries which have placed copper on their prohibition list and whose prohibitions of export are found to be effective.

Whilst His Majesty's Government can not abandon in any way their right to search vessels, they will be quite willing to allow to proceed to its destination all copper which is to be sold only to named consumers, and not to merchants, dealers, or forwarding agents, in such neutral countries as have placed copper and articles manufactured mainly of copper on their list of prohibitive exports, provided that a copy of the contract of sale is sent to the director of the trade division of the admiralty, and it shall contain a clause to the effect that neither the copper itself nor any of its products shall be exported. Such copper, upon arriving at its destination, shall be put into a warehouse, so that it can not afterwards be declared in transit. The bill of lading must show clearly the name of the actual consumer, or of a recognized London merchant, or the name of a banker who shall be approved by His Majesty's Government.

It is agreed that the undersigned will not export copper to Sweden, Norway, Denmark, or Italy, except in compliance with and subject to the conditions of article 3 hereof, and that it (the undersigned company) will not export copper to other neutral countries, except subject to permit of British Admiralty.

Shipments of copper to Great Britain or her allies may be made without restriction.

All sale contracts for neutral countries to be forwarded to the British Admiralty, either through its London representatives or through His Britannic Majesty's consul at the port of New York.

Shipments of copper against contracts entered into previous to the signing of this agreement and any existing f. o. b. contracts are exempt from its provisions.

* * * * * * *

We will be prepared to conform to the different provisions set forth in the above regulations of the admiralty as regards shipments of copper from the United States of America to neutral countries, and we assent to the terms of the letter of January 2, 1915, from Richard Webb, director of trade division, to Messrs. C. S. Henry & Co. (Ltd.), a copy of which letter, marked "Exhibit A," is attached hereto.

——— (Co.).

Mr. WALSH. Mr. President, the price of copper at the present time is very high and the demand for the commodity is unusually great. There is no action that can be taken by any department of this Government which can improve the copper market, and there is no room for assuming that any action which will be taken can so operate. It would be altogether avaricious on the part of our people to ask that this subject be dealt with in the hope that their pecuniary profits might be enhanced.

I am satisfied, however, Mr. President, that if this communication is referred to the Committee on Foreign Relations it will feel it to be its duty to inquire into the conditions which coerced American shippers into a subjection of that character to a foreign power, and to inquire likewise how far the exacting of such an agreement is consistent with the relations that ought to obtain between this country and a power with which it happily remains at peace.

I ask that the agreement be referred to the Committee on Foreign Relations.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. That order will be made, unless there is objection. The Chair hears none.

EXECUTIVE SESSION.

Mr. STONE. I move that the Senate proceed to the consideration of executive business.

The motion was agreed to, and the Senate proceeded to the consideration of executive business. After ten minutes spent in executive business the doors were reopened and (at 4 o'clock and 3 minutes p. m.) the Senate adjourned until Monday, December 13, 1915, at 12 o'clock meridian.

HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES.

FRIDAY, December 10, 1915.

The House met at 12 o'clock noon.

The Chaplain, Rev. Henry N. Couden, D. D., offered the following prayer:

We bless Thee, our Father in heaven, for the life, work, and sterling character of the several Members who served with distinction on the floor of this House and were chosen by their constituents to represent their interests in the present Congress, but who in the interim have been gathered to their fathers. We mourn their going, and would keep green their memory, and strive to emulate their virtues. Encourage us, their colleagues, many friends, and those to whom they were near and dear by the bonds of love and kinship to look forward with bright anticipations to a reunion where the skies are ever fair, where death nor sorrow never come, but where love, joy, and happiness reign supreme, and we shall praise and magnify Thy holy name through Him who taught us the resurrection and the life immortal. Amen.

CORRECTION OF THE JOURNAL.

The Journal of the proceedings of Tuesday was read.

Mr. MANN. Mr. Speaker, the Journal on Monday shows that my colleague [Mr. GALLAGHER] was present on the call of the roll for the States. The Journal and RECORD show later he was excused on account of illness. I would like to have the correction made, so that when he is sworn in it will——

The SPEAKER. Without objection, the correction will be made.

There was no objection.

Mr. SHACKLEFORD. Mr. Speaker.

The SPEAKER. Does the gentleman want to correct the Journal?

Mr. SHACKLEFORD. I do not know, but I suppose I would. On last Monday I appeared here——

The SPEAKER. Wait until the Journal is approved.

The Journal as amended was agreed to.

SWEARING IN OF MEMBERS.

Mr. SHACKLEFORD. Mr. Speaker, on last Monday I appeared here in answer to my name on the call of the House to see whether a quorum was present. I was suddenly called from the Chamber before the Representatives of my State were called forward to be sworn in, and I desire now to take the oath of office.

The SPEAKER. All gentlemen who are present and who have not been sworn in will come forward and take the oath of office.

Mr. KAHN, Mr. HOWARD, Mr. SHACKLEFORD, Mr. HAMLIN, and Mr. BROWNE of Wisconsin appeared before the bar of the House and took the oath of office.

The SPEAKER. What further does the gentleman from Missouri desire?

Mr. SHACKLEFORD. That is all I want.

The SPEAKER. No; the gentleman started to make some explanation.

Mr. SHACKLEFORD. I said that on last Monday I came here to be sworn in, but was unexpectedly called away on public business and had to go.

CHANGE OF REFERENCE.

By unanimous consent the Committee on Insular Affairs was discharged from the further consideration of House resolution No. 9, concerning the administration of the Philippine Islands, and the same was referred to the Committee on Rules.

The SPEAKER. That is where it belongs; but in the general mix up of 2,000 bills a wrong reference was given to it.

EXTENSION OF REMARKS.

Mr. MOORE of Pennsylvania. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my remarks in the RECORD by incorporating a letter from the Secretary of the Navy to the Atlantic Deeper Waterways Association, together with a resolution of that association, all pertaining to inland waterways and the subject of preparedness.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. MOORE] asks unanimous consent to extend his remarks in the RECORD by printing a letter from the Secretary of the Navy. Is there objection? [After a pause.] The Chair hears none.

COMMITTEE ON INVALID PENSIONS.

Mr. SHERWOOD. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent for the immediate consideration of the resolution which I send to the Clerk's desk.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Ohio asks unanimous consent for immediate consideration of a resolution which the Clerk will report.

The Clerk read as follows:

Resolved, That the Committee on Invalid Pensions be, and is hereby, authorized to have such printing and binding done as may be necessary during the Sixty-fourth Congress for the transaction of its business.

Mr. HAY. Mr. Speaker, I suggest that there has been no committee appointed yet.

Mr. MANN. If the gentleman from Ohio will yield, I wish to state that there will be a lot of those resolutions to come in as soon as the committees are named.

Mr. SHERWOOD. The printing will not be done until the committees are named.

Mr. MANN. Would it not be better to have them all come in at once?

Mr. SHERWOOD. All right. I have no objection, and I withdraw the resolution.

WITHDRAWAL OF PAPERS.

Mr. DAVIS of Minnesota, by unanimous consent, was granted leave to withdraw from the files of the House, without leaving copies, the papers in the case of Charles J. Kayser, H. R. 6174, Fifty-ninth Congress, no adverse report having been made thereon.

Mr. RUBEY, by unanimous consent, was granted leave to withdraw from the files of the House, without leaving copies, the papers in the case of Mary E. Kirk, H. R. 20084, Sixty-third Congress, no adverse report having been made thereon.

LEAVE OF ABSENCE.

Mr. KENT, on request of Mr. LENROOT, by unanimous consent, was granted leave of absence for two weeks, on account of illness.

EXTENSION OF REMARKS.

Mr. STEPHENS of Nebraska. Mr. Speaker——

The SPEAKER. For what purpose does the gentleman from Nebraska rise?

Mr. STEPHENS of Nebraska. To ask unanimous consent to extend my remarks in the RECORD, by printing a speech of ex-Secretary of State Bryan on the European war.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Nebraska [Mr. STEPHENS] asks unanimous consent to extend his remarks in the RECORD by printing a speech by ex-Secretary of State Bryan on the European war. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

Mr. HUMPHREYS of Mississippi. Mr. Speaker——

The SPEAKER. For what purpose does the gentleman rise?

Mr. HUMPHREYS of Mississippi. To ask unanimous consent to extend my remarks in the RECORD by having printed an address delivered a few days ago before the Rivers and Harbors Congress by Col. Townsend, of the Engineer Corps of the Army.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Mississippi asks unanimous consent to extend his remarks in the RECORD by printing a speech delivered by Col. Townsend before the Rivers and Harbors Congress in this city. Is there objection?

Mr. MANN. Reserving the right to object, does the gentleman have any idea of how many of the speeches delivered before the Rivers and Harbors Congress are likely to be printed by Congress at public expense?

Mr. HUMPHREYS of Mississippi. I have no idea at all. Nobody has indicated to me any intention to make any request. This was a very interesting address delivered by Col. Townsend, who is one of the ranking officers of the Engineer Corps, on the general subject of river transportation.

Mr. BARNHART. Will the gentleman yield to me?

The SPEAKER. Will the gentleman from Mississippi yield to the gentleman from Indiana?

Mr. HUMPHREYS of Mississippi. Yes, sir.

Mr. BARNHART. How many addresses were delivered at that Rivers and Harbors Congress?

Mr. HUMPHREYS of Mississippi. Mr. Speaker, unfortunately I was not able to attend the sessions of the congress, therefore I am not in a position to answer the question. I do not know.

Mr. BARNHART. Does this speech purport to cover the general topic of the presentation of the rivers and harbors question?

Mr. HUMPHREYS of Mississippi. It relates to the question of navigation of the rivers of the country in a general way. It is a very interesting address, and gives Col. Townsend's ideas as to why the commerce on the rivers has declined and what steps it would be advisable to take in order to encourage a revival of that commerce.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Mississippi [Mr. HUMPHREYS] to print Col. Townsend's speech in the RECORD? [After a pause.] The Chair hears none.

Mr. BROWNING. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to extend my remarks in the RECORD by printing an address by Wilbur F. Sadler, jr., adjutant general of the State of New Jersey, on the general uses of the National Guard.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from New Jersey [Mr. BROWNING] asks unanimous consent to extend his remarks in the RECORD by printing a speech by the adjutant general of the State of New Jersey on the subject of the National Guard. Is there objection? [After a pause.] The Chair hears none.

CHANGE OF REFERENCE.

Mr. SHERLEY. Mr. Speaker, I desire to ask unanimous consent for a change of reference of the bill H. R. 3077, introduced by the gentleman from California [Mr. RAKER], and which was referred to the Committee on Agriculture, but which should go to the Committee on Appropriations.

The SPEAKER. What is it about?

Mr. SHERLEY. It is a bill relating to the improvement of the Yosemite National Park.

The SPEAKER. Without objection, the change of reference will be made.

There was no objection.

EXTENSION OF REMARKS.

Mr. BAILEY. Mr. Speaker, I wish to renew my request for unanimous consent to extend my remarks in the RECORD on the subject of national defense.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from Pennsylvania asks unanimous consent to extend his remarks in the RECORD on the subject of national defense. Is there objection? [After a pause.] The Chair hears none.

ADJOURNMENT UNTIL TUESDAY NEXT.

Mr. KITCHIN. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that when the House adjourns to-day it adjourn to meet on Tuesday, December 14, at 12 o'clock noon.

The SPEAKER. The gentleman from North Carolina asks unanimous consent that when the House adjourns to-day it adjourn to meet on next Tuesday. Is there objection?

There was no objection.

ADJOURNMENT.

Mr. KITCHIN. Mr. Speaker, I move that the House do now adjourn.

The motion was agreed to; accordingly (at 12 o'clock and 20 minutes p. m.) the House, under its previous order, adjourned until Tuesday, December 14, 1915, at 12 o'clock noon.

EXECUTIVE COMMUNICATIONS, ETC.

SENATE.

MONDAY, December 13, 1915.

The Chaplain, Rev. Forrest J. Prettyman, D. D., offered the following prayer:

Almighty God, we come before Thee with the assurance that we are kept in Thy constant care. We are upon Thy thought. Thou hast not left us without the guide to our conduct and the charter of our liberties. Thou hast spoken to us through Thy law. Thou hast appealed to us through the precious promises of Thy Gospel. Thou dost command us as the great King. Thou dost persuade us with the loving voice of a father.

We bless Thee for Thy constant care. We pray that this day we may come into such unity of purpose with Thyself that we may make Thy will our will and delight to do the will of our Father in Heaven. For Christ's sake. Amen.

The Journal of the proceedings of Friday last was read and approved.

THE UNITED STATES STEEL CORPORATION (S. DOC. NO. 11).

The PRESIDENT pro tempore laid before the Senate a communication from the Interstate Commerce Commission, transmitting, in response to a resolution of February 2, 1914, a report of the investigation by the commission in the matter of alleged rebates to the United States Steel Corporation, which was referred to the Committee on Interstate Commerce and ordered to be printed.

LITTLE KANAWHA RAILROAD CO. (S. DOC. NO. 12).

The PRESIDENT pro tempore laid before the Senate a communication from the Interstate Commerce Commission, transmitting, in response to a resolution of October 7, 1914, a report of the investigation by the commission of the ownership, management, and control of the Little Kanawha Railroad Co., which, with the accompanying papers and illustrations, was referred to the Committee on Interstate Commerce and ordered to be printed.

THE MERCHANT MARINE.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore laid before the Senate a communication from the Assistant Secretary of State, transmitting a copy of a resolution passed October 7, 1915, by the American Association of Japan, Kobe Branch, favoring the amendment or repeal of the so-called seamen's act and the enactment of adequate legislation whereby American ships may traverse the Pacific Ocean on equal terms with those of other nations, which, with the accompanying paper, was referred to the Committee on Commerce.

INTERSTATE COMMERCE COMMISSION (H. DOC. NO. 21).

The PRESIDENT pro tempore laid before the Senate the twenty-ninth annual report of the Interstate Commerce Commission, which was referred to the Committee on Interstate Commerce and ordered to be printed.

PETITIONS AND MEMORIALS.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore presented a concurrent resolution of the Legislature of the Territory of Hawaii, which was referred to the Committee on Territories and ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

Concurrent resolution.

Whereas the free-sugar clause in the existing tariff law, should it become effective, will have an injurious effect on the domestic sugar industry, and particularly that of the Territory of Hawaii: Therefore be it

Resolved by the House of Representatives of the Legislature of the Territory of Hawaii, regular session of 1915 (the Senate concurring), That the Legislature of Hawaii, now in session, favors the revision of the present tariff law and petitions the Congress to so revise such laws as to protect adequately those home industries the products of which are a necessity at all times; and be it further

Resolved, That a copy of this resolution be sent to the President of the United States, the President of the Senate of the United States, the Speaker of the House of Representatives of the United States, and to the Delegate to Congress from Hawaii.

THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
OF THE TERRITORY OF HAWAII,
Honolulu, Hawaii, April 28, 1915.

We hereby certify that the foregoing resolution was finally adopted in the House of Representatives of the Territory of Hawaii on April 28, A. D. 1915.

H. L. HOLSTEIN,
Speaker House of Representatives.
EDWARD WOODWARD,
Clerk House of Representatives.

THE SENATE OF THE TERRITORY OF HAWAII,
Honolulu, Hawaii, April 28, 1915.

We hereby certify that the foregoing resolution was finally adopted in the Senate of the Territory of Hawaii on April 28, A. D. 1915.

CHAS. T. CHILLINGWORTH,
President of the Senate.
CLAUS S. ROBERTS,
Clerk of the Senate.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore presented a concurrent resolution of the Legislature of the Territory of Hawaii, which was referred to the Committee on Territories and ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

Concurrent resolution.

Whereas the Territory of Hawaii, for the material development of its industries and the ready marketing of the products of its small producers, is dependent, to a very considerable extent, upon accurate and speedy mail communication between its several districts; and

Whereas in many of the outlying districts the only method of transportation of products to the markets, by mail, is over the public roads; and

Whereas the revenues and income available for the construction and maintenance of public highways is insufficient to keep such highways in such condition as to be open and passable at all times to the residents of the outlying districts; and

Whereas customs duties, internal-revenue receipts, income-tax receipts, and other methods yield to the Federal Government a large amount yearly from the Territory of Hawaii: Now, therefore, be it

Resolved by the House of Representatives of the Territory of Hawaii, regular session of 1915 (the Senate concurring), That the Congress of the United States is hereby requested and respectfully petitioned to include the Territory of Hawaii within the terms of any existing act, or any act which may in the future be passed, by which the Federal Government aids in the construction and maintenance of roads within the States, to the end that the Territory of Hawaii may secure aid for the construction and maintenance of post roads on the same basis as aid given to the maintenance of such roads in the States, and to the further end that such aid may assist in the material development of the Territory; and be it further

Resolved, That copies of this resolution be forwarded to the President of the United States, the President of the Senate of the United States, the Speaker of the House of Representatives of the United States, and the Delegate to Congress from Hawaii.

THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
OF THE TERRITORY OF HAWAII,
Honolulu, Hawaii, April 23, 1915.

We hereby certify that the foregoing resolution was adopted in the House of Representatives of the Territory of Hawaii on April 23, A. D. 1915.

H. L. HOLSTEIN,
Speaker House of Representatives.
EDWARD WOODWARD,
Clerk House of Representatives.

THE SENATE OF THE TERRITORY OF HAWAII,
Honolulu, Hawaii, April 26, 1915.

We hereby certify that the foregoing resolution was adopted in the Senate of the Territory of Hawaii on April 26, A. D. 1915.

CHAS. T. CHILLINGWORTH,
President of the Senate.
CLAUS L. ROBERTS,
Clerk of the Senate.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore presented a concurrent resolution of the Legislature of the Territory of Hawaii, which was referred to the Committee on Territories and ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

Concurrent resolution to memorialize Congress to provide for the employment of citizen labor on all Federal contracts for public improvements in the Territory of Hawaii.

Whereas the Government of the United States has up to this date awarded many contracts for the construction of important public improvements to persons not citizens nor eligible to become citizens of the United States; and

Whereas there have been and are a large number of persons employed upon said contracts who are not citizens nor eligible to become such to the detriment of those who are citizens of the United States or eligible to become such; and

Whereas the awarding of contracts by the Government of the United States in the future to aliens and those not eligible to become citizens, and the employment of such on said contracts, will be to the detriment of those who are citizens of the United States: Therefore be it

Resolved by the House of Representatives of the Territory of Hawaii, regular session of 1915 (the Senate concurring), That the attention of the Congress of the United States be respectfully called to this condition of affairs and that Congress be respectfully requested to take such steps in the premises as may be necessary to the end that only citizens of the United States, or those eligible to become such, shall hereafter be allowed to contract for, or be employed on, all public improvements or works constructed by the United States in the Territory of Hawaii; and be it further

Resolved, That a copy of this resolution be forwarded to the President of the United States, the Secretary of the Interior, the President of the Senate of the United States, the Speaker of the House of Representatives of the United States, and the Delegate to Congress from Hawaii.

THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
OF THE TERRITORY OF HAWAII,
Honolulu, Hawaii, April 21, 1915.

We hereby certify that the foregoing resolution was adopted in the House of Representatives of the Territory of Hawaii on April 21, A. D. 1915.

H. L. HOLSTEIN,
Speaker House of Representatives.
EDWARD WOODWARD,
Clerk House of Representatives.

THE SENATE OF THE TERRITORY OF HAWAII,
Honolulu, Hawaii, April 24, 1915.

We hereby certify that the foregoing resolution was adopted in the Senate of the Territory of Hawaii on April 24, A. D. 1915.

CHAS. T. CHILLINGWORTH,
President of the Senate.
CLAUS L. ROBERTS,
Clerk of the Senate.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore presented a concurrent resolution of the Legislature of the Territory of Hawaii, which was referred to the Committee on Territories and ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

Resolution.

Whereas on the 25th day of March, A D. 1915, the crew of the United States submarine F-4, while in the performance of their duties in and about Honolulu Harbor, Territory of Hawaii, disappeared in said submarine; and

Whereas said submarine has been located in such a position as to show beyond any question that all of said crew have met the end of their lives while in the performance of their duties; and

Whereas the duties of members of the crew of a submarine are of an extrahazardous nature and members of any such crew are continually, in the performance of their duties, in danger of losing their lives; and

Whereas the members of the crew of said submarine have left surviving them many persons who are dependent on them and their earnings, and that their earnings as such members of said crew were not sufficient to enable them to accumulate property in an amount sufficient to make provision for their survivors; and

Whereas it is uncertain whether, under the existing laws of the United States, survivors of said crew are entitled to receive from the United States any amount whatsoever, and that if said survivors be entitled to receive any amount it would be wholly inadequate to meet their wants and needs: Now, therefore, be it

Resolved, That the House of Representatives of the Territory of Hawaii, regular session of 1915, do hereby recommend and petition the Congress of the United States to enact legislation under and by the terms of which the survivors of the said crew shall either be pensioned or shall be otherwise provided for by liberal appropriations; and be it further

Resolved, That copies of this resolution be forwarded to the President of the United States, the President of the Senate of the United States, the Speaker of the House of Representatives of the United States, the chairman of the Committee on the Territories of the House of Representatives, and to the chairman of the Committee on Pacific Islands and Porto Rico of the Senate.

THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
OF THE TERRITORY OF HAWAII,
Honolulu, Hawaii, April 28, 1915.

We hereby certify that the foregoing resolution was adopted in the House of Representatives of the Territory of Hawaii on April 28, A. D. 1915.

H. L. HOLSTEIN,
Speaker House of Representatives.
EDWARD WOODWARD,
Clerk House of Representatives.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore presented a concurrent resolution of the Legislature of the Territory of Hawaii, which was referred to the Committee on Territories and ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

Concurrent resolution.

Whereas it has been held by the Circuit Court of Appeals of the United States for the Ninth Circuit that act 96 of the Laws of Hawaii for the year 1911, which authorizes the secretary of the Territory of Hawaii, when satisfied that a person was born in the Hawaiian Islands, to issue to the person a certificate showing that fact, which certificate shall be prima facie evidence thereof, can not affect the laws of the United States Congress for the immigration of aliens; and

Whereas many persons born within the Hawaiian Islands have, in reliance upon said act and similar acts, secured certificates of birth in the Hawaiian Islands from territorial officials and have, in the belief that such certificates were sufficient to establish their birth in the Hawaiian Islands, failed to preserve proofs of such birth other than those furnished for securing such certificates; and

Whereas it would work much hardship and injustice upon the persons so securing such certificates to continue to hold that the certificate so issued would not be received as prima facie evidence in courts of the United States, or before the immigration officials of the United States: Now, therefore, be it

Resolved by the House of Representatives of the Territory of Hawaii, regular sessions of 1915 (the Senate concurring), That the Congress of the United States is hereby requested and respectfully petitioned to pass a law under and by the terms of which all certificates of Hawaiian birth, issued in accordance with any law of the Territory, shall be received and admitted in evidence in any proceeding whatsoever, and held and determined in any such proceeding to be prima facie evidence of the facts therein set forth: And be it further

Resolved, That a copy of this resolution be forwarded to the President of the United States, the President of the Senate of the United States, the Speaker of the House of Representatives of the United States, and the Delegate to Congress from Hawaii.

THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
OF THE TERRITORY OF HAWAII,
Honolulu, Hawaii, April 19, 1915.

We hereby certify that the foregoing resolution was adopted in the House of Representatives of the Territory of Hawaii on April 19, A. D. 1915.

H. L. HOLSTEIN,
Speaker House of Representatives.
EDWARD WOODWARD,
Clerk House of Representatives.

THE SENATE OF THE TERRITORY OF HAWAII,
Honolulu, Hawaii, April 24, 1915.

We hereby certify that the foregoing resolution was adopted in the Senate of the Territory of Hawaii on April 24, A. D. 1915.

CHAS. T. CHILLINGWORTH,
President of the Senate.
CLAUS L. ROBERTS,
Clerk of the Senate.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore presented a concurrent resolution of the Legislature of the Territory of Hawaii, which was referred to the Committee on Territories and ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

Concurrent resolution.

Whereas the citizens of Hawaii previous to the annexation of these islands by the United States had established and maintained for more than 50 years an independent national government and thereby demonstrated their capacity for self-government under, and equal responsibilities of, a sovereign State; and

Whereas immediately following the annexation of Hawaii by the United States Congress passed an organic law giving Hawaii the status of a Territory, that has been the traditional stepping-stone to statehood; and

Whereas under this form the citizens of Hawaii have conducted their government in a conservative, patriotic, and able manner, providing liberally in all manner for the development of the highest standards of American citizenship among all classes of the cosmopolitan population; and

Whereas Hawaii, the State, is as certainly the natural and ultimate destiny of these islands as was the annexation by and admission as an integral part of the United States of America; and

Whereas the record of our people of the present day, the evidences of their thrift shown in the wealth per capita, the proofs of their intelligence and ambition as shown by the small percentage of illiteracy among them, are such as to command for them a respect and confidence equaling that accorded the citizens of any State in the Union: Therefore be it

Resolved by the House of Representatives of the Territory of Hawaii, regular session of 1915 (the Senate concurring), That the Congress of the United States is hereby requested and respectfully petitioned to pass an enabling act authorizing the citizens of the Territory of Hawaii to, and naming the date when they shall, elect delegates to a constitutional convention for the purpose of framing a constitution for the government of the State of Hawaii, the same to be in full force and effect when approved by Congress and the President in the manner and form usual to the admission of States; and be it further

Resolved, That a copy of this resolution be forwarded to the President of the United States, the President of the Senate of the United States, the Speaker of the House of Representatives of the United States, and the Delegate to Congress from Hawaii.

THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
OF THE TERRITORY OF HAWAII,
Honolulu, Hawaii, April 26, 1915.

We hereby certify that the foregoing resolution was finally adopted in the House of Representatives of the Territory of Hawaii on April 26, A. D. 1915.

Speaker House of Representatives.
EDWARD WOODWARD,
Clerk House of Representatives.

THE SENATE OF THE TERRITORY OF HAWAII,
Honolulu, Hawaii, April 24, 1915.

We hereby certify that the foregoing resolution was finally adopted in the Senate of the Territory of Hawaii on April 24, A. D. 1915.

CHAS. T. CHILLINGWORTH,
President of the Senate.
CLAUS L. ROBERTS,
Clerk of the Senate.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore presented a concurrent resolution of the Legislature of Alaska congratulating the President and Congress of the United States upon Alaska's period of greater prosperity and extending thanks for their efforts in behalf of the Territory, which was referred to the Committee on the Territories and ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

Concurrent resolution 16.

Whereas Alaska is entering upon a period of greater prosperity, due to its natural resources being now generally known by the people throughout the United States and by the interest taken in the development of the Territory by the President of the United States, Woodrow Wilson, and the Secretary of the Interior, Franklin K. Lane, and the other members of the President's Cabinet: Therefore be it

Resolved by the House of Representatives of the Territory of Alaska (the Senate concurring), That for and in behalf of the people of Alaska we do most heartily congratulate the President and his advisers, the Congress of the United States, and tender them our sincere thanks for their great efforts in behalf of our Territory.

EARNEST B. COLLINS,
Speaker of the House.

BARRY KEOWN,
Chief Clerk of the House.

DAN A. SUTHERLAND,
President of the Senate.

Attest:
ALFRED E. MALTBY,
Secretary of the Senate.

UNITED STATES OF AMERICA, Territory of Alaska, ss:

I, Charles E. Davidson, secretary of Alaska, do hereby certify that the above is a full, true, and correct copy of concurrent resolution No. 16 of the Alaska Territorial Legislature, passed at the second session thereof.

Witness my hand and the seal of the Territory of Alaska, affixed at Juneau, the capital, this 5th day of May, A. D. 1915.

[SEAL.] CHARLES E. DAVIDSON,
Secretary of Alaska.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore presented a concurrent resolution of the Legislature of the State of Nevada, which was referred to the Committee on Mines and Mining and ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

STATE OF NEVADA,
EXECUTIVE DEPARTMENT.

Assembly joint and concurrent resolution 16, memorializing Congress relative to amending United States mining laws.

Whereas under the present United States statutes the locators of all lode mining claims, their heirs or assigns, have "the exclusive right of possession and enjoyment of all the surface included within the lines of their locations, and of all veins, lodes, and ledges throughout their entire depth, the top or apex of which lies inside of such surface lines extended downward vertically, although such veins, lodes, or ledges may so far depart from a perpendicular in their course downward as to extend outside the vertical side lines of such surface location"; and

Whereas geological formations, especially as refers to the breaking, bending, faulting, slipping, and other displacements inherent in lodes or veins are so irregular that it is frequently impossible to positively determine the true top or apex of any given vein; and

Whereas the resultant doubt as to the true apex of a vein has very frequently resulted in litigation destructive to the mining industry, in that it has caused the shutting down of many valuable mines and the enforced idleness of many miners who otherwise would have been working and helping to support the respective communities in which they live; and

Whereas in South Africa, Mexico, and other countries where the apex doctrine does not obtain and the locator of a lode claim, his heirs or assigns, has the exclusive right to only the minerals and metals comprised within the vertical planes formed by the vertical downward projection of all his boundaries, there is an utter absence of such apex or extralateral litigation; and

Whereas metal mining men of all classes, almost without exception, are of the opinion that the adoption of mining laws based on the so-called "square system," as embodied in the laws of the countries above referred to, would eventually correct the troublesome and wasteful litigation herein mentioned and inure to the permanent benefit of all persons interested in any capacity in the metal mining industry: Now, therefore, be it

Resolved by the assembly (the senate concurring), That the State of Nevada does hereby memorialize the Congress of the United States to provide by Federal law that all locations of lode mining claims hereafter made shall be 1,500 feet square (or fraction thereof); that the rights of the locator, his heirs or assigns, shall be confined by the vertical downward projection of his surface boundaries; and that in all grants hereafter made there shall be excluded any grant of extralateral or apex rights; and be it further

Resolved, That copies of this resolution be forthwith transmitted to the President of the United States Senate, to the Speaker of the House of Representatives, to each of our Senators and Representatives in Congress, and to the respective governors of California, Washington, Oregon, Idaho, Utah, Colorado, Montana, Arizona, and New Mexico.

MAURICE J. SULLIVAN,
President of the Senate.
A. L. HAIGHT,
Secretary of the Senate.
A. G. MCBRIDE,
Speaker of the Assembly.
H. R. MACK,
Chief Clerk of the Assembly.

Approved March 25, 1915.

EMMET D. BOYLE, Governor.

STATE OF NEVADA, Department of State, ss:

I, George Brodigan, the duly elected, qualified, and acting secretary of state of the State of Nevada, do hereby certify that the foregoing is a true, full, and correct copy of the original assembly joint and concurrent resolution No. 16, approved March 25, 1915, now on file and of record in this office.

In witness whereof I have hereunto set my hand and affixed the great seal of State, at my office in Carson City, Nev., this 27th day of March, A. D. 1915.

GEO. BRODIGAN,
Secretary of State.
By J. W. LEGATE,
Deputy.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore presented a concurrent resolution of the Legislature of the State of Nevada, which was referred to the Committee on Education and Labor and ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

STATE OF NEVADA,
EXECUTIVE DEPARTMENT.

Senate joint and concurrent resolution No. 10, relative to requesting the Congress of the United States to investigate the causes of unemployment and to adopt remedial measures therefor.

Whereas unemployment is an ever-growing problem of national magnitude, and the several States can not separately and alone adequately solve the questions incident to the unequal distribution of labor; and

Whereas the temperate climatic conditions of the State of Nevada are such as to induce many people from all parts of America to come here during the winter months; and

Whereas many of those who come are in search of employment and erroneously believe it is easy to secure work, thereby making the Nevada employment problem, like that of our sister State of California, particularly acute: Now, therefore, be it

Resolved, That the Senate and Assembly of the State of Nevada hereby jointly request the Congress of the United States to investigate the causes of unemployment and adopt such remedial measures as may be necessary and proper; and be it further

Resolved, That copies of this resolution be forthwith transmitted by the secretary of the senate to the President of the Senate and to the Speaker of the House of Representatives of the United States and to each of our Senators and Representative in Congress.

A. L. HAIGHT,
Secretary of the Senate.
MAURICE J. SULLIVAN,
President of the Senate.
H. R. MACK,
Chief Clerk of the Assembly.
A. G. MCBRIDE,
Speaker of the Assembly.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore presented a resolution signed by each member of the Senate of the State of Arizona, expressing confidence in the "wisdom, integrity, and statesmanship" of the President of the United States to cope with international complications and maintain the honor and dignity of the Nation and pledging to him the support of the people of Arizona, which was referred to the Committee on Foreign Relations and ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

Senate resolution 4.

Whereas there is at this time war and rumors of war affecting the civilized world; and

Whereas the United States of America is at peace with the world and all mankind; and

Whereas the course of our Chief Executive, President Woodrow Wilson, in handling the present international crisis meets our hearty approval: Therefore be it

Resolved, That the Senate of the Second Legislature of the State of Arizona, in special session assembled, hereby expresses its full faith and confidence in the wisdom, integrity, and statesmanship of President Woodrow Wilson to successfully cope with international complications and maintain the honor and dignity of the Nation, and we hereby pledge to him the loyal support of the people of the State of Arizona: Be it further

Resolved, That an enrolled and engrossed copy of this resolution, bearing the signature of each member, be forwarded to the President, Vice President, and Speaker of the House of Representatives.

House joint memorial 2. (By Kribs.)

To the honorable the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States in Congress assembled:

Your memorialists, the Legislature of the State of Idaho, respectfully represent that—

Whereas a considerable portion of the lands within the Yreka mining district, Shoshone County, Idaho, has heretofore, under act or ruling of the Land Office under date of June 7, 1909, been set apart by the Government and designated "agricultural" lands; that within the bounds of said mining district so as aforesaid designated "agricultural" prospectors and miners have for a long period of years heretofore and now are locating and recording mining claims and properties, and have been for many years past, and are now engaged in prospecting and developing mines and mining properties, and have thereby in certain sections of said mining district so as aforesaid designated "agricultural" expended large sums of money for the purpose of the development of mines out of these properties, and have built roads and bridges and constructed highways connecting said properties with the county highways; that in certain parts of this mining district designated as "agricultural," and particularly T. 48 N., R. 2 E., B. M., and adjoining townships thereto, mines have actually and already been developed and opened up; that properties in this vicinity have already been bonded and capitalized for development and mining purposes.

Whereas certain of these mining properties as aforesaid in this mining district designated "agricultural" conflicts with the bounds of certain homesteads located in said district and in such a manner that adjustment between the respective parties interested can not be had by reason of the area claimed by the respective parties, miners and homesteaders, and it is respectfully submitted that unless some action is taken promptly by the Government of the United States looking to the proper classification and segregation of the lands in this mining district designated "agricultural," in manner and form consistent with the needs of the respective parties hereto and interested therein, in said mining district, that great and irreparable injury will be done parties interested in that part of said district:

Your memorialists would further request the amendment of said act or ruling of the Land Office under date of June 7, 1909, in such form and manner that the agricultural lands in said mining district be segregated in such a manner that rights of all parties interested be conserved and protected.

This house joint memorial passed the house of representatives on the 24th day of February, 1915.

Senate joint memorial 1.

Memorial to the Congrses of the United States of America, petitioning the United States Government to appropriate $300,000 for suppressing carnivorous wild animals destructive to live stock in the public-land States of the West.

To the honorable Senate and House of Representatives of the Congress of the United States:

Your memorialists, the governor and Legislature of the State of Arizona, respectfully represent that—

Whereas in the Western States known as the public-land States the losses of live stock and poultry due to the attacks of coyotes, wolves, wild cats, cougars, and bears amount to not less than $18,000,000 annually; and

Whereas in these western public-land States the State, county, and stockmen do now and have for years paid large bounties and used other means to bring about the eradication of these carnivorous wild animals; and

Whereas in these western public-land States there is now withdrawn from settlement in some form or other approximately 225,000,000 acres of Federal land, which land constitutes the principal breeding ground and refuge of these carnivorous wild animals and enables them to increase their numbers, in spite of the efforts made by State, county, and stockmen to exterminate them: Now, therefore, be it

Resolved, That the Legislature of the State of Arizona does hereby most respectfully urge and request that Congress immediately appropriate the sum of $300,000 to be used by the United States Department of Agriculture for the destruction of coyotes, wolves, wild cats, cougars, and bears in these western public-land States in order that the meat supply of the Nation may be increased and the proper development of the West encouraged.

Resolved further, That the secretary of state is hereby instructed to forward a copy of this memorial and this resolution to the President of the Senate of the United States, the Speaker of the House of Representatives, and to the Representatives of Arizona in Congress, and that our Representatives in Congress be, and they are hereby, requested to do all in their power to accomplish the enactment of the legislation herein asked for.

Passed the senate January 14, 1915.

I, Sidney P. Osborn, secretary of state, do hereby certify that the within is a true and complete transcript of senate joint memorial No. 5 of the Second Legislature of the State of Arizona, relating to the Baca Float Grant No. 3, and addressed to the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, as is shown by the original on file in this department.

In witness whereof I have hereunto set my hand and affixed my official seal. Done at Phoenix, the capital, this 12th day of March, A. D. 1915.

SIDNEY P. OSBORN,
Secretary of State.

Senate joint memorial 5.

To the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled:

Your memorialists, the Second Legislature of the State of Arizona, respectfully represent—

Whereas in the year 1863, or thereabout, the Congress of the United States of America did grant to the heirs of one Luis Maria Baca, deceased, certain large tracts of land, to be located upon that public domain anywhere within the area of the Territory of New Mexico, of which Territory the present State of Arizona was then a part; and

Whereas one of the said tracts, embracing 100,000 acres of land, was located within the area that is embraced now within the county of Santa Cruz, State of Arizona, and is known as Baca Float Grant No. 3; and

Whereas no effort was made upon the part of the claimants of said Baca Float Grant No. 3, to complete and perfect their title to said land grant, and the Interior Department always maintained that it was invalid owing to the failure of the claimants to comply with the provisions of the act of Congress granting the same; and

Whereas when, after about 40 years, said claimants applied for confirmation of said grant, the surveyor general of Arizona, to whom the matter had been referred, recommended rejection of said Baca Float Grant No. 3, on the ground of noncompliance with the provisions of the act of Congress aforesaid; and, upon appeal, the Commissioner of the General Land Office and the Secretary of the Interior did so reject said Baca Float Grant No. 3 for the reasons set forth hereinbefore; and

Whereas the Interior Department of the United States, through its general and local land offices, did accept filings of homestead entries upon lands embraced within the area of said Baca Float Grant No. 3, and the entrymen who made said entries located upon said lands in good faith, lived there many years, cultivating and improving them in accordance with law; and

Whereas by a recent decision of the Supreme Court of the United States said Baca Float Grant No. 3 has been declared valid and the homestead entrymen described hereinbefore are subject to ejectment and dispossession of lands they have held and cultivated from 25 to 30 years, to their great loss and damage: Therefore be it

Resolved by the Senate of the Second Legislature of the State of Arizona (the House of Representatives concurring therein), That the Congress of the United States of America be, and is hereby, memorialized to enact such measure of relief to said homestead entrymen occupying lands upon the Baca Float Grant No. 3 whereby they may be granted within the State of Arizona other lands upon the public domain in lieu of those they have occupied heretofore, and that they may be permitted to make final proof by showing the necessary residence and improvement of the lands they have occupied heretofore within the area of Baca Float Grant No. 3: Be it further

Resolved, That the Senators and Representative from Arizona in the Congress of the United States of America are hereby requested to use their best efforts toward the enactment of the necessary legislation for the relief of the homestead entrymen who are affected by the circumstances hereinbefore set forth.

Resolved further, That the secretary of state is hereby instructed to forward certified copies of this memorial to each of the Arizona delegation in Congress.

Passed the house March 9, 1915.
Passed the senate, amended, March 10, 1915.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore presented a joint memorial of the Legislature of Wyoming, which was referred to the Committee on Public Lands and ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

THE STATE OF WYOMING,
OFFICE OF THE SECRETARY OF STATE.

UNITED STATES OF AMERICA, State of Wyoming, ss:

I, Frank L. Houx, secretary of state of the State of Wyoming, do hereby certify that the following copy of enrolled joint memorial No. 3, House of Representatives, Thirteenth Legislature of the State of Wyoming, has been carefully compared with the original, filed in this office on the 25th day of February, A. D. 1915, and is a full, true, and correct copy of the same and of the whole thereof.

In testimony whereof I have hereunto set my hand and affixed the great seal of the State of Wyoming.

Done at Cheyenne, the capital, this 6th day of March, A. D. 1915.

FRANK L. HOUX,
Secretary of State.
By F. H. WESCOTT,
Deputy.

Enrolled joint memorial 3, House of Representatives, State of Wyoming.

Be it enacted by the House of Representatives of the State Legislature of the State of Wyoming (the Senate concurring), That—

Whereas when the original thirteen States of the Union established their independence of the British Government, and established the Government of the United States, each State became the owner of the vacant and unappropriated lands within its borders; and

Whereas when new States were formed out of the territory of such original States and admitted into the Union, such new States became entitled to the vacant and unappropriated lands within their borders; and

Whereas the ownership of the United States lands within the limits of the original States of the Union is based upon cessions made to the Government of the United States by those respective States; and

Whereas subsequently when foreign governments, at divers times, ceded territory to the Government of the United States, the vacant and unappropriated lands within such ceded territory passed to the Government of the United States; and

Whereas when new States were formed out of such ceded territory those States were denied title to the vacant and unappropriated lands within their borders, we believe that an unwise, unjust, and detrimental public-land policy was established by the Federal Government and one which has uniformly and powerfully operated to the retarding of the general welfare of the citizenship and prevention of the development of the resources of every character within the borders of those new States which have struggled under the blighting influence and effect of that selfish, short-sighted, and ruinous public-land policy.

The Federal Government, so far as internal affairs are concerned, viz, the promotion of the general welfare and the establishment of justice throughout the Nation; the economic reasons and public policies which should operate upon the Congress of the United States in doing justice to and promoting the general welfare and accelerating the industrial development of the so-called arid land States of the Union, within whose borders the vastly larger part of the vacant and unappropriated lands, title to which is held by the United States Government, lie, are so patent and powerful and numerous that they need not be recapitulated in this memorial: Therefore,

We, the Senate and House of Representatives of the State of Wyoming, hereby memorialize the Congress of the United States to enact such legislation as will cause the cession of the Government of the United States to the States comprising said Government of all vacant and unappropriated lands title to which is held by the Federal Government to the States respectively within whose borders they lie.

The paramount reasons for this memorial must be transparent to all and to the Congress of the United States if acceptance is given to the primary purpose of the creations; and

We believe that the prayer of this joint memorial will be voiced by all the States affected by the present public-land policy of the United States Government: Be it further

Resolved, That engrossed copies of this memorial and request be sent to the President of the United States, to the President of the United States Senate, to the Speaker of the United States House of Representatives, to the Senators from Wyoming in the Congress of the United States, viz, Hon. CLARENCE D. CLARK and Hon. FRANCIS E. WARREN, and our Representative in said Congress, Hon. FRANK W. MONDELL, asking their aid in bringing the object of this memorial before Congress; and be it further

Resolved, That engrossed copies of this memorial be sent to the governors of each State within whose borders there are still vacant and unappropriated lands, title to which is held by the Federal Government, asking them to place before the legislature of said States this memorial, urge its adoption, and request their cooperation in securing favorable action thereon by the Congress of the United States.

Approved February 24, 1915.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore presented a joint memorial of the Legislature of Oregon, which was referred to the Committee on Fisheries and ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

UNITED STATES OF AMERICA,
STATE OF OREGON,
OFFICE OF THE SECRETARY OF STATE.

I, Ben W. Olcott, secretary of state of the State of Oregon and custodian of the seal of said State, do hereby certify:

That I have carefully compared the annexed copy of senate joint memorial No. 9 with the original thereof filed in the office of the secretary of state of the State of Oregon on the 20th day of February, 1915, and that the same is a full, true, and complete transcript therefrom and of the whole thereof.

In testimony whereof I have hereunto set my hand and affixed hereto the seal of the State of Oregon.

Senate joint memorial 9.

To the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States in Congress assembled:

We, your memorialists, the Legislative Assembly of the State of Oregon, hereby indorse the provisions of Senate bill 4854 now pending in Congress, appropriating the sum of $100,000 for the establishment of two or more fish-culture stations on the Columbia River, or its tributaries in the States of Oregon or Washington, or both, for the propagation of salmon and other food fishes, to make the necessary surveys, purchase sites, construct ponds and buildings, and employ such assistance as may be required, and for the operation of the same.

We most respectfully urge the passage of said bill.

Adopted by the house February 20, 1915.

President of the Senate.

(Indorsed:) Senate joint memorial No. 9, by Senator Bingham. J. W. Cochran, chief clerk. Filed February 20, 1915, at 11 o'clock p. m. Ben W. Olcott, secretary of state, by S. A. Kozer, deputy.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore presented a concurrent resolution of the Legislature of Oklahoma, which was referred to the Committee on Appropriations and ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

House concurrent resolution memorializing the Congress of the United States to appropriate $10,000,000 to build a pipe line from Oklahoma to the Gulf.

Whereas the construction and operation of a pipe line from Oklahoma to the Gulf of Mexico is feasible and borne out by the following facts:

That Oklahoma is the greatest high-grade oil-producing area in existence and is without available marketing and transporting facilities.

That the monopolistic tendency of the Standard Oil Co. to control the pipe line and production has paralyzed the independent producers.

That the said Standard Oil Co., through their pipe lines and monopoly, have from the first discovery of oil in Oklahoma wielded such powerful influence that it has obstructed, prevented, and discouraged every attempt or semblance of competition.

That the independent oil producers and royalty owners must depend upon the interstate pipe line of the Standard Oil Co. to carry their oil products to the market of the world, which places them entirely at the mercy of the czar method of fixing the price of their products.

That it would relieve the Indian wards of the Government, who are robbed under the present system for lack of adequate market for their royalties.

That under the present system the pipe-line companies are crushing the life out of the independent producers in the fact of a world-wide increased demand for both crude and refined oil.

That the Government is a large consumer, both of crude and refined oil, and with a pipe line under present congested conditions would be able to lay up a supply for any emergency that might arise, thereby extending relief to 65 per cent of the oil producers of Oklahoma who are unable to operate their properties during present period.

That the investigation made within the last year by the Secretary of the Interior and the Secretary of the Navy bear voluminous evidence of titanic oil fields in Oklahoma: Be it

Resolved by the House of Representatives of the State of Oklahoma (the Senate concurring), That the Congress of the United States be, and the same is hereby, earnestly memorialized and requested to make an appropriation of $10,000,000 for the building of an oil pipe line to the Gulf of Mexico: Provided, That the money appropriated for this purpose shall be repaid in 10 annual payments from a tax levied on each barrel of oil transported through said pipe line: Be it further

Resolved, That a copy of these resolutions be forwarded at once to the Speaker of the House of Representatives, the President of the Senate, our Representatives in Congress, the Secretary of the Interior, and the Secretary of the United States Navy asking their indorsement.

Adopted by the house of representatives February 26, 1915.

Speaker of the House of Representatives.

Adopted by the senate March 3, 1915.

Concurrent resolution (introduced by Mr. Hjelmstad) memoralizing the Congress of the United States to enact a law prohibiting the sending through the mails into any State where the sale or barter of intoxicating liquors is prohibited by law any advertising matter of any kind or character whatever advertising the sale or barter of intoxicating liquors.

Whereas it is repugnant to the citizens of this State to have such advertising matter forced upon them through the mails and thereby gaining access to the homes; and

Whereas there are now 14 States that have prohibited the sale or barter of intoxicating liquors and are thereby submitted to such repugnance and hardship: Therefore be it

Resolved by the House of Representatives of the State of North Dakota (the Senate concurring), That the Congress of the United States be, and the same is hereby, earnestly memoralized and requested to enact a law prohibiting the sending through the mails into any State that has prohibited the sale and barter of intoxicating liquors any advertising matter of any kind or character whatever advertising the sale or barter of intoxicating liquors: Be it further

Resolved, That a copy of these resolutions, properly certified, be forwarded at once to the Speaker of the House of Representatives and to the President of the Senate of the United States of America.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore presented a concurrent resolution of the Legislature of Louisiana, which was referred to the Committee on Commerce and ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

Senate concurrent resolution 3. (By Dymond.)

Whereas the frequent floods of the Mississippi River, caused by the waters from 31 States, embracing more than 41 per cent of the total area of the United States, have at times resulted in great loss of human lives in portions of the States of Illinois, Tennessee, Kentucky, Mississippi, Missouri, Arkansas, and Louisiana, and large money losses, not only in such afflicted territory, but in other portions of the Nation; and

Whereas it has been declared by every member of the Engineer Corps of the United States Army who has dealt with such floods, by the Mississippi River Commission, and by other commissions appointed by Congress that such floods can be prevented at a reasonable cost; and

Whereas the work of such flood prevention has been going on for many years in the least economical way and over two-thirds of its costs has been borne by the damaged sections, who can no longer cope with this giant problem without effective aid from the National Government; and

Whereas all political parties have declared in their campaign platforms that flood control of the Mississippi River is a national duty: Therefore be it

Resolved by the Senate of the State of Louisiana (the House of Representatives concurring), That the Congress of the United States be, and is hereby, requested to fulfill this national duty at its next session and to enact such legislation as shall provide a separate and comprehensive plan for the prevention of such floods without delay: Be it further

Resolved, That copies of this resolution be sent to the President of the Senate and Speaker of the House of Representatives of the Congress of the United States, and to each Member of the Senate and House of Representatives of this State in Congress.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore presented resolutions of the General Court of the Commonwealth of Massachusetts, which were referred to the Committee on Military Affairs and ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

THE COMMONWEALTH OF MASSACHUSETTS, 1915.

Resolutions relative to the establishment by Congress of a national security commission.

Whereas the horrors of war are apparent to all, and it is our belief that the best way to avert war and to continue in peace is to be thoroughly prepared to defend our national honor; and

Whereas there is now before Congress a bill to provide for a national security commission: Therefore be it

Resolved, That the General Court of Massachusetts, elected for the year 1915, hereby approves the bill now before Congress providing for the establishment of a national security commission.

Resolved, That certified copies of these resolutions be sent by the secretary of the Commonwealth to the President and Vice President of the United States, to the President of the Senate of the United States, to the Speaker of the National House of Representatives, and to each of the Senators and Representatives from Massachusetts in Congress.

In house of representatives, adopted March 9, 1915.

In senate, adopted in concurrence, March 23, 1915.

I, George R. Barker, secretary of state of the State of Idaho, do hereby certify that the annexed is a full, true, and complete transcript of a copy of house joint memorial No. 3, by Magee, which was filed in this office on the 5th day of March, A. D. 1915, and admitted to record.

Passed the house of representatives February 19, 1915.

Passed the senate February 26, 1915.

In testimony whereof I have hereunto set my hand and affixed the great seal of the State. Done at Boise City, the capital of Idaho, this 9th day of March, in the year of our Lord 1915 and of the independence of the United States of America the one hundred and thirty-ninth.

[SEAL.] GEORGE R. BARKER,
Secretary of State.

House joint memorial 3. (By Magee.)

To the honorable the Senators and Representatives of the United States in Congress assembled:

Your memorialists, the Legislature of the State of Idaho, respectfully represent that—

Whereas a bill is now pending in the Senate of the United States, known as S. 6827, relating to the reclamation of arid, semiarid, swamp, and overflow lands through district organizations, and authorizing Government aid therefor;

Whereas we believe that the enactment of such a law would be of great value and benefit to the State of Idaho in aiding in the reclamation of its arid and semiarid land: Now, therefore,

Your memorialists urgently recommend that said bill be enacted into a law at the earliest possible time.

The secretary of state is hereby instructed to forward copies of this memorial to the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States and copies of the same to our Senators and Representatives in Congress.

This house joint memorial passed the house of representatives on the 19th day of February, 1915.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore presented a joint memorial of the Legislature of Montana, which was referred to the Committee on Public Lands and ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

House joint memorial 8. (By Burnett.)

To the honorable Senate and House of Representatives of the United States in Congress assembled:

Your memorialists, the Senate and House of Representatives of the State of Montana, in legislative session assembled, do most respectfully represent and petition—

Whereas in order to secure the exploration and development of coal, oil, and gas resources it is necessary that leases be executed by the State of Montana granting authority to its lessees to explore such coal, oil, and gas resources and to extract the same from its lands and to use so much of the surface as may be necessary therefor, upon the payment of a proper rental or royalty; and

Whereas by the terms of the act of Congress, approved February 22, 1889, providing for the formation of constitutions and State governments for the States of North Dakota, South Dakota, Montana, and Washington, and the admission thereof into the Union, and making donations of public lands to such States, it was provided that the lands so donated and granted may be leased for periods of not more than five years, in quantities not exceeding one section to any one person or company: Now, therefore, be it

Resolved, That the Senate and House of Representatives of the State of Montana do request the Congress of the United States to so amend the aforesaid act of February 22, 1889, as to permit the said several States, including the State of Montana, by its proper officers, to execute leases for the exploration and extraction of the aforesaid minerals which may be contained upon or beneath the surface of any of said granted lands, together with the right to use so much of the surface of said lands as may be necessary therefor, and for such periods of time as may be determined by or under the legislative authority of said States.

Resolved, That a copy of this memorial be forthwith transmitted to the presiding officer of the United States Senate, the Speaker of the House of Representatives, the chairmen of the Senate and House Committees on Public Lands, the Secretary of the Interior, and to each Member of the Montana delegation in Congress.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore presented a concurrent resolution of the Legislature of Iowa which was referred to the Committee on Post Offices and Post Roads and ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

Concurrent resolution.

Be it resolved by the Senate of the General Assembly of the State of Iowa (the House concurring)—

Whereas the glory and prosperity of Iowa has rested not alone in her wonderful farms but also in her prosperous and beautiful cities and towns as well, and the prosperity of her entire citizenship requires a symmetrical development of both farm and city, for the injury of either is sure to bring a loss and depreciation to the other and a decline in the population of the State; and

Whereas the rates of the parcel post are so low for excessive distances and the charge for shipment is in such unjust and unfair proportion to the haul that neither the Government nor the railroads are receiving sufficient compensation to cover cost of service rendered, and a large amount of trade that legitimately belongs to the inhabitants of the State of Iowa is being diverted to the great cities of the land in distant States, and this policy is depriving thousands of our best and brightest young men and women of their birthright by forcing them to emigrate from the State in order that they may have a chance in the world; and

Whereas these great concerns in distant cities do not contribute in any way to the revenues of the State of Iowa, nor do they in any way assist in the education of the youth of our State; they build no roads or bridges and bear none of our many burdens incident to the development of Iowa; and

Whereas they are waxing fat upon the trade they take from our State and are fast developing into great monopolies that bid fair to equal if not excel in size the greatest manufacturing concerns in the land; and

Whereas it is the policy of Iowa to provide work and opportunity for all its children, and we believe the Federal Government, of which we are a part, should not tax the people to reimburse losses in the parcel-post service when these losses are incurred in establishing great monopolies that are fast sapping the life of our cities and towns and depriving our children of a place and opportunity in their own community; and

Whereas thousands of Iowa's citizens have petitioned the General Assembly of the State of Iowa to memorialize the Postmaster General and the Congress of the United States to limit the weight of the parcel-post package to a maximum of 40 pounds and make such readjustment in the postal rates as will eventually make each class self-supporting: Now, therefore, be it

Resolved by the Senate of the General Assembly of the State of Iowa (the House concurring), That the Postmaster General and the Congress of the United States be, and they are hereby, requested and petitioned to reduce the weight of the parcel-post package to a maximum of 40 pounds and make such readjustment in our postal rates and zones as will eventually make each class self-supporting, to the end that justice may be done as between all of the citizens of the United States and that the unjust discrimination that now exists against the State of Iowa may be removed.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore presented a concurrent resolution of the Legislature of Iowa, which was referred to the Committee on the Judiciary and ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

Concurrent resolution recommending an amendment to the Constitution of the United States concerning polygamy.

Whereas it appears from investigation recently made by the Senate of the United States and otherwise that polygamy still exists in certain places in the United States notwithstanding prohibitory statutes enacted by the several States thereof; and

Whereas the practice of polygamy is generally condemned by the people of the United States, and there is a demand for the more effectual prohibition thereof by placing the subject under Federal jurisdiction and control, at the same time reserving to each State the right to make and enforce its own laws relating to marriage and divorce: Now, therefore, be it

Resolved by the house (the senate concurring), That the application be made, and hereby is made, to Congress under the provisions of Article V of the Constitution of the United States to amend the Constitution of the United States whereby polygamy and polygamous cohabitation shall be prohibited, and Congress shall be given power to enforce such prohibition by appropriate legislation.

Resolved, That the legislatures of all other States of the United States, now in session or when next convened, be, and they hereby are, respectfully requested to join in this application by the adoption of this or an equivalent resolution.

Resolved further, That the secretary of state be, and he hereby is, directed to transmit copies of this application to the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States and to the several Members of said bodies representing this State therein, also to transmit copies hereof to the legislatures of all other States of the United States.

House joint memorial 4. (By York, Carratt, and Conner.)

To the honorable the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States in Congress assembled:

Your memorialists, the Legislature of the State of Idaho, respectfully represent that—

Whereas the Federal law now requires that all moneys derived from the sale of timber in any forest reserve located within two States shall be apportioned to each State according as the acreage of said reserve contained therein bears to the whole acreage thereof, thereby giving an unfair advantage to one State over another in the distribution of the receipts of such sales,

We, your memorialists, urgently recommend that the present law be amended so that the proceeds from the sale of timber from a forest reserve located in whole or in part within a State shall be distributed to the county and State within which the timber is cut.

The secretary of the State of Idaho is hereby instructed to forward this memorial to the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States and copies of the same to our Senators and Representatives in Congress immediately upon the passage of the same.

This house joint memorial passed the house of representatives on the 26th day of February, 1915.

GEORGE R. BARKER,
Secretary of State.

Senate joint memorial 7. (By mines and mining committee.)

To the honorable the Senators and Representatives of the United States in Congress assembled:

Your memorialists, the Legislature of the State of Idaho, respectfully represent that—

Whereas the United States Reclamation Service, under the Department of the Interior, is investigating the construction of a reclamation system commonly called the Palouse project, for the reclamation and irrigation of certain lands in Franklin County, State of Washington, and the engineers thereof have reported on the general feasibility of said project;

Whereas the construction of a reservoir, to be known as the Potlatch Reservoir, is a part of said project;

Whereas said Potlatch Reservoir is situate wholly in Latah County, State of Idaho, in a well-settled, prosperous section of said county, and its construction would destroy many homes and be of immense detriment to the people of said community;

Whereas the feasibility of the entire project is open to grave question, as evidenced by the fact that the engineers who made the reconnoissance and field surveys reported adversely thereon; and

Whereas by locating a reservoir as contemplated and planned, which said reservoir would be very irregular in shape, with long arms running a long way up a number of creeks and valleys, it would necessitate moving and relocating the railroad and wagon roads, which are now very direct and on water grades, making them very circuitous and hilly, adding greatly to the distance and difficulty of travel and greatly enhancing future cost of maintenance for all time; and

Whereas the location of such reservoir and the consequent added distance and difficulty and inconvenience of travel by wagon road or railroad would make inaccessible thousands of acres of land which would not be actually flooded or even very near to the inundated area; and

Whereas all land adjacent or contiguous to said proposed reservoir site would be greatly depreciated in value in a measure for which there would not and perhaps could not be any adequate recompense or damage awarded; and

Whereas Latah County and north Idaho would be greatly retarded in its development for years to come by the location of a reservoir as contemplated; and

Whereas thousands of acres of some of the most fertile and productive land in north Idaho or in the West would be flooded, while a much larger area than that actually covered by water would be rendered absolutely useless by reason of the water cutting it off into islands, small capes, peninsulas, and narrow strips back of sloughs and arms of the reservoir; and

Whereas three beautiful, prosperous, and growing towns would be inundated; and

Whereas families, friends, and relatives would be separated; and

Whereas hundreds of residents of Idaho and thousands of dollars' worth of property would be indirectly damaged for which there would be no adequate recompense; and

Whereas the location of such a reservoir would necessitate the premature cutting of millions of feet of small, immature timber, in the face of adverse market conditions, thereby reducing the income to resident laborers of Idaho; and

Whereas the erection of a flimsy, rock-filled dam as contemplated, with which to hold in check the run-off of an area of 210 square miles (estimated at 120,000 acre-feet), would endanger the lives of hundreds of our people and be a constant menace to millions of dollars' worth of Idaho property, besides threatening a number of towns in Washington; and

Whereas the fact that the water in this reservoir would be entirely drawn off during the summer season, leaving mud banks and stagnant sloughs, would convert what is now one of the beauty spots of the West into a source of disease and a breeding ground for insects; and

Whereas those familiar with the facts are unanimous in the opinion that all estimates of damages and the cost of settlement thereof as made by the engineers and backers of this project are grossly inadequate and underestimated; and

Whereas several hundred thousand dollars' worth of property would be entirely removed from the tax rolls, and property of much greater value would be so depreciated by reason of its isolation and inaccessibility as to seriously reduce its assessable value, so that Latah County and the State of Idaho would lose a large income from taxation each year if this reservoir were located as contemplated: Therefore be it

Resolved, That we earnestly pray and urge that the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States refuse to make any appropriation for the construction of the Palouse project, so far as it requires the construction of a reservoir on the Palouse River, in Latah County, Idaho; and we further urge that the Department of the Interior refuse further aid or support to said project, in so far as it affects said lands in the State of Idaho.

The secretary of state of the State of Idaho is hereby instructed to forward this memorial to the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States, and copies thereof to the Secretary of the Interior and our Senators and Representatives in Congress immediately upon the passage of the same.

This senate joint memorial passed the senate on the 26th day of February, 1915.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore presented a concurrent resolution of the Legislature of the Territory of Alaska, which was referred to the Committee on Territories and ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

House joint memorial 13.

To the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled:

Your memorialists, the Legislative Assembly of the Territory of Alaska, respectfully represent—

That the act of Congress creating the Legislature of the Territory of Alaska provides that the authority therein granted to the legislature to alter, modify, amend, and repeal laws in force in Alaska shall not extend to the laws relating to the game and fur-bearing animals;

That the said laws relating to the game and fur-bearing animals prohibits the killing of brown bear south of latitude 62° from July 1 to September 30; and that there should be no restrictions on killing brown bear in Alaska at any season of the year, as the said brown bear are a menace to life and property, and instead of being protected should have a bounty placed upon each brown bear killed;

That the laws relating to the protection of fur-bearing animals should be subject to amendment by the Territorial legislature, and also that the protection of game in Alaska should be directly under the control of the Territorial legislature as recommended by the governor of the Territory in his report to the Secretary of the Interior for the year 1914:

Wherefore the Legislative Assembly of the Territory of Alaska does hereby respectfully and earnestly petition the Congress of the United States that the laws in Alaska relating to game and fur-bearing animals be placed directly under the control of the Territorial legislature.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore presented a joint resolution of the Legislature of Wisconsin, which was referred to the Committee on Commerce and ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

Joint resolution. (Introduced by joint committee on finance.)

A resolution by the Legislature of the State of Wisconsin to the Congress of the United States asking Congress "to enact legislation as shall provide a separate and comprehensive plan" for the prevention of floods in the Mississippi Valley.

Whereas the frequent floods of the Mississippi River, caused by waters from 31 States, embracing more than 41 per cent of the total area of the United States, result in great loss of human lives in portions of the States of Illinois, Tennessee, Kentucky, Mississippi, Missouri, Arkansas, and Louisiana, and large money losses, not only in such afflicted territory but in other portions of the Nation; and

Whereas it has been declared by every member of the Engineer Corps of the United States Army who has dealt with such floods, by the Mississippi River Commission, and by other commissions appointed by Congress that such floods can be prevented at a reasonable cost; and

Whereas the work of such flood prevention has been going on for many years in the least economical way, and over two-thirds of its cost has been borne by the damaged sections, who can no longer cope with this giant problem without effective aid from the National Government; and

Whereas all political parties have declared in their campaign platforms that flood control of the Mississippi River is a national duty: Therefore be it

Resolved by the Legislature of the State of Wisconsin, That the Congress of the United States be, and is hereby, requested to fulfill this national duty at its next session and to enact such legislation as shall provide a separate and comprehensive plan for the prevention of such floods without delay: Be it further

Resolved, That copies of this resolution be sent to the Speaker of the House of Representatives and to the President of the Senate of the Congress of the United States.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore presented a joint resolution of the Legislature of Wisconsin, which was referred to the Committee on Military Affairs and ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

Joint resolution relating to a new hotel to be erected in the Shiloh National Military Park, at Pittsburg Landing, Tenn.

Whereas it has come to the notice of the Legislature of the State of Wisconsin that a measure is pending before the Congress of the United States to appropriate a sum of money to build a modest but adequate hotel in the Shiloh National Military Park, at Pittsburg Landing, Tenn., to replace the one burned on the night of December 23, 1913, since which time the park has been without hotel accommodations, which has caused no end of inconvenience to visitors and curtailed attendance; and

Whereas the State of Wisconsin, having erected a monument to the memory of the Fourteenth, Sixteenth, and Eighteenth Regiments of Wisconsin Volunteers in said Shiloh National Military Park, is therefore desirous that as large a number of visitors as possible should see said park; and

Whereas the lack of hotel accommodations will materially prevent many visitors from visiting this historic battle field; and

Whereas the Shiloh National Military Park Commissioners have in their annual report for 1914 asked for the erection of such a modest but adequate hotel, and have a special bill for the appropriation of money for that purpose pending before the Congress of the United States, and known as "Bill for rebuilding the Shiloh National Park Hotel," and in charge of Senator LEA of Tennessee: It is therefore

Resolved by the Senate (the Assembly concurring), That the Legislature of the State of Wisconsin respectfully ask the Congress of the United States to enact such a measure as will enable the Shiloh National Military Park Commission to erect, within the park limits, a modest but adequate hotel: And further

Resolved, That a copy of this resolution be transmitted by the secretary of state to the Senate of the United States and to the House of Representatives of the United States, and to each of the Senators and Representatives from this State.

CHAPTER —.

Senate joint resolution No. 5, relative to memorializing the Congress of the United States to initiate proceedings therein for the submission to the several States of an amendment to the Constitution of the United States giving Congress power to enact a uniform divorce law.

Whereas the diversity in the laws of the various States of this Union relating to divorce has been the cause of abuses which have done much to weaken the confidence of the people in the administration of justice; and

Whereas the American Bar Association and the leading members of the legal profession in various States and prominent jurists and publicists have, after extensive investigation of conditions, repeatedly urged the pressing necessity for uniformity in divorce legislation; and

Whereas there appears to be no effective way in which such uniformity can be secured other than by action by the Congress of the United States; and

Whereas under the Constitution of the United States as it now exists Congress has no power to establish uniform laws on the subject of divorce: Now, therefore, be it

Resolved by the Senate and Assembly of the State of California jointly, That the Legislature of the State of California memorialize the Congress of the United States to initiate proceedings therein for the submission to the several States of an amendment to the Constitution of the United States giving Congress power to establish uniform laws on the subject of divorce throughout the United States; and be it further

Resolved, That the governor of the State of California be, and he is hereby, requested to transmit duly authenticated copies of this memorial to the President of the United States, to the President of the United States Senate, to the Speaker of the House of Representatives, and to each Member in the Senate and House of Representatives from the State of California.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore presented a joint memorial of the Legislature of Arizona, which was referred to the Committee on Public Lands and ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

To the Senate and House of Representatives of Congress of the United States of America in Congress assembled:

Your memorialists, the Second Legislature of the State of Arizona, in regular session convened, respectfully represent—

That during the years of 1908 and 1909 the then Indian agent of the Colorado River Indian Reservation, under authority of the Department of the Interior, granted numerous permits to persons to settle upon certain lots in the Parker town site, Yuma County, Ariz.;

That an appraisement was made of the lots of said town site under the direction of the Department of the Interior during the year 1909, and the persons occupying lots under permits granted by the department were given a preference right to purchase said lots;

That about 90 days thereafter a second appraisement of all lots in the Parker town site, including those occupied by permittees, was ordered by the Department of the Interior and the valuation was raised from 300 to 600 per cent above the figures set forth in the first appraisement. That this raise in appraised values was made because of the fact that the town site of Parker is within a short distance of the allotted Indian land on the Colorado River Indian Reservation, the surplus area of which was planned by the Department of the Interior to be opened to purchase and settlement at an early date;

That the said permittees occupying lots upon the Parker town site have paid to the United States under the valuation of town lots under the second appraisement the sum of $24,562;

That on May 10, 1910, the authorities of the United States held an auction sale of lots within the Parker town site and $56,698 worth of said lots were sold to residents of Parker and other investors. That $37,623 have been paid to the United States for lots purchased at said auction sale and there is still owing to the United States upon said sales the sum of $19,075;

That immediately prior to the auction sale of town-site lots in Parker Congress passed an act as follows:

"For the construction of a pumping plant to be used for irrigation purposes on the Colorado River Reservation, together with the necessary canals and laterals for the utilization of water in connection therewith, for the purpose of securing an appropriation of water for the irrigation of approximately 150,000 acres of land, $50,000, to be reimbursed from the sale of the surplus lands of the reservation."

That the above act was in effect a representation by the United States that the surplus land of the Colorado River Indian Reservation was soon to be opened to settlement and entry by bona fide settlers. That the lots put for sale at said surplus lands would be opened to settlement at an early date. That the enormous increase in the valuation of lots in the Parker town site by the second appraisement above referred to was only justified by the carrying out of the implied promise contained in the above act that the surplus lands of the Colorado River Indian Reservation would be open to settlement;

That the town site of Parker is on a barren desert, on land having an intrinsic value of less than $1 an acre; that whatever added value it may have arises from the fact that it is adjacent to the bottom lands of the Colorado River Indian Reservation, in which the surplus lands above referred to lie, and unless said lands are opened to settlement and entry the town site of Parker is worth little or no more than any other desert land;

That the residents of Parker and numerous other residents of the State of Arizona interested therein, who were induced to purchase lots in the Parker town site by reason of the implied promise of the United States above set forth to open the reservation lands to entry, have repeatedly petitioned Congress and the Department of the Interior for the opening of said surplus lands;

That said purchasers of lots in Parker have further evidenced their reliance upon said implied promise of the United States to open said lands by investing large sums of money in buildings and improvements in said town of Parker, all of which will be worthless unless the said lands are opened to settlement;

That the allotments of land to the Indians belonging on said reservation have been approved by the Department of the Interior, and the surplus land, amounting to approximately 125,000 acres, which might be open to entry, is segregated;

That to the best knowledge and belief of your memorialists, there exists a sufficient flow of underground water for the irrigation and reclamation of the surplus lands;

That the surplus Indian lands above described are highly desirable as prospective farms and hundreds of energetic and enterprising citizens of this State alone are awaiting the opportunity to secure tracts of land for the purpose of making their homes thereon; that to the best knowledge and belief of your memoralists a large amount of the delay in opening the surplus lands of said reservation to settlement in accordance with the said implied promise of the United States has been caused by the unnecessary entanglements of official red tape in the various bureaus at Washington having charge of reclamation work and Indian affairs;

That another reason which has been assigned for the delay in opening said lands for settlement is the fact that people having large cattle interests have leased certain of the lands involved and have been exerting their influence to delay the opening of said lands for settlement: Therefore be it

Resolved by the Senate and the House of Representatives of the Legislature of the State of Arizona, That the Congress of the United States be, and it is hereby, urged to enact any legislation which may be necessary for the opening for settlement of said lands, to the end that the implied promise of the United States made to the settlers and purchasers of lots within the Parker town site, to the effect that Indian lands within the Indian reservation would be opened for settlement, be carried out.

Resolved further, That a copy of this memorial and these resolutions be forwarded to the President of the United States, the President of the Senate, the Speaker of the House of Representatives, the Secretary of the Interior, and to the Representatives of Arizona in Congress, and that our Representatives in Congress be, and they are hereby, requested to do all in their power to accomplish the enactment of such legislation.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore presented a joint memorial of the Legislature of Arizona, which was referred to the Committee on Public Lands and ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

Senate joint memorial.

To the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled:

Your memorialists, the Second Legislature of the State of Arizona, in session convened, respectfully represent—

Whereas the Grand Canyon of the Colorado is one of the most wonderful sights in the world and is annually attracting and receiving the attention of an increasing number of the citizens of the United States and tourists; and

Whereas there is a good road extending from Grand Canyon Station to the Hermit Trail, which road is known as the Hermit Rim Road and is adapted to the use of automobiles and motor-driven vehicles; and

Whereas by an order of the honorable Secretary of Agriculture, which order your memorialists are informed was issued at the instigation of a railway company, the said road, 7½ miles long, is closed to automobiles or motor-driven vehicles and can be used only by horse-drawn vehicles; and

Whereas the said railway company maintains a livery equipment for the purpose of hauling tourists over this road at $3 each, and such order is a distinct annoyance to the traveling and local automobilists: Now, therefore, be it

Resolved, That the Congress of the United States be requested to investigate the facts herein set forth, and if same are found to be correct to have the said order rescinded;

Resolved, That a copy of this memorial be sent to the President of the Senate, the Speaker of the House of Representatives, the honorable Secretary of Agriculture, and to the Members of Congress from this State, and the latter are requested to use every honorable means to secure favorable action thereon.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore presented a joint memorial of the Legislature of Montana, which was referred to the Committee on Agriculture and Forestry and ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

House joint memorial 6. (Introduced by Hills.)

A memorial to the honorable Senate and House of Representatives of the United States in Congress assembled, requesting the passage of House bill No. 15219, being a bill for an act to further the economic use of forests and forest lands and the training of forestry students in collegiate institutions that are or may be aided by States in which are Federal forest reserves.

To the honorable Senate and House of Representatives of the United States in Congress assembled:

Whereas there has been introduced and is pending in the House of Representatives of the United States House bill No. 15219 (introduced by Representative French, being a bill for an act to further the economic use of forests and forest lands and the training of forestry students in collegiate institutions that are or may be aided by States in which there are Federal forest reserves by providing for an annual appropriation of 5 per cent (not to exceed $15,000 to one State) of the receipts of the forest areas in the respective States for the endowment of the forest school to be designated by the State legislature, or previous to such designation by the governor of the State; and

Whereas in the State of Montana, with her large Federal forest areas, the immediate benefit of forestry schools supported by that State accrues largely to the Government of the United States in technical and practical training of forest officials and employees and in the development and protection of national forest areas; and

Whereas it is only just that a proportion of the cost of maintaining such school should be borne by the beneficiaries thereof:

Now, therefore, the honorable Senate and House of Representatives of the United States in Congress assembled is hereby respectively memorialized and petitioned by the Senate and House of Representatives of the Legislative Assembly of the State of Montana, duly assembled, to enact into law the above-designated bill; and be it further

Resolved, That the secretary of the State of Montana be, and he is hereby, directed to transmit to the Speaker of the House of Representatives and President of the Senate of the United States and to the Senators and Representatives from the State of Montana in Congress, severally, copies of this memorial.

GEORGE L. RAMSEY,
Speaker of the House.
J. E. EDWARDS,
President of the Senate pro tempore.

UNITED STATES OF AMERICA, State of Montana:

I, A. M. Alderson, secretary of state of the State of Montana, do hereby certify that the above is a true and correct copy of house joint memorial No. 6, relating to the passage of House bill 15219, an act to further the economic use of forests and forest lands and the training of forestry students in institutions that are or may be aided by States in which are located Federal forest reserves, enacted by the fourteenth session of the Legislative Assembly of the State of Montana and approved by S. V. Stewart, governor of said State, on the 26th day of February, 1915.

In testimony whereof I have hereunto set my hand and affixed the great seal of said State.

Done at the city of Helena, the capital of said State, this 1st day of March, A. D. 1915.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore presented a resolution of the Senate of the State of Michigan, which was referred to the Committee on Commerce and ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

LANSING, MICH., March 4, 1915.

Hon. THOMAS R. MARSHALL,
Vice President, Washington, D. C.

SIR: By direction of the Senate, I have the honor to inform you that the Legislature of Michigan has adopted the following:

"Whereas the frequent floods of the Mississippi River caused by waters from 31 States, embracing more than 41 per cent of the total area of the United States, result in great loss of human lives in portions of the States of Illinois, Tennessee, Kentucky, Mississippi, Missouri, Arkansas, and Louisiana, and large money losses, not only in such afflicted territory but in other portions of the Nation; and

"Whereas it has been declared by every member of the Engineer Corps of the United States Army who has dealt with such floods, by the Mississippi River Commission, and by other commissions appointed by Congress that such floods can be prevented at reasonable cost; and

"Whereas the work of such flood prevention has been going on for many years in the least economical way and over two-thirds of its cost has been borne by the damaged sections who can no longer cope with this giant problem without effective aid from the National Government; and

"Whereas all political parties have declared in their campaign platforms that flood control of the Mississippi River is a national duty: Therefore be it

"Resolved by the senate (the house of representatives concurring), That the Congress of the United States be, and is hereby, requested to fulfill this national duty at its next session and to enact such legislation as shall provide a separate and comprehensive plan for the prevention of such floods without delay; and be it further

"Resolved, That copies of this resolution be sent to the Speaker of the House of Representatives, to the President of the Senate of the Congress of the United States, and to each Member of the Senate and House of Representatives of this State in Congress."

Very respectfully,

DENNIS E. ALWARD,
Secretary of the Senate.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore presented a concurrent resolution of the Legislature of the Territory of Hawaii, which was referred to the Committee on Territories and ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

Concurrent resolution requesting the Congress of the United States to provide for the establishment of United States life-saving stations at Honolulu and Hilo and other places in the Territory of Hawaii.

Whereas there is a large amount of shipping at both Honolulu and Hilo, in the Hawaiian Islands, and by reason thereof and the fish and other industries carried on by water transportation a large number of the inhabitants of the Hawaiian Islands are exposed to the hazards of the sea; and

Whereas that on account of the lack of proper facilities for the protection of those engaged in sea transportation a great number of lives have in the past been sacrificed in the waters surrounding the harbors of Honolulu and Hilo; and

Whereas there is urgent need for the establishment of United States life-saving stations at said two harbors: Now, therefore, be it

Resolved by the Senate of the Territory of Hawaii, session of 1915 (the House of Representatives concurring), That the Congress of the United States be, and it hereby is, petitioned and asked to pass such legislation as may be necessary to equip and establish United States life-saving stations at Honolulu, on the island of Oahu, and at Hilo, on the island of Hawaii, and at such other place or places within the Territory of Hawaii as may be designated by the Federal authorities; and be it further

Resolved, That a certified copy of this resolution be sent to the Secretary of the Treasury, to the President of the Senate of the United States, the Speaker of the House of Representatives of the United States, and to Hon. J. K. KALANIANAOLE, Delegate to Congress from the Territory of Hawaii.

THE SENATE OF THE TERRITORY OF HAWAII,
Honolulu, Hawaii, March 26, 1915.

We hereby certify that the foregoing resolution was this day adopted in the Senate of the Territory of Hawaii.

THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
OF THE TERRITORY OF HAWAII,
Honolulu, Hawaii, April 1, 1915.

We hereby certify that the foregoing resolution was this day adopted in the House of Representatives of the Territory of Hawaii.

H. L. HOLSTEIN,
Speaker House of Representatives.
EDWARD WOODWARD,
Clerk House of Representatives.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore presented a concurrent resolution of the Legislature of the Territory of Hawaii, which was referred to the Committee on Territories and ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

Concurrent resolution.

Whereas the Congress of the United States, by the act entitled "An act to provide for cooperative agricultural extension work between the agricultural colleges in the several States receiving the benefits of an act of Congress approved July 2, 1862, and of acts supplementary thereto, and the United States Department of Agriculture," approved May 8, 1914, and commonly known as the Smith-Lever law, has appropriated $10,000 for the first fiscal year, together with subsequent yearly additions thereto, to each State where such a college exists, for the purposes of extension work in agriculture and home economics; and

Whereas the Territory of Hawaii has an agricultural college receiving the benefits of the acts supplementary to the act of Congress approved July 2, 1862, and the cost and difficulty of travel between the several islands of the Territory of Hawaii make peculiarly desirable the extension of the services of said college to the widely scattered communities and individuals within the Territory; and

Whereas the language of the said Smith-Lever Act limits the benefits thereof to the several States, and by implication excludes the Territory of Hawaii: Therefore be it

Resolved by the Senate of the Territory of Hawaii (the House of Representatives concurring), That the Congress of the United States be requested to so amend said Smith-Lever Act as to allow the Territory of Hawaii, through the College of Hawaii, to benefit therefrom in the same manner and to the same extent as the several States; and be it further

Resolved, That copies of this resolution be sent to the President and Vice President of the United States, the Speaker of the House of Representatives, and to the Delegate to the Congress from Hawaii.

THE SENATE OF THE TERRITORY OF HAWAII,
Honolulu, Hawaii, April 27, 1915.

We hereby certify that the foregoing resolution was this day adopted in the Senate of the Territory of Hawaii.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore presented a joint memorial of the Alaska Territorial Legislature, which was referred to the Committee on Territories and ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

House joint memorial 7–A.

To the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled:

Your memorialists, the Legislature of the Territory of Alaska, do most respectfully represent that—

Whereas the native population of Alaska—Indians, Eskimos, and Aleuts—has decreased 14.5 per cent during the period 1900 to 1910, according to reports of the United States census, and this decrease is largely due to diseases which prevail to an alarming extent among them; and

Whereas the Indians of the States have for years received adequate medical relief from the Government, while the natives of Alaska have not been provided for in this respect; and

Whereas the eradication of these diseases, not only for the preservation of the native races, but the protection of the white population, is desired and essential, especially at this time, when heavy immigration into the Territory is anticipated, due to the activities in connection with the construction of the proposed Government railroad and developments in other industries:

Resolved by the Legislature of the Territory of Alaska, That we respectfully and earnestly petition the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America, in Congress assembled, to appropriate the sum of at least $125,000 for the establishment of well-equipped hospitals in each division of the Territory, and thus provide a medical service for the natives of Alaska somewhat similar to the relief furnished to Indians of other sections of the United States; and be it lastly

Resolved, That a copy hereof be sent to the honorable Secretary of the Interior, President of the United States Senate, to the Speaker of the United States House of Representatives, and the Hon. JAMES WICKERSHAM, Delegate to Congress from Alaska.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore presented a joint memorial of the Alaska Territorial Legislature, which was referred to the Committee on Territories and ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

House joint memorial 21.

To the President and the honorable Senate and House of Representatives in Congress assembled:

We, your memorialists, the Legislature of the Territory of Alaska, do most respectfully and earnestly represent that—

Whereas Seward Peninsula, which has increased the world's production of gold over $70,000,000, is without adequate means of transportation from its seaports to the interior through the suspension of the operation of the Seward Peninsula Railroad, the only road to the interior of the peninsula; and

Whereas it is impossible to mine the enormous low-grade placer gold deposits of the Kougarok and interior of said peninsula without cheaper transportation facilities:

Now, therefore, we, your memorialists, respectfully ask that the Senate and House of Representatives in Congress assembled will appropriate sufficient funds or direct the expenditure of any unused portion of the $55,000,000 now appropriated for railroad construction in Alaska for the purpose of providing railroad transportation facilities from tidewater of Bering Sea to the town of Taylor, Kougarok mining district, which is the center of the interior mining section of said peninsula.

Be it resolved, That a copy of this memorial be sent to the Senate and House of Representatives of the Congress of the United States, to the honorable Secretary of the Interior, Franklin K. Lane, and to the Hon. JAMES WICKERSHAM, Delegate from Alaska to the House of Representatives.

House joint memorial 5.

To the Congress of the United States of America:

The Legislature of the Territory of Alaska respectfully represents that—

Whereas it is desirable that surveys be made by the Government of the native villages in Alaska in order that the claim of each householder or of the head of each family in said villages be clearly defined, marked, and recorded; and

Whereas such determination of individual ownership would be an important step toward the civilization of the Alaskan natives: Therefore

The Legislature of the Territory of Alaska in legislative session assembled respectfully urges upon the United States Congress the need for the enactment of such legislation as will render possible segregation surveys of native villages in Alaska whenever such action is advisable.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore presented a joint memorial of the Alaska Territorial Legislature, which was referred to the Committee on Territories and ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

House joint memorial 4.

To the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled:

Your memorialists, the Legislative Assembly of the Territory of Alaska, respectfully represent—

That the act of Congress approved May 14, 1898, entitled "An act extending the homestead laws, etc., to Alaska," and the act of Congress amendatory thereof approved March 3, 1903 (30 U. S. Stat., 409, and 32 U. S. Stat., 1028, respectively), provide, inter alia, that between homestead, soldiers' additional homestead, and trade and manufacturing site surveys abutting on navigable waters a shore space of 80 rods, direct measurement, must be reserved from entry.

That in practical operation the intent of said provision of law (which was to prevent monopolization of shore fronts on navigable waters) is largely nullified, to the advantage of corporations, companies, associations, and individuals.

That although theoretically it prevents the monopolization of shore frontage, in reality it does not. While it is true that it does prevent a monopolization by title, it does not as to occupancy and use by adjoining claimants when it is to their interest to exercise control of the same.

That by such provision of law a single claimant may obtain practical control of as extensive a shore frontage as may be desired at a trifling expense by procuring title to small tracts at lawful intervals by scripping them with soldiers' additional homestead scrip, no occupancy of or improvements being required in connection with such claim. By such means it is feasible not only to obtain practical control of extensive water frontage, but to debar others from establishing homesteads, canneries, or other enterprises within the limits that a single claimant wishes to control: Therefore be it

Resolved by the Legislative Assembly of the Territory of Alaska, That we respectfully and earnestly petition your honorable body to repeal the aforesaid act in so far as it relates to reserve spaces along the shores of navigable waters and substitute instead easements for all classes of valid claims and rights of way, of whatsoever sort, along said navigable waters and as far inland as conditions may require, the easements to include wagon roads, railroads (both steam and electric), telegraph, telephone, and electric power lines, pipe lines, flumes, tunnels, ditches, etc. The easements should also provide for the crossing over or under other previous rights of way for any purpose, but in such manner as not to obstruct or interfere with the proper operation of such intercepted right of way: Be it further

Resolved, That a copy of this memorial be sent to the President of the United States, the President of the United States Senate, the Speaker of the United States House of Representatives, the chairman of the Committee on Public Lands of the United States Senate, the chairman of the Committee on Public Lands of the House of Representatives, the honorable JAMES WICKERSHAM, Delegate to Congress from Alaska, and the Commissioner of the General Land Office.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore presented a joint memorial of the Alaska Territorial Legislature, which was referred to the Committee on Territories and ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

Senate joint memorial 14.

To His Excellency the President and the honorable the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States in Congress assembled:

Your memorialists, the Legislature of the Territory of Alaska in second regular session assembled, do most respectfully and earnestly represent that—

Whereas communication by water between the Pacific coast ports of Seattle, Tacoma, and San Francisco and seaports on the southeastern and southwestern coast of Alaska is not interrupted during the entire year, and many large steamers ply the waters between these ports; and

Whereas communication between Juneau and the towns of Tenakee, Hoonah, Killisnoo, and Sitka by steamers and gasoline launches is continuous during the entire year; and

Whereas communication between the towns of Ketchikan and Wrangell and the towns of Shakan, Craig, Tokeen, Sulzer, and many other important towns on the west coast of Prince of Wales Island is also continuous throughout the entire year; and

Whereas the building of railroads by the Government will cause many thousands of people to establish their residence in the towns of Seward, Valdez, Cordova, and other towns in southwestern Alaska; and

Whereas the parcel-post system of zones does not at the present time apply to the Territory of Alaska, and the residents thereof suffer great hardships by reason of having to pay a flat rate on all parcels shipped from the Territory to the States and also on all parcels shipped to points within the Territory; and

Whereas should a system of zones be extended to the parts of the Territory where communication by water is not interrupted at any time of the year with a distributing point at Juneau, the capital, whence zones shall radiate to other points above mentioned; the towns of Douglas, which is 3 miles distant from Juneau; Treadwell, 3½ miles; Thane, 4 miles, would be within the first zone; and the towns of Haines, which is 86 miles distant from Juneau; Skagway, 106 miles; Petersburg, 120 miles; and Wrangell, 136 miles, would be included in the second zone; and the town of Yakutat, which is 250 miles distant from Juneau, would be in the third zone; the towns of Katalla and Cordova would be within the fourth zone; the towns of Valdez and Seward within the fifth zone; the towns of Kodiak, Seldovia, and Knik would be in the sixth zone, with a rate per pound on parcels mailed thereto and therefrom as prescribed for similar zones within the United States; and

Whereas at the present time the rate of postage on parcels mailed from Juneau to any of the above points is 12 cents per pound, regardless of distance: Therefore

We, your memorialists, would respectfully suggest that the system of zones as applied to the parcel-post system within the United States be established in the parts of this Territory where communication by water is continuous throughout the entire year, with a distributing point at Juneau;

And we, your memorialists, will ever pray.

House joint memorial 5.

To the honorable the President of the United States of America, to the honorable Senate and House of Representatives of the United States, and the honorable Secretary of the Interior:

We, your memorialists, the Senate and House of Representatives of the State of Washington, in legislative session assembled (14th regular session), respectfully represent and pray as follows:

Whereas the United States by and through its Commissioner of Indian Affairs and the Department of the Interior, made and entered into an agreement on the 1st day of December, in the year 1905, with the Colvilles and other tribes of Indians for payment to them for lands ceded in the "north half" of the Colville Indian Reserve, now situate in Ferry and Okanogan Counties, this State; and providing for allotments to them in the "south half," or diminished Colville Indian Reserve, and for the classification, sale, and settlement of the residue or unallotted lands therein, at prices and terms set forth in said agreement, the proceeds thereof to be paid to the Indians; and

Whereas it is provided in said agreement, in article 2 thereof, as follows:

"Article 2. After the lands within the said diminished reservation have been surveyed and allotments to the Indians entitled thereto, as provided in article 1 of this agreement, the residue of surplus lands—that is, the lands not allotted—of the said diminished reservation shall be classified, under the direction of the Secretary of the Interior, as irrigable lands, grazing lands, timber lands, mineral lands, or arid lands, and shall be appraised under their appropriate classes by legal subdivisions, with the exception of the lands classed as mineral lands, which need not be appraised but shall be subject to location and disposal under the mineral-land laws of the United States, and upon completion and classification and appraisement the lands shall be opened to settlement and entry at not less than their appraised value by proclamation of the President, which proclamation shall prescribe the manner in which these lands shall be settled upon, occupied, and entered by persons entitled to make entry thereof: Provided, That the price of said lands when entered shall be fixed by the appraisement herein provided for, which shall be in accordance with rules and regulations to be prescribed by the Secretary of the Interior, upon the following terms: One-fifth of the purchase price to be paid in cash at the time of entry and the balance in five equal annual installments, to be paid in one, two, three, four, and five years, respectively, from and after the date of entry, and in case any entryman fails to make the annual payments, or any of them, promptly when due, all rights in and to the land covered by his or her entry shall cease and any payments theretofore made shall be forfeited and the entry canceled, and the land shall be reoffered for sale and entry: Provided further, That the lands remaining undisposed of at the expiration of five years from the opening of the said lands to entry shall be sold to the highest bidder for cash, at not less than $1 per acre, under rules and regulations to be prescribed by the Secretary of the Interior, and that any lands remaining unsold 10 years after said lands shall have been opened to entry may be sold to the highest bidder for cash without regard to the above minimum limit of price; that lands disposed of under the town-site and mineral-land laws shall be paid for at the prices provided for by law, and the United States agrees to pay to said Indians the proceeds derived from the sales of said lands, and also pay the said Indians, parties hereto, the sum of $1,500,000 for the lands vacated and opened to settlement by the act of July 1, 1892, which amounts, together with the proceeds derived from the sales of the surplus lands of the said diminished reservation, shall be paid to and expended for said Indians in the manner hereinafter provided." (Doc. No. 332, 59th Cong., 1st sess., p. 11.) And

Whereas the Congress of the United States has passed an act entitled "An act to authorize the sale and disposition of surplus or unalloted lands of the diminished Colville Indian Reservation, in the State of Washington, and for other purposes," approved March 22, 1906 (34 Stat. L., pt. 1, p. 80); and

Whereas said act was drafted by the Commissioner of Indian Affairs in ratification of said agreement, and said act ratified and confirmed the provision of the aforesaid agreement and in particular provided for the classification, sale, and settlement of the surplus or unalloted land, in accordance with the terms and conditions set forth in article 2 of the aforesaid agreement; and by section 11 of said act it was further provided, the Secretary of the Interior may reserve from said lands such tracts for town-site purposes, as in his opinion may be required for future public interests, and may withhold such lands as may be included in any feasible irrigation project to be disposed of under the reclamation act of June 17, 1902; and

Whereas there is about 2,500 Indians found to be entitled to allotments in said reservation, and the field work in connection with the setting aside of said allotments was completed during the year last past; and

Whereas the field work in connection with the appraisement of the residue lands was also completed during the year last past; and

Whereas the residue lands should now be opened for sale and settlement as provided in the said agreement and said act of Congress of March 22, 1906; and

Whereas said reservation includes an area of approximately 1,500,000 acres, and is of varied resources, consisting of mineral, timber, agricultural, horticultural, and grazing lands, and is a very material and important section of our State, and the settlement of the remaining or unallotted lands as provided in said agreement, and the said act would mean an improved and producing and prosperous section of our State, adding its wealth and prosperity to the State and Nation; and

Whereas justice to the people of this State demands the speedy opening of the residue lands to sale and settlement as provided by the aforesaid agreement and the aforesaid act of Congress; and the people of a local community can best be trusted to decide what is for their best interests and for policy which will best subserve the public interests: Therefore

We most earnestly and respectfully ask that the said "south half," or diminished Colville Indian Reservation, be opened to sale and settlement without further delay and as speedily as possible and in accordance with the terms and conditions of the aforesaid agreement of December 1, 1905, and the said act of Congress of March 22, 1906.

The secretary of state is hereby directed to immediately transmit a certified copy of this memorial to the Honorable President of the United States of America, to the President of the Senate, and Speaker of the House of Representatives, to the Honorable Secretary of the Interior, and to each of the Senators and Representatives from this State.

D., 297) held that the provisions of sections 18 to 21, inclusive, of the act of March 3, 1891, granting rights of way through the public lands for canals, ditches, and reservoirs have no application to lands within the District of Alaska, while in the case of the Alaska Treadwell Gold Mining Co. et al. (40 L. D., 426) it was held that section 4 of the act of February 1, 1905, granting rights of way for dams, reservoirs, water plants, ditches, flumes, pipes, tunnels and canals, within and across the national forests of the United States, is applicable to and is operative in forest reserves in the District of Alaska; the acts of Congress of February 15, 1901 (31 Stat., 790), and March 4, 1911 (36 Stat., 1253), provide, among other things, for rights of way through the public lands, forests, and other reservations of the United States, and in certain national parks, for electrical plants, poles, and lines for the generation and distribution of electrical power, and for telephone and telegraph purposes, and for canals, ditches, pipe and pipe lines, flumes, tunnels and other conduits, and for water plants, dams, and reservoirs used to promote irrigation, mining, or quarrying; and the Secretary of the Interior, on August 24, 1912, and January 6, 1913, has provided rules and regulations governing such rights of way, under the provisions of said acts, but it is not stated whether these acts shall apply to public lands in the Territory of Alaska; and while it has never been directly held that the provisions of these acts do not apply, it is a fact that a number of applications have been filed under these provisions, but they have never been allowed, and, if the law as construed in the Miocene Ditch Co. case, supra, is adhered to, it follows as a natural consequence that the provisions of said acts do not apply to public lands in Alaska. We, therefore, have the anomalous situation of a transmission line passing over lands in Alaska partly within a national forest and partly over adjoining public lands, being unable to receive a franchise for its entire line, a result which, it is believed, was not contemplated when the laws were enacted; and

Whereas there are throughout the Territory of Alaska a large number of available and undeveloped power projects which can be developed and utilized as the demand for such industries increase—a number of small projects are now developed to a limited extent and are operating and furnishing light and power to settlements in the Territory, but all of those located on lands outside of forest reserves have no title or right under the law to use such lands, although they have expended in some cases large amounts of money in their development—this condition is intolerable and should not be allowed to continue, because it prevents capital from investing and retards the development of not only the available power projects but of other natural resources in the Territory.

We therefore most respectfully urge your honorable body to pass a suitable law or laws providing for rights of way over all public lands, both reserved and unreserved, for electrical plants, poles, and lines for the generation and distribution of electrical power, and for telephone and telegraph purposes, and for canals, ditches, pipes and pipe lines, flumes, tunnels, or other water conduits, and for water plants, dams, and reservoirs used to promote irrigation, mining, or quarrying or the manufacture or cutting of timber for lumber, or the supplying of water for domestic, public, or any other beneficial use, with suitable safeguards against monopoly and with such provisions as will result in the natural resources being developed in the interest of all the people; and be it further

Resolved, That a copy hereof be sent to the President of the United States; the President of the United States Senate; the Speaker of the United States House of Representatives; the chairman of the Committee on Public Lands of the United States Senate; the chairman of the Committee on Public Lands of the United States House of Representatives; the Hon. JAMES WICKERSHAM, Delegate to Congress from Alaska, and the Secretary of the Interior.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore presented a joint memorial of the Alaska Territorial Legislature, which was referred to the Committee on Territories and ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

House joint memorial 24.

To the honorable the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States in Congress assembled:

Your memorialists, the Senate and the House of Representatives in the Territory of Alaska, respectfully represent that—

Whereas the city of Fairbanks, in the Territory of Alaska, is situated in the center of a great placer and quartz mining district; and

Whereas the agricultural possibilities of the great valley through which the Tanana and Yukon Rivers flow are just being recognized and becoming known to the people; and

Whereas it has been decided by the people of the city of Fairbanks that in the year 1917 in celebration of the 50 years of the Territory of Alaska as a part of the United States, a great exposition is to be held to be known as the "Alaska Semicentennial Exposition"; and

Whereas it is purposed to advertise said semicentennial exposition most widely throughout the United States and elsewhere; and

Whereas the said exposition will be of great benefit to the entire Territory of Alaska and particularly to the Tanana and Yukon River Valleys by way of bringing people from all parts of the world to the "Golden Heart" of the Territory, thus exhibiting to them the great possibilities in mining, agriculture, and other industries; and

Whereas the Hon. JAMES WICKERSHAM, Delegate to Congress from Alaska, has introduced into the House of Representatives of the United States a bill providing for an appropriation to assist in defraying the expenses of the said Alaska Semicentennial Exposition.

Now, therefore, your memorialists most respectfully pray that you will be pleased to consider and act favorable upon the appropriation for said Alaska Semicentennial Exposition as asked for by the said Delegate to the House of Representatives from Alaska.

Be it resolved, That a copy hereof be transmitted to the President of the Senate of the United States; to the Speaker of the House of Representatives; to the Hon. JAMES WICKERSHAM, Delegate to the House of Representatives; to the honorable the Secretary of the Interior; and to the honorable the Secretary of Commerce of the United States.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore presented a joint memorial of the Alaska Territorial Legislature, which was referred to the Committee on Territories and ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

Senate joint memorial 16.

To His Excellency, the President, and the honorable the Congress of the United States:

We, your memorialists, the Legislature of the Territory of Alaska, in second regular session assembled, do most respectfully and earnestly represent that—

Whereas certain restrictions placed in the organic act of the Territory of Alaska whereby its legislative power is limited in the regulation of its fisheries; and

Whereas the yearly value of our fisheries exceeds that of any Territorial industry; and

Whereas the conservation of our fisheries is the most important matter affecting the welfare and prosperity of Alaska; and

Whereas we believe that laws to regulate the fisheries can be best enacted by the people who are most directly interested in the protection of this great natural food supply:

Now, therefore, we, your memorialists, do pray that the restrictions in our organic act be removed and that full control and regulation of our fisheries be granted to the Territorial Legislature of Alaska, and your memorialists would also request that no law be enacted by the Congress of the United States whereby right or title be granted to any fish-trap site in Alaskan waters, or whereby any survey of such sites shall have the authorization of Congress.

And your memorialists will ever pray.

Whereas many of the small towns in this Territory are without banks or banking facilities of any kind; and

Whereas the Postal Savings Bank System, if extended to Alaska, would prove of great benefit not only to the smaller towns but to the residents of the entire Territory: Therefore,

We, your memorialists, would respectfully request and petition His Excellency the President and the honorable the Congress of the United States that the operation of the system of postal savings banks be extended to include the Territory of Alaska.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore presented a joint memorial of the Alaska Territorial Legislature, which was referred to the Committee on Territories and ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

Senate joint memorial 2.

To his Excellency the President and the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States:

Your memorialists, the Legislature of the Territory of Alaska, in second regular session assembled, do most respectfully and earnestly represent—

That the citizenship of Alaska are a law-abiding people and fully capable of adjusting their own affairs through their representative body. Under the organic act creating a legislative assembly in the Territory of Alaska, to confer legislative power thereon, and for other purposes, we, the people of Alaska, did not have the powers of legislation through the above-mentioned enabling act that all other Territorial people of the United States have enjoyed.

We therefore pray for the fuller rights conferred upon the people of other Territories by the several acts of Congress pertaining thereto. In other words, we most earnestly pray that Congress amend the Alaska Territorial enabling act to the end that the people of Alaska, through their representatives, may have the power to enact laws as fully as the people of the Territories of New Mexico, Arizona, Nevada, Montana, and Oklahoma, and many other Territories in the United States have enjoyed, and that of Porto Rico and the Philippines have, of the outlying Territories.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore presented a joint memorial of the Alaska Territorial Legislature, which was referred to the Committee on Territories and ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

House joint memorial 12.

To the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled:

Your memorialists, the Legislative Assembly of the Territory of Alaska, respectfully represent that the act of Congress approved April 24, 1912, entitled "An act to create a Legislative Assembly in the Territory of Alaska, to confer legislative power thereon, and for other purposes," provides that the authority therein granted to the legislature to alter, amend, modify, and repeal laws in force in Alaska shall not extend to * * * "An act to provide for the construction and maintenance of roads, the establishment and maintenance of schools, and the care and support of insane persons in the District of Alaska, and for other purposes" (34 Stat. L., 192); and

Whereas the public schools established and maintained under the said act of Congress are the public schools in Alaska for the education of white children and children of mixed blood who lead a civilized life, residing outside of incorporated towns in the Territory; and

Whereas said schools are wholly supported from moneys derived from taxes on business and trade in the Territory, and disbursed through the "Alaska fund" in the United States Treasury (34 Stat. L., 192; 35 Stat. L., 601; and act approved March 3, 1913), which said "Alaska fund" is entirely without the control of this legislature; and

Whereas the welfare of the public schools, both within and outside the incorporated towns of the Territory, imperatively requires that they be coordinated and placed under one general system; and

Whereas it is to the best interests of the Territory of Alaska that the moneys composing the said "Alaska fund" be paid into the treasury of the Territory of Alaska and disbursed under the direction of the Territorial legislature, as it of right ought to be: Therefore be it

Resolved by the Legislative Assembly of the Territory of Alaska, That we do hereby earnestly and respectfully petition the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America, in Congress assembled, that the Legislature of the Territory of Alaska be given jurisdiction over the schools above referred to; that the Legislature of the Territory of Alaska be given authority to alter, amend, modify, and repeal the laws providing for taxes on business and trades in the Territory; and that the moneys composing the said "Alaska fund" be paid by the clerks of the district courts into the treasury of the Territory of Alaska, to be disbursed under the direction of the Territorial legislature; and be it further

The PRESIDENT pro tempore presented a joint memorial of the Alaska Territorial Legislature, which was referred to the Committee on Territories and ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

House joint resolution 10.

To the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled:

Your memorialists, the Legislature of the Territory of Alaska, do most respectfully and earnestly represent that—

Whereas the town of Nome, Alaska, is the leading seaport of northwestern Alaska, and has a population of approximately 2,500 people; that it is the seaport and metropolis of a country which during the last 15 years has produced approximately $80,000,000 in gold and promises to continue the augmentation of the gold reserve of the United States for many years in the future; and

Whereas Nome is situated on a low shore at a shallow beach, exposed to fierce storms, which have frequently caused the destruction of the various wharves, warehouses, and buildings situated on its water front, and necessary to its shipping facilities; and

Whereas for the protection of the city and its industries it is necessary that a breakwater be erected on the seaward side of approximately 4,000 feet of its water front; and

Whereas the cost of erecting such a breakwater would be more than the city can expend out of its own resources, or should be required to so expend:

Now, therefore, your memorialists earnestly and respectfully petition your honorable bodies that ample appropriation be made from the United States Treasury for the erection of the necessary breakwater to protect the town of Nome against the waves of Behring Sea.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore presented a joint memorial of the Legislature of Utah, which was referred to the Committee on Indian Affairs and ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

House joint memorial 3.

A memorial to the Congress of the United States of America petitioning the United States Government to make a part of the Ashley National Forest certain lands formerly within the Uintah Indian Reservation.

To the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States in Congress assembled:

Your memorialists, the governor and the Legislature of the State of Utah, respectfully represent that—

Whereas certain lands located in Wasatch, Duchesne, and Uintah Counties, in the State of Utah, and formerly within the boundaries of the Uintah Reservation, are now held and set apart as Indian grazing lands; and

Whereas said lands are now patroled by Indian police, whose actions in the handling of cattle owned by residents of said counties continually cause the said residents serious inconvenience and much damage:

Now, therefore, the governor and the Legislature of the State of Utah respectfully petition that the said lands so set apart as Indian grazing lands be made a part of the Ashley National Forest and placed under the control of the Forest Service.

Approved March 16, 1915.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore presented a joint memorial of the Legislature of Utah, which was referred to the Committee on Forest Reservations and the Protection of Game and ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

Senate joint memorial No. 5, relating to the destruction of certain wild animals.

To the honorable Senate and House of Representatives of the Congress of the United States:

Your memorialists, the governor and the Legislature of the State of Utah, respectfully represent that—

Whereas in the Western States, known as the public-land States, the losses of live stock and poultry due to the attacks of coyotes, wolves, wild cats, cougars, and bears amount to not less than $15,000,000 annually; and

Whereas in these western public-land States the State, county, and stockmen do now and have for years paid large bounties and used other means to bring about the eradication of these carnivorous wild animals; and

Whereas in these western public-land States there is now withdrawn from settlement in some form or other approximately 225,000,000 acres of Federal land, which land constitutes the principal breeding ground and refuge of these carnivorous wild animals and enables them to increase their numbers in spite of the efforts made by State, county, and stockmen to exterminate them: Now, therefore, be it

Resolved, That the Legislature of the State of Utah does hereby most respectfully urge and request that Congress immediately appropriate the sum of $300,000, to be used by the United States Department of Agriculture for the destruction of coyotes, wolves, wildcats, cougars, and bears in these western public-land States in order that the meat supply of the Nation may be increased and the proper development of the West encouraged.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore presented a joint memorial of the Legislature of Utah, which was referred to the Committee on Mines and Mining and ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

Senate joint memorial 1.

A petition for the enactment by the Congress of the United States of House bill No. 15869, introduced by Mr. FOSTER.

To the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States in Congress assembled:

Your memorialists, the governor and the Legislature of the State of Utah, respectfully represent that—

Whereas there is now pending in Congress H. R. 15869, introduced by Mr. FOSTER, entitled "A bill to provide for the establishment and maintenance of mining-experiment and mine-safety stations for making investigations and disseminating information among employees in mining, quarrying, metallurgical, and other mineral industries, and for other purposes"; and

Whereas the purpose of this bill is "to improve conditions in the mining, quarrying, metallurgical, and other mineral industries, safeguarding life among employees, preventing unnecessary waste of resources, and otherwise contributing to the advancement of these industries"; and

Whereas this proposed legislation will be of very great importance to Utah and to all other mining States by reason of advancing mine-safety education and mine-rescue work, and also by reason of making commercially valuable large bodies of low-grade ore which can not now be worked for want of suitable processes; and

Whereas the mining industry has hitherto not received from the Federal Government the recognition and aid that its importance deserves, and has therefore been deprived of the encouragement which has proved so wise and beneficial in the case of agriculture; and

Whereas this bill will broaden the scope of the United States Bureau of Mines and will enable it to undertake much-needed work in the behalf of the metalliferous mining instead of being practically restricted to coal mining, as heretofore; and

Whereas these enlarged activities of the Bureau of Mines are confidently expected to result in incalculable public benefit, not only to the mining States, but to the entire Nation:

Therefore we, the governor and Legislature of the State of Utah, respectfully memorialize and urge the Congress of the United States to enact the pending Foster bill into law.

Approved March 6, 1915.

In testimony whereof I have hereunto set my hand and affixed the great seal of the State of Utah this 21st day of June, A. D. 1915.

[SEAL.] DAVID MATTSON,
Secretary of State.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore presented a joint memorial of the Legislature of Utah, which was referred to the Committee on Public Lands and ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

Senate joint memorial 4.

A memorial asking for a more liberal national policy in the disposition of the public domain and urging that the natural resources of the State of Utah be made available for development.

To the President of the United States and to the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States in Congress assembled:

Those who own their homes constitute the strength and power of our Government and the hope and promise of the Republic.

We believe that the vestment of property rights through the operation of liberal policies in the disposition of the public lands has been fundamentally responsible for the growth and development in the United States, which is without parallel in the world's history.

The soil has yielded our greatest wealth, and the farms have contributed loyal citizens, whose substantial enduring patriotism is the bulwark of the Nation.

Rejoicing in the growth and development, the power and prestige of the older States of the Union, and recognizing that their advancement was made possible through the beneficient operation of a wise and most generous public-land policy on the part of the Government, the people of Utah view with alarm and apprehension the national tendency toward the curtailment of the former liberal policies in handling the public domain and disposing of the natural resources, as evidenced in the vast land withdrawals and the pending legislation, calculated to make our coal, our mineral, and our water-power resources chattels for Government exploitation through a system of leasing.

In harmony with the spirit and letter of the land grants to the National Government, in perpetuation of a policy that has done more to promote the general welfare than any other policy in our national life, and in conformity with the terms of our enabling act, we, the members of the Legislature of the State of Utah, memorialize the President and the Congress of the United States for the speedy return to the former liberal national attitude toward the public domain, and we call attention to the fact that the burden of State and local government in Utah is borne by the taxation of less than one-third the lands of the State, which alone is vested in private or corporate ownership, and we hereby earnestly urge a policy that will afford an opportunity to settle our lands and make use of our resources on terms of equality with the older States, to the benefit and upbuilding of the State and to the strength of the Nation.

Resolved, That copies of this memorial be engrossed and forwarded, one each to the President, the Senate, and House of Representatives, and to Utah's congressional delegation with request that they use every legitimate effort to promote the objects of said memorial.

Approved March 15, 1915.

Senate concurrent resolution 5. (By Senator Kluge.)

That the grant of the Grand Junction School heretofore made to the State of Colorado by the United States for educational purposes be enlarged so as to include charitable and other purposes.

Whereas, by section 5 of chapter 140, approved April 4, 1910, the Sixty-first Congress of the United States of America did grant to the State of Colorado the property known as the Grand Junction School, including the lands, buildings, and fixtures pertaining to said school, provided that said lands and buildings should be held and maintained by the State of Colorado as an institution of learning, and that Indian pupils should at all times be admitted to such school free of charge of tuition and on terms of equality with white pupils; and

Whereas the governor of the State of Colorado did duly file an acceptance of said grant with the Secretary of the Interior in accordance with the terms and conditions of said grant, and the said school has been under the control of the State of Colorado since said acceptance; and

Whereas the State of Colorado has now five separate institutions of learning that are in active operation in different parts of the State, and the needs of which, financially, are constantly increasing; and

Whereas the State of Colorado has only one asylum for the insane, being the insane asylum located at Pueblo, Colo., and said asylum is now greatly overcrowded and there is not room for the insane patients of the State; and

Whereas costs and charges for transporting patients from that part of Colorado west of the Continental Divide to the said insane asylum are excessive and constitute an undue burden upon the people of the western slope of Colorado; and

Whereas the said the Grand Junction Indian School is centrally located on the said western slope so as to accommodate patients from that portion of the State: Now, therefore, be it

Resolved by the senate of the twentieth general assembly (and the house of representatives thereof concurring), That the Congress of the United States be, and it is hereby, requested to enlarge the grant heretofore made by it to the State of Colorado of said the Grand Junction School so as to vest the title thereto in the State of Colorado, and to provide that the same may be used for such purposes as the General Assembly of Colorado may provide. Be it further

Resolved, That duly certified copies of this resolution be forwarded to the Speaker of the House of Representatives of the United States and to the President of the Senate of the United States and to the Secretary of the Interior, and that this resolution be entered of record of the twentieth general assembly; and be it further

Resolved, That copies of this resolution be forwarded to the Representatives of Colorado in the Congress of the United States.

Approved April 9, 1915, 11.50 a. m.

MOSES E. LEWIS,
President of the Senate.
PHILIP B. STEWART,
Speaker of the House.
GEORGE A. CARLSON,
Governor of the State of Colorado.

(Indorsed:) Filed in the office of the secretary of state of the State of Colorado on the 9th day of April, A. D. 1915, at 2.35 o'clock p. m.

JOHN E. RAMER,
Secretary of State.
By GEORGE M. WILLIAMS,
Deputy.

Filing clerk, A. S. D.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore presented memorials of sundry citizens of Massachusetts and the memorial of Dr. Josephine Walker, of New York, N. Y., remonstrating against the exclusion from the mails of publications alleged to reflect upon forms of religion, which were referred to the Committee on Post Offices and Post Roads.

He also presented a petition of the International Stereotypers and Electrotypers' Local Union, of Boston, Mass., praying that an appropriation be made for the purchase of Mount Vernon and that it be opened to the people free of admission, which was referred to the Committee on the Library.

He also presented a petition of the Agricultural Congress, of Manila, P. I., praying for the enactment of legislation to permit the issuance of bonds for agricultural purposes in the Philippine Islands, which was referred to the Committee on the Philippines.

He also presented a memorial of Local Union No. 1124, United Mine Workers of America, of Dekoven, Ky., remonstrating against the alleged persecution of J. R. Lawson, David Robb, Ben Richardson, Louis Zancanelli, and other miners in Colorado by the authorities of that State, which was referred to the Committee on Education and Labor.

He also presented a petition of the Illinois State Court of the Catholic Order of Foresters, of Chicago, Ill., praying for the enactment of legislation to provide for the retirement of civil-service employees, which was referred to the Committee on Civil Service and Retrenchment.

He also presented petitions of the National Security League, of Chicago, Ill., and the Woman's Section of the Navy League of the United States, of Washington, D. C., praying for an increase in armaments, which were referred to the Committee on Military Affairs.

He also presented a petition adopted at the biennial encampment of the Army and Navy Union of the United States, held in Atlantic City, N. J., praying for an advance in rank of certain retired officers of the Navy, which was referred to the Committee on Naval Affairs.

He also presented the petition of Rev. Clarence Walworth Backus, of Kansas City, Kans., praying for the enactment of legislation to provide for the retirement of volunteer officers of the Civil War, which was referred to the Committee on Military Affairs.

He also presented a petition of the Chamber of Commerce, of Philadelphia, Pa., praying for the repeal of the so-called seamen's law, which was referred to the Committee on Commerce.

He also presented petitions of the Business Woman's Civic Club, of Los Angeles, of the California Federation of Woman's Clubs, of Los Angeles, in the State of California, and of Post Office Clerks' Union No. 1, of Chicago, Ill., and of sundry citizens of Bay City, Mich., praying for the printing of the findings of the Commission on Industrial Relations, which were referred to the Committee on Education and Labor.

He also presented a memorial of the West End Citizens' Association, of Washington, D. C., remonstrating against prohibition in the District of Columbia without a referendum of the citizens thereof, which was referred to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

He also presented a petition of the International Stereotypers and Electrytypers' Local Union, of Washington, D. C., praying for suffrage in the District of Columbia, which was referred to the Committee on the District of Columbia.

He also presented petitions of the Mississippi Valley Conference on Tuberculosis, held at Indianapolis, Ind.; the Massachusetts Antituberculosis League, of Boston, Mass.; the Southern Antituberculosis Conference, held at Columbia, S. C.; and the North Atlantic Conference on Tuberculosis, held at Albany, N. Y., praying for the creation of a commission to determine the etiological factors involved in the prevention of tuberculosis, which were referred to the Committee on Public Health and National Quarantine.

He also presented a petition of the National Association of Vicksburg Veterans, of Chicago, Ill., praying for recognition of the proposed National Memorial and Peace Jubilee of Union and Confederate Civil War Veterans, which was referred to the Committee on Military Affairs.

He also presented resolution of the Woman's Wilson-Marshall League, of Seattle, Wash., indorsing the conduct and management of the duties of his office by President Wilson and favoring his reelection to the Presidency of the United States, which were referred to the Committee on Privileges and Elections.

He also presented a petition of sundry citizens of Boston, Mass., praying that the United States protest against the official declaration by Italy of a blockade of the whole Albanian coast and asking the sympathy and cooperation of the United States in behalf of the Albanian people, which was referred to the Committee on Foreign Relations.

He also presented a petition from the governor and sundry other citizens of Oregon, praying for the disposition of the Oregon-California grant lands and remonstrating against the further increase of forest reserves in that State, which was referred to the Committee on Public Lands.

Mr. NELSON presented a petition of sundry citizens of Big Falls, Minn., praying for the Government manufacture of munitions of war, which was referred to the Committee on Military Affairs.

He also presented a petition of the Pharmaceutical Association of Winona, Minn., praying for the enactment of legislation to fix a standard price for patented and trade-marked articles, which was referred to the Committee on Education and Labor.

Mr. STERLING presented a concurrent resolution of the Legislature of South Dakota, which was referred to the Committee on Commerce and ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

Concurrent resolution.

Be it resolved by the Senate of the State of South Dakota (the House of Representatives concurring):

Whereas there is now under construction a great national highway leading from New York to Seattle and to San Francisco, which is being built as a memorial to Gen. Washington; and

Whereas many hundreds of miles of this highway have already been constructed at a cost of millions of dollars to the people of the localities through which it passes; and

Whereas a point on the Missouri River at the site of old Fort Randall, in the State of South Dakota, has been selected by the engineers in charge of this great enterprise as the most feasible point for crossing the Missouri River by this national highway: Therefore

Resolved, That the Congress of the United States be, and it hereby is, earnestly petitioned to appropriate the necessary funds and to cause the construction of a suitable bridge across the Missouri River upon the line of the said Washington Memorial Highway at said Fort Randall, in the State of South Dakota.

Resolved, That the secretary of the senate is hereby instructed to send copies of this concurrent resolution to each of the Senators and Representatives representing the State of South Dakota in the Congress of the United States.

Mr. STERLING presented a concurrent resolution of the Legislature of South Dakota, which was referred to the Committee on Commerce and ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

UNITED STATES OF AMERICA, State of South Dakota, ss:

I, Frank M. Rood, secretary of state, do hereby certify that the annexed, to wit, senate joint resolution No. 1 and house joint resolution No. 18, were duly passed by the 1915 session of the Legislature of the State of South Dakota, approved by the governor, and that the same are now in full force and effect.

In witness whereof I have hereunto set my hand and affixed the great seal of the State of South Dakota, at the city of Pierre, this 5th day of March, 1915.

[SEAL.]

FRANK M. ROOD,
Secretary of State.

A joint resolution (senate, No. 1) memoralizing Congress to take action looking to the comprehensive control and development of all streams.

Be it resolved by the Senate of the State of South Dakota (the House of Representatives concurring), That, in view of the vast annual destruction of life and property from floods, the menace due to the universal subsidence of ground waters, the rapid exhaustion of our coal measures and timber supplies, the extension of the use of electricity in commerce and domestic use, and for the general welfare, the Congress of the United States is respectfully petitioned to enact legislation authorizing the President to proceed at once to the control of all streams of the United States for the prevention of floods, the conservation of the ground waters, and the development of the water powers upon such streams, as well as the use of such streams for the irrigation of arid lands, upon such terms as will permit owners of lands benefited to ultimately repay the cost of such benefits.

House joint resolution 18.

A joint resolution memoralizing Congress to make appropriations for the improvement of navigation upon the upper Missouri River.

Be it resolved by the House of Representatives of the State of South Dakota (the Senate concurring), That the Congress of the United States is hereby memoralized and petitioned to provide that out of the moneys appropriated in the future by Congress for the improvement of navigation upon the Missouri River above the mouth of the Big Sioux River such part be expended as may be necessary to cut through the necks of land formed by bends in said river in central South Dakota, and known, commonly and geographically, as Big Bend and Little Bend, respectively, and thus cut off some 26 miles of unnecessary boat travel at Big Bend and some 19 miles of unnecessary boat travel at Little Bend, and thereby make it feasible through such work to develop hydroelectric power plants at such places either through State or private enterprise.

Mr. SMITH of Arizona. I present a petition of the Chamber of Commerce of Globe, Ariz., together with an estimate of engineers relative to the construction of a connecting roadway between the two Government bridges on the San Carlos Indian Reservation over the Gila and San Carlos Rivers in the State of Arizona. I ask that the memorial and accompanying letter addressed to my colleague and myself may be printed in the RECORD and referred to the Committee on Indian Affairs.

There being no objection, the letter and accompanying memorial were referred to the Committee on Indian Affairs and ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

GLOBE CHAMBER OF COMMERCE (INC.),
Globe, Ariz., February 11, 1915.

Hon. HENRY F. ASHURST, MARCUS A. SMITH, and CARL HAYDEN,
Washington, D. C.

GENTLEMEN: To me has been delegated by the Chamber of Commerce of Globe and a committee of citizens of Gila and Graham Counties the duty of placing before you reasons why Congress should make an appropriation of $40,000 for the construction of a connecting road between the two Government bridges on the San Carlos Indian Reservation, in this State, over the Gila and San Carlos Rivers.

I would call your attention to the fact that the bridges are now absolutely useless to the Indians for whose benefit they were constructed, for the reason that there is no road between them, no approaches have been constructed, nor have the two short pieces of road been constructed necessary to connect them with the main road across the reservation, and would ask that you cause the Indian appropriation bill to carry a sum sufficient for this purpose.

This body and the citizens of Gila and Graham Counties caused Mr. Julius Milton, one of the most capable engineers in the State, to survey this road and work and make estimates of the cost. Inclosed I hand you copy of his report showing cost, and under separate cover am forwarding you map and profile showing in detail what is necessary to complete this work.

In order that the Indians or the public may derive any benefit from the bridges it is absolutely necessary that this be done. As they now stand they are a total loss to the Government, Indians, and the public.

Without these bridges being placed in commission it is impossible for the Indians to ford the Gila and San Carlos Rivers during a number of months of each year, owing to quicksand and high water.

There are large tracts of land on the reservation, susceptible of irrigation and cultivation, which could be utilized by the Indians if these bridges could be used, and the Indians would cultivate them and become practically self-sustaining. One tract alone is estimated to contain about 4,000 acres. (See Mr. Charles's report advising the construction of the bridges.) The Indians have attempted to irrigate and cultivate these lands at a great loss to themselves and the Government because of the fact that they had to be abandoned and became an absolute loss, as the crops matured when the rivers were not fordable. If these pieces of road—less than 11 miles in length—and the approaches are built, so that the bridges can be used, the Indians will be able to irrigate and cultivate these lands, raise crops thereon, be in direct communication with the agency, and be in a position to market their crops and to have their grain ground at the mill located at the agency at San Carlos.

Placing these bridges in use will put the Indian agent in closer touch with the Indians than heretofore, enable him to control them more successfully, give them the benefit of school facilities, teach them habits of industry, bring them under civilizing influences, and thus make them self-sustaining.

The reservation contains vast areas of timberland upon which is a large amount of matured timber. If these bridges were made available, the matured timber would be more accessible, making it easier for the department to market the matured timber now ready for use. This matured timber will not increase in value because of future growth and it will be a benefit to the growing timber upon the reservation to remove the matured timber and market it, thus creating a large fund for the benefit of this tribe of Indians.

The bridges will also make the portion of the reservation containing the timber areas accessible in case of forest fires and place the Government, the Indians, and the community here in a position where they can properly protect the forest from fire.

Owing to the fact that these rivers can not be forded at times, the agency has been compelled in some instances to ship in its firewood by rail from a considerable distance. If these bridges were in use, the Indians would cut and haul, by their own labor, all firewood used at the agency, thus giving employment to a considerable number of Indians for several months each year. This is also true with respect to driving beef cattle to the agency and the obtaining of many supplies used at the agency.

It would place the Federal authorities in a position to properly manage and control the Indians in case of disturbances.

They would become of great benefit to the United States Government in the transportation of United States troops to and from the various forts in Arizona and particularly in case of serious outbreak on the Indian reservation.

At this point it is about 56 miles across the reservation and the bridges are situate just about midway between the boundaries.

Practically all of this road is in Graham County, and it is unable to stand the burden of constructing this piece of road, and Gila County can not expend money for this purpose outside its boundaries.

The State is expending large sums of money in the construction of roads and bridges and building up a great highway system, of which this road should become a part. In so doing the State is making the land on the reservation valuable, creating markets for the timber, mineral wealth, and other products of the reservation, and doing her part in the civilizing of the Indians, and it seems to us that the Indians and the Government should do their part, at least to the extent of building this small piece of road to make available two bridges they have already built. Citizens of the State grazing cattle on this reservation pay as a grazing tax into the Indian fund for these Indians an amount two or three times greater each year than the sum necessary to construct this piece of road.

A greater portion of this appropriation would go direct to the Indians as wages, as nearly all of the labor would be performed by the Indians.

These bridges would be of great benefit to the State of Arizona and to the counties of Gila and Graham in placing the mining district of Globe and Miami, having a population of 15,000 to 18,000 in direct connection by wagon road with the large farming community along the Gila River, in Graham County—the reservation lying between these two communities—thus affording the farmers in Graham County an opportunity to market their products in the mining camps at Globe and vicinity, and will give the Indians an additional market for their crops.

This piece of road will be a part of one of the popular transcontinental automobile routes, which will pass by the Roosevelt Dam and along the scenic highway between Roosevelt and Mesa, which it is proposed be established as a Government park or monument.

In every way this is one of the most desirable pieces of work the Government could construct.

It is hoped you will give this matter your immediate attention and have the appropriation made at this session of Congress.

Sincerely, yours,

J. J. KEEGAN.

GLOBE, ARIZ., December 29, 1914.

To whom it may concern:

Will herewith present my report as the engineer of location survey of a wagon road between San Carlos River road bridge and the bridge over Gila River within San Carlos Indian Reservation in Graham County, State of Arizona:

Line commences at a point on the San Carlos to Globe highway south of San Carlos River bridge. After crossing this bridge it traverses over the broken high mesa north of the river to the watershed between San Carlos and Gila River drainages; thence southeasterly along the old Indian trail to and up the north side of Gila River to the bridge and thence south to the San Corlos to Bowie wagon road. In elevation it is located at all points above high-water line in the reservoir of proposed San Carlos irrigation project.

Total length of line is 10.70 miles.

Maximum grade is 10 per cent.

MATERIALS.

With the exception of the ascend from San Carlos River bottom to the mesa, which material is limerock, and the descent from low mesa to Gila River bridge, which material is conglomerate rock, the material along the line is a sandy clay and loam. The drainage channels contain sand and gravel.

SIXTEEN-FOOT ROADBED.

As this proposed wagon road in time will be part of Arizona State highway system, I will suggest and recommend that a 16-foot roadbed will be decided on, and it is on such roadbed that I have based the cost estimate of construction.

DRAINAGE.

Along the easterly portion of the line, between mileposts 7 and 8, the water from the numerous side drainages, when it strikes the higher portion of Gila River bottom land has a tendency to spread out over the ground surface and does not cut or keep to any definite channel. This will necessitate excavation of channels and wing ditches to concentrate the water to drainage openings.

With exception at times of rainstorms a roadbed on this portion of the line laid close to ground surface will be sufficient and the bridge structures at stake 318, Triplet Wash, and at stakes 389 and 399 to be eliminated and substituted by surface crossings. A saving of $7,000 will therewith be made.

The drainage structures are of following design:

Concrete slab deck bridges with 15-foot spans.

Concrete reinforced box culverts.

Ingot iron-pipe culverts.

Cost estimate.

Grading—Total embankment, 43,200 yards:
Rock excavation, 1,400 yards, at $1.50	$2,100
Earth excavation, 3,000 yards, at 25 cents	750
Earth borrow, 38,800 yards, at 25 cents	9,700
Surface ditches, 300 yards, at 25 cents	75
Channel changes, 800 yards, at 25 cents	200
		$12,825
Drainage structures.
15 concrete slab deck bridges	19,544
12 concrete culverts	1,478
86 ingot iron culvert pipes	2,097
		23,119
Brush cutting		250
Four months engineering and superintendent		1,200
		37,394

By eliminating bridge structures at stakes 318, 389, and 399, substituting same by surface crossing, the total cost of construction will be $30,394.

Respectfully submitted.

JULIUS MILTON.

Mr. SMITH of Arizona presented a joint memorial of the Legislature of Arizona, which was referred to the Committee on Indian Affairs and ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

To the President and the Congress of the United States:

Your memorialists, the Second Legislature of the State of Arizona, in session convened respectfully represent that—

Whereas that portion of the White Mountain or San Carlos Indian Reservation, in the State of Arizona, lying south of the Salt or Black River contains an area far in excess of that necessary to sustain and maintain the Indians residing and maintained thereon; and

Whereas according to the United States census of 1910 there are only 1,860 Indians residing and being maintained on that portion of said reservation south of the said Salt or Black River; and

Whereas the present area of said reservation south of said Salt or Black River is more than 1,500,000 acres; and

Whereas the area of said reservation, if reduced to the boundaries hereinafter set forth, will be between 600,000 and 700,000 acres; and

Whereas all of the farming lands within said reservation, viz, those lying along the Gila and San Carlos Rivers, will remain within the hereinafter described boundaries and are sufficient to maintain several times the number of Indians now on said reservation; and

Whereas the Government sawmill operated for the benefit of these Indians, together with nearly all of the merchantable timber on said reservation, will be within the boundaries of such reservation if established in accordance with this memorial; and

Whereas that portion of said reservation asked to be thrown open is of no utility to said Indians, except for grazing purposes, and these Indians have a very limited number of cattle and horses, and such reservation after being reduced will contain a far greater acreage of grazing lands than these Indians can ever utilize; and

Whereas that portion of said reservation which would be thrown open contains many valuable mineral deposits and large areas of grazing lands, which would at once be occupied by American settlers and miners, and will maintain a large number of people, who will be able to improve and develop this vast area and give employment to both the white man and the Indian: Now, therefore, be it

Resolved by the House of Representatives and the Senate of the State of Arizona, That we call upon the President or the Congress of the United States to take such action as may be necessary to reduce the boundaries of said White Mountain or San Carlos Indian Reservation to the area hereinafter described and to throw open to settlement and mining location all that portion of said reservation lying south of Salt or Black River and outside of the following described boundaries, to wit:

Commencing at a point on the east boundary line of the White Mountain or San Carlos Indian Reservation 2 miles south of the Gila River, near Geronimo; thence westerly on a line south of and 2 miles distant from the said Gila River to a point 2 miles south and 2 miles west of the San Carlos Agency; thence northerly on a line west of and 2 miles distant from the said San Carlos River to a point 2 miles west and 2 miles north of the Talkali or Rice Indian School; thence northerly to a point 2 miles west and 2 miles north of the Government sawmill, on said reservation; thence east to the one hundred and tenth meridian west longitude; thence southwesterly to a point in the top of the Gila Mountain Range at the acute angle in the east boundary line of said reservation due north from the place of beginning; thence south to the place of beginning; and be it further

Resolved, That a copy of this resolution be forwarded to the President of the United States; and be it further

Resolved, That a copy of this resolution be forwarded to our Representatives in Congress, the Hon. HENRY F. ASHURST, the Hon. MARCUS A. SMITH, and the Hon. CARL HAYDEN.

Passed the house May 27, 1915, by vote—22 ayes, 7 noes, 2 absent, 4 excused.

Mr. SMITH of Arizona presented a joint memorial of the Legislature of Arizona, which was referred to the Committee on Indian Affairs and ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

To the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled:

Your memorialist, the Second Legislature of the State of Arizona, respectfully represents that the several Indian reservations in the State of Arizona now embrace large areas of mineral land, which under present regulations are not open to location as mineral claims and are valueless as tillable or agricultural land; and

Whereas the opening of these mineral lands in these aforesaid reservations to entry as mineral claims by prospectors, miners, and legitimate mining companies will hasten the development of the State and at the same time give employment to the Indians on big reservations in road building and other departments of work and make them more self-supporting; and

Whereas the opening of these claims to mining will develop water in many heretofore arid portions of the State and improve the value of said lands for grazing, to which they are now allotted: Therefore be it

Resolved by the Senate and House of Representatives of the State of Arizona, That the Congress of the United States is hereby petitioned and urged to enact such legislation as may be necessary to open to entry and location the mineral lands embraced within the confines of these aforesaid Indian reservations by bona fide prospectors and miners, subject to the same regulations governing mineral lands on other public domain: Provided, however, That this petition shall not be so construed as to permit any person, company, or corporation to enter in or upon large tracts of land in these reservations for any purpose other than mining, as hereinbefore stated: And provided further, That no land other than mineral lands, as defined in the mineral laws of the United States pertaining thereto, shall be included within the provisions of this petition: And be it further

Resolved, That a copy of this memorial and these resolutions be forwarded to the President of the United States, the President of the Senate, the Speaker of the House of Representatives, the honorable Secretary of the Interior, and the Representatives of Arizona in Congress; and that our Representatives in Congress be, and they are hereby, requested to do all in their power to accomplish the enactment of such legislation.

Mr. SMITH of Arizona presented a joint memorial of the Legislature of Arizona, which was referred to the Committee on Public Lands and ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

To the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled:

Your memorialist, the Second Legislature of the State of Arizona, in session convened, respectfully represents—

Whereas the boundary line dividing the United States of America and the Republic of Mexico is marked by monuments placed several miles apart, with no barrier or other distinguishing mark indicating said line; and

Whereas the natural lines of travel and stock drifts run back and forward across said line; and

Whereas detachments of the various warring factions and guerilla bands of Mexico often invade American territory, and professional thieves and smugglers prey upon the stock of Arizona settlers almost at will; and

Whereas large sums are expended annually by the United States of America and the State of Arizona in the prevention of diseases of live stock, and great precautions are taken to prevent the introduction of "Texas-fever ticks," known to exist in Mexico, and infected stock may be turned loose on the open range in Mexico and will roam at will across the line, and in drift weather often penetrate far into the interior, thereby endangering the live stock of the whole country; and the nature of the country is such that an effective patrol is impracticable with the line open at all points; and as evidence of the foregoing there now exist countless well-beaten trails and wagon roads leading in and out of Mexico far from ports of entry; and

Whereas Arizona settlers have erected fences along said border with no legal right to same, and have been unable to maintain said fences; and

Whereas the Government is receiving liberal fees through its forest-reserve department for grazing, timber, and wood on large areas of land adjacent to the line, and a good barbed-wire fence could be placed along the line for a small cost; and

Whereas all law-abiding citizens residing near the border would heartily cooperate in the upkeep of such a fence, and such a fence would enable the customs, sanitary, immigration, and peace officers both of the United States and of the State of Arizona to enforce the laws with facility and thoroughness, an impossibility under the present conditions, and that the lives and property of the people residing along the border would be greatly protected, and they might proceed to the pursuit of their industries rather than spend their time on constant guard; and

Whereas the State of Arizona is now represented in Congress by the Hon. MARCUS A. SMITH, Hon. HENRY F. ASHURST, and the Hon. CARL HAYDEN: Now, therefore, be it

Resolved by the House of Representatives and the Senate of the State of Arizona, That we most earnestly request and urge that the necessary legislative action be taken to build a fence along the border line through the length of Arizona and at such other places where like conditions prevail,

And we will ever pray.

Mr. SMITH of Arizona presented a joint memorial of the Legislature of Arizona, which was referred to the Committee on Public Lands and ordered to be printed in the RECORD as follows:

STATE OF ARIZONA,
OFFICE OF THE SECRETARY.

UNITED STATES OF AMERICA, State of Arizona, ss:

I, Sidney P. Osborn, secretary of state, do hereby certify that the within is a true and complete transcript of senate joint memorial No. 1 of the Second Legislature of the State of Arizona, entitled "Memorial to the Congress of the United States of America, petitioning the United States Government to appropriate $300,000 for suppressing carnivorous wild animals destructive to live stock in the public-land States of the West," as is shown by the original on file in this department.

Senate joint memorial 1.

Memorial to the Congress of the United States of America, petitioning the United States Government to appropriate $300,000 for suppressing carnivorous wild animals destructive to live stock in the public-land States of the West.

To the honorable Senate and House of Representatives of the Congress of the United States:

Your memorialists, the governor and Legislature of the State of Arizona, respectfully represent that—

Whereas in the Western States, known as the public-land States, the losses of live stock and poultry due to the attacks of coyotes, wolves, wildcats, cougars, and bears amount to not less than $18,000,000 annually; and

Whereas in these western public-land States the State, county, and stockmen do now and have for years paid large bounties and used other means to bring about the eradication of these carnivorous wild animals; and

Whereas in these western public-land States there is now withdrawn from settlement in some form or other approximately 225,000,000 acres of Federal land, which land constitutes the principal breeding ground and refuge of these carnivorous wild animals and enables them to increase their numbers in spite of the efforts made by State, county, and stockmen to exterminate them: Now, therefore, be it

Resolved, That the Legislature of the State of Arizona does hereby most respectfully urge and request that Congress immediately appropriate the sum of $300,000 to be used by the United States Department of Agriculture for the destruction of coyotes, wolves, wildcats, cougars, and bears in these western public-land States in order that the meat supply of the Nation may be increased and the proper development of the West encouraged.

Resolved further, That the secretary of state is hereby instructed to forward a copy of this memorial and this resolution to the President of the Senate of the United States, the Speaker of the House of Representatives, and to the Representatives of Arizona in Congress, and that our Representatives in Congress be, and they are hereby, requested to do all in their power to accomplish the enactment of the legislation herein asked for.

I, Sidney P. Osborn, secretary of state, do hereby certify that the within is a true and complete transcript of senate joint memorial No. 5 of the Second Legislature of the State of Arizona relating to the Baca float grant No. 3, and addressed to the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, as is shown by the original on file in this department.

Senate joint memorial 5.

To the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled:

Your memorialists, the Second Legislature of the State of Arizona, respectfully represent—

Whereas in the year 1863, or thereabout, the Congress of the United States of America did grant to the heirs of one Luis Maria Baca, deceased, certain large tracts of land, to be located upon that public domain anywhere within the area of the Territory of New Mexico, of which Territory the present State of Arizona was then a part; and

Whereas one of the said tracts, embracing 100,000 acres of land, was located within the area that is embraced now within the county of Santa Cruz, State of Arizona, and is known as Baca float grant No. 3; and

Whereas no effort was made upon the part of the claimants of said Baca float grant No. 3 to complete and perfect their title to said land grant, and the Interior Department always maintained that it was invalid, owing to the failure of the claimants to comply with the provisions of the act of Congress granting the same; and

Whereas when after about 40 years said claimants applied for confirmation of said grant the surveyor general of Arizona, to whom the matter had been referred, recommended rejection of said Baca float grant No. 3 on the ground of noncompliance with the provisions of the act of Congress aforesaid; and, upon appeal, the Commissioner of the General Land Office and the Secretary of the Interior did so reject said Baca float grant No. 3 for the reasons set forth hereinbefore; and

Whereas the Interior Department of the United States, through its general and local land offices, did accept filings of homestead entries upon lands embraced within the area of said Baca float grant No. 3, and the entrymen who made said entries located upon said lands in good faith, lived there many years, cultivating and improving them in accordance with law; and

Whereas by a recent decision of the Supreme Court of the United States said Baca float grant No. 3 has been declared valid, and the homestead entrymen, described hereinbefore, are subject to ejectment and dispossession of lands they have held and cultivated from 25 to 30 years, to their great loss and damage: Therefore be it

Resolved by the Senate of the Second Legislature of the State of Arizona (the House of Representatives concurring therein), That the Congress of the United States of America be, and is hereby, memorialized to enact such measure of relief to said homestead entrymen occupying lands upon the Baca float grant No. 3 whereby they may be granted within the State of Arizona other lands upon the public domain in lieu of those they have occupied heretofore, and that they may be permitted to make final proof by showing the necessary residence and improvement of the lands they have occupied heretofore within the area of Baca float grant No. 3; be it further

Resolved, That the Senators and Representative from Arizona in the Congress of the United States of America are hereby requested to use their best efforts toward the enactment of the necessary legislation for the relief of the homestead entrymen who are affected by the circumstances hereinbefore set forth.

Resolved further, That the secretary of state is hereby instructed to forward certified copies of this memorial to each of the Arizona delegation in Congress.

Passed by the house March 9, 1915.

Passed by the senate, amended, March 10, 1915.

Mr. SMITH of Arizona presented a joint memorial of the Legislature of Arizona, which was referred to the Committee on Public Lands and ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

Senate joint memorial.

To the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled:

Your memorialists, the Second Legislature of the State of Arizona, in session convened, respectfully represent—

Whereas the Grand Canyon of the Colorado is one of the most wonderful sights in the world and is annually attracting and receiving the attention of an increasing number of the citizens of the United States and tourists; and

Whereas there is a good road extending from Grand Canyon Station to the Hermit Trail, which road is known as the Hermit Rim Road, and is adapted to the use of automobiles and motor-driven vehicles; and

Whereas by an order of the honorable Secretary of Agriculture, which order your memorialists are informed was issued at the instigation of a railway company, the said road, 7½ miles long, is closed to automobiles or motor-driven vehicles and can be used only by horse-drawn vehicles; and

Whereas the said railway company maintains a livery equipment for the purpose of hauling tourists over this road at $3 each, and such order is a distinct annoyance to the traveling and local automobilists: Now, therefore, be it

Resolved, That the Congress of the United States be requested to investigate the facts herein set forth, and if same are found to be correct to have the said order rescinded.

Resolved, That a copy of this memorial be sent to the President of the Senate, the Speaker of the House of Representatives, the honorable Secretary of Agriculture, and to the Members of Congress from this State, and the latter are requested to use every honorable means to secure favorable action hereon.

Mr. SMITH of Arizona presented a joint memorial of the Legislature of Arizona, which was referred to the Committee on Public Lands and ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

Joint memorial for supplying water on the Indian reservation near Parker, Ariz., and opening unallotted lands to settlement.

To the Senate and House of Representatives of the Congress of the United States of America in Congress assembled:

Your memorialists, the Second Legislature of the State of Arizona in regular session convened, respectfully represent—

That during the years of 1908 and 1909 the then Indian agent of the Colorado River Indian Reservation, under authority of the Department of the Interior, granted numerous permits to persons to settle upon certain lots in the Parker town site, Yuma County, Ariz.

That an appraisement was made of the lots of said town site under the direction of the Department of the Interior during the year 1909, and the persons occupying lots under permits granted by the department were given a preference right to purchase said lots.

That about 90 days thereafter a second appraisement of all lots in the Parker town site, including those occupied by permittees, was ordered by the Department of the Interior, and the valuation was raised from 300 to 600 per cent above the figures set forth in the first appraisement. That this raise in appraised values was made because of the fact that the town site of Parker is within a short distance of the allotted Indian land on the Colorado River Indian Reservation, the surplus area of which was planned by the Department of the Interior to be opened to purchase and settlement at an early date.

That the said permittees occupying lots upon the Parker town site have paid to the United States under the valuations of town lots under the second appraisement the sum of $24,562.

That on May 10, 1910, the authorities of the United States held an auction sale of lots within the Parker town site and $56,698 worth of said lots were sold to residents of Parker and other investors. That $37,623 have been paid to the United States for lots purchased at said auction sale and there is still owing to the United States upon said sales the sum of $19,075.

That immediately prior to the auction sale of town-site lots at Parker Congress passed an act as follows:

"For the construction of a pumping plant to be used for irrigation purposes on the Colorado River Reservation, together with the necessary canals and laterals, for the utilization of water in connection therewith, for the purpose of securing an appropriation of water for the irrigation of approximately 150,000 acres of land, $50,000 to be reimbursed from the sale of the surplus lands of the reservation."

That the above act was in effect a representation by the United States that the surplus land of the Colorado River Indian Reservation was soon to be opened to settlement and entry by bona fide settlers. That the lots put up for sale at said auction had a prospective value only upon the assumption that said surplus lands would be opened to settlement at an early date. That the enormous increase in the valuation of lots in the Parker town site by the second appraisement above referred to was only justified by the carrying out of the implied promise contained in the above act, that the surplus lands of the Colorado River Indian Reservation would be open to settlement.

That the town site of Parker is on a barren desert, on land having an intrinsic value of less than $1 an acre.

That whatever added value it may have arises from the fact that it is adjacent to the bottom lands of the Colorado River Indian Reservation in which the surplus lands above referred to lie, and unless said lands are opened to settlement and entry the town site of Parker is worth little or no more than any other desert land.

That the residents of Parker and numerous other residents of the State of Arizona interested therein, who were induced to purchase lots in the Parker town site by reason of the implied promise of the United States above set forth, to open the reservation lands to entry, have repeatedly petitioned Congress and the Department of the Interior for the opening of said surplus lands.

That said purchasers of lots in Parker have further evidenced their reliance upon said implied promise of the United States to open said lands by investing large sums of money in buildings and improvements in said town of Parker, all of which will be worthless unless the said lands are opened to settlement.

That the allotments of land to the Indians belonging on said reservation have been approved by the Department of the Interior, and the surplus land, amounting to approximately 125,000 acres, which might be open to entry, is segregated.

That to the best knowledge and belief of your memorialists there exists a sufficient flow of underground water for the irrigation and reclamation of the surplus lands.

That the surplus Indian lands above described are highly desirable as prospective farms and hundreds of energetic and enterprising citizens of this State alone are awaiting the opportunity to secure tracts of lands for the purpose of making their homes thereon. That to the best knowledge and belief of your memorialists a large amount of the delay in opening the surplus lands of said reservation to settlement in accordance with the said implied promise of the United States has been caused by unnecessary entanglements of official red tape in the various bureaus at Washington having charge of reclamation work and Indian affairs.

That another reason which has been assigned for the delay in opening said lands for settlement is the fact that people having large cattle interests have leased certain of the lands involved and have been exerting their influence to delay the opening of said lands for settlement: Therefore be it

Resolved by the Senate and the House of Representatives of the Legislature of the State of Arizona, That the Congress of the United States be, and it is hereby, urged to enact any legislation which may be necessary for the opening for settlement of said lands, to the end that the implied promise of the United States made to the settlers and purchasers of lots within the Parker town site, to the effect that Indian lands within the Indian reservation would be opened for settlement, be carried out.

Resolved further, That a copy of this memorial and these resolutions be forwarded to the President of the United States, the President of the Senate, the Speaker of the House of Representatives, the Secretary of the Interior, and to the Representatives of Arizona in Congress; and that our Representatives in Congress be, and they are hereby, requested to do all in their power to accomplish the enactment of such legislation.

Passed the house March 4, 1915, by a vote of 28 ayes, 0 noes, 7 absent, 0 excused.

Mr. SMITH of Michigan. I desire to present a petition of the ornamental leaded stained glass manufacturers of the city of Detroit, which I ask may be read and referred to the Committee on Finance.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from Michigan asks unanimous consent for the reading of a petition. Unless there is objection, such will be the order. The Chair hears none, and the Secretary will read.

The memorial was read and referred to the Committee on Finance, as follows:

DETROIT, MICH., November 16, 1915.

Senator WILLIAM ALDEN SMITH,
Washington, D. C.

DEAR SIR: We, the undersigned petitioners and ornamental leaded stained-glass manufacturers of the city of Detroit and State of Michigan, respectfully present to you the injustices of the "Underwood bill."

Ours is one of the industries that has been most seriously affected by this bill, with results so far-reaching as to jeopardize legitimate profits of manufacturers and imperil a decent standard of living of thousands of workmen.

We therefore most earnestly beg your assistance for a relief from this injustice by means of a protective-tariff law, based on fair-mindedness and national business solidarity.

Trusting, with your cooperation, we may bring about the proper adjustment of the present unfortunate condition, we remain,

Very respectfully, yours,
